RUHR FACES STATE OF SIEGE

HARDING HAPPY AT REACTION TO HIS ADDRESSES

Tour Inevitably Is a "1924 Campaign."

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Yellowstone National Park, Wyo., June 30.—[Special.]—President Harding came here today for a brief period of recreation and rest from his tour of the west and middle west to get in touch with the people on his way to Alaska. He certainly has been getting in touch with the people. He has been on the first week and a half of the trip more than thirty speeches [illegible], and he has thoroughly enjoyed personal contact with the people.

Mrs. Harding has participated in all the parades, as of the trip with the people in the cities, the towns and hamlets, in the wheat fields, irrigation farms and at the mines.

Plays with the Babies.

The President has talked intimately with folks everywhere, has held the babies, chatted with the boys and girls, and complimented their mothers and fathers. Mrs. Harding has done the same.

Yesterday at Butte, the President held his train and walked from the platform to the handstand to congratulate the leader for playing "Alice," and asking that it be played again. As the last notes were dying away the President stepped to the rear platform and shook hands with [illegible] in this city to bring the President good politically. Certainly they are making him feel good personally.

Despite the President's continued insistence that he is not campaigning, it becomes more and more apparent as the tour progresses that he is involuntarily, perhaps, conducting the best kind of a campaign trip, particularly for [illegible] part of the country [illegible] Presidents.

People [illegible] here do not often see President [illegible] the United States, and few ever [illegible] Mr. Harding. Even the miner Re[illegible]om leaders out this way never saw him and in many cities that have been visited the common remark has been, "Well, Harding is a regular fellow."

Perhaps involuntarily, too, as has been noted before since the tour began, President Harding has been laying the foundation for the Republican platform of 1924. Thus far he has declared himself on many important issues. How he will fare with the country on these declarations remains to be seen. In this great west and in the middle west there is evidence of general unrest, but not so much unrest as there was a year ago. There has been discerned, too, considerable interest in the President's position on many subjects.

Flexible in His Platforms.

Thus far the President has declared himself as follows:

Reiterated his insistence for American adoption of the world court, but with a willingness for it to be reorganized and divorced from the league of nations, and the first declaration that the league as an issue is "as dead as slavery."

Declared against nationalization of the railroads, and proposed as a solution of the transportation problem the compulsory consolidation of the railroads into group systems.

Proclaim that the government must continue its legislative effort to emancipate the American farmer.

Insisted that the Volstead act must be rigidly enforced; that it never will be repealed, and that, if violations do not abate, more expensive federal machinery must be employed to enforce the law. Appealed also to the states to cooperate in rigid enforcement of the law.

Told to Cut Down Taxes.

Sounded a note of warning to state and municipal governments to economize in expenditures to aid in reducing the tax burden.

Urged cooperative buying organizations among consumers to help reduce the cost of living.

Decried capital, which he charged had fought his aid in defeating and weakening organized labor, and declared that American wages must not be reduced.

There, in a nutshell, are the outstanding features of the President's speeches. That they must inevitably serve as a guide to the resolutions committee, is, as they say out here, "sure as shootin'."

There is not much national politics being discussed just now in the west.

THE RHYME OF THE RESTLESS ROVER

Being a Poem First Printed in The Tribune and Now Slightly Altered Apropos of the Author's Vacation Plans, Which, However, Can Hardly Extend as Far as This

[Reprinted by Request.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

I sit at my desk in the sizzling heat
Of a blistering summer day,
And think of the places I'd like to go
If I only could get away.

It might take more than a couple of weeks
For such an extensive tour,
For some of the places are far away
And connections might be poor.

I'd leave a call for 7 o'clock;
I'd sleep with my clothing on;
I'd do my packing the night before,
And start in the cool of dawn.

I'd then go aboard of a clipper ship
Engaged in the China trade,
And we'd clear the bar by the morning star,
As soon as the anchor's weighed.

I'd tell the skipper the course to set,
He'd pipe all hands aloft,
And away we'd go for Borneo,
Lunching at Tranby Croft,

Perhaps I'd dock at the Inchcape Rock—
Perhaps at the Farallones—
We'd raise Luzon in the rosy dawn,
While the lazy trade wind drones.

I'd dance to the tune of the rigadoon,
And if the canvas fills
We'd eat our tiffin at Annandale,
In the shade of the Simla Hills.

The Persian Gardens at Ispahan,
The Reef of Norman's Woe,
Sierra Leone, and San Antone
Are places where I would go.

I'd steer a canoe in the Great Karroo,
And rollick in Bantry Bay;
By the golden moon, from old Rangoon,
I'd journey to Mandalay.

And Malabar Hill is not too far,
If you go by the Andaman Isles;
I'd sniff the breeze in the Celebes,
Where the Indian Ocean smiles.

Van Diemen's Land and Samarcand,
St. Albans and Singapore—
You may easily reach on Rockaway Beach
From Bingen to Bangalore.

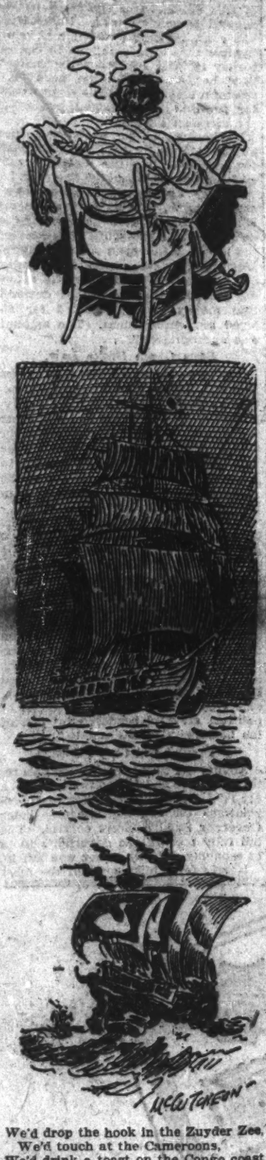
For it's always fair off Finisterre,
On the way to the Barbados;
And it's not too far to Kandahar,
If a steady monsoon blows.

Through creamy seas and sparkling skies
I'd follow the Spanish Main;
I'd touch Stamboul and Stanley Pool,
If it didn't begin to rain.

It's never too late to pull your freight
For Rio and Argentine;
With a fav'ring breeze off the Hebrides
You can dock at the Engadine.

The Barbary coast I like the most,
But the Ivory coast is fine;
I'd shed my cares in the Aberdares
And dine on the Brandywine.

We'd heave the lead at Diamond Head,
And if the holding's good,
We'd visit the shore "to look them o'er,"
As all good sailors should.



We'd drop the hook in the Zuyder Zee,
We'd touch at the Cameroons,
We'd drink a toast on the Congo coast
To the Inniskillen dragoons.

Are places that I should surely go
To escape the tourist rush.

The Friendly Isles and the Tongaland,
Bagdad and the River Plate,
Cockburn Land and the Rio Grande,
Gaboon and the Golden Gate.

The Orkney Isles and Lockerbie street,
Peshawar and Mozambique,
While Far Cathay and Hudson's Bay
I'd view from the mizzen peak.

Grundelwald and Brandenburg,
Savanna and Ootacamund,
Connemara and London Town,
Bombay and the Shanghai Bund.

Zanzibar and the Chilkoot Pass,
Glengarry and Broken Hill,
The Balyshannon and County Clare,
Calgary and Bougainville.

I'd stop in Lapland—it sounds to me
Like a friendly sort of place;
I'd study the moon with Lorna Doone—
Dining at Chevy Chase.

Majorca, Malacca, and Malvern Hill,
Manila and Fuji San,
The County Tyrone and the Arctic Zone,
Carnarvon and Turkestan.

The Isle of Pines and the Dardanelles,
Kowloon and the Caspian sea,
Cawnpore, Cracow, and the Khyber Pass,
Crimea and Kimberley.

We'd follow the tide on the Hongkong side—
I'd go out on the Bubbling Well Road,
I'd go chop-chop to a curio shop
Which I know in the Queen's High Road.

I'd look at the glass in Limoon Pass,
And if the weather is fine
We'll steer for Delhi and Bonnie Dundee
By way of the River Rhine.

Delagoa, Samoa, and Shenandoah
Are names that please the ear;
Victoria Nyanza strikes my fancy,
And so does Monastir.

Ping Yang, Hankow, and Hyderabad,
Lucknow and the Fair Touraine;
The Caribbean and Far Kashgar
Are places I'd visit again.

Wind River, the Tana, the Yangtze-Kiang,
And the Plains of Abraham;
Siberia, India, Amazon, Oude,
Benares and Bethlehem.

Antilles, Azores, Loch Lomond, and Rome,
Indiana and Tennessee,
The River Rhone and the Frigid Zone
Are spots that appeal to me.

I'd finish the cruise at Newport News,
I'd wish no longer to roam;
I'd settle down for a couple of weeks
Contentedly at home.

Now, such a trip, I honestly think,
Would benefit any man;
He'd put more force in his work, of course,
And have a beautiful tan.

THOUSANDS OF ALIENS IN WILD RUSH ENTER U. S.

New York, July 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Italian liner Presidente Wilson from Trieste with 776 aliens aboard was the first of the waiting fleet of immigrant carriers to cross the imaginary line at quarantine at 12:02 this morning, and gain admittance to the United States under the new quotas of the restricted immigration law.

The French steamer Canada from Piraeus, Greece, with 949 immigrants aboard, was second at 12:03, and the Danish steamship Polonia from Libau, with 741, third.

Other ships entered in the following order: King Alexander, British, from Piraeus, with 1,328 immigrants; the France, French, from Havre, 876; Stockholm, Swedish, from Gothenburg, 1,001; Nieuw Amsterdam, Dutch, Rotterdam, 899; President Adams, United States, London, 245; Washington, United States, Constantinople, 131, and the Aquitania, British, Southampton, 813.

A score more liners are racing across the Atlantic with other thousands of hopeful immigrants who must return to the Near East and Asia, after spending the savings of a life time on the five thousand mile trip. Each of two ships which arrived today from Greece had more than enough passengers to fill the quota for that country.

Ellis Island can house only 1,600 persons, and several thousand waiting passengers will have to remain on ships until their turn comes to be examined.

Real estate news will be found on pages 13 and 14 of part 2.

BRUSSELS, June 30.—Belgium began drastic reprisals in the Ruhr today for a bomb explosion on a train filled with troops returning home on leave; it killed nine soldiers and a Belgian sentry along the tracks. Two Germans were also killed and several wounded.

Of forty Belgian soldiers who were wounded, at least four are expected to die. The explosion occurred at 1:30 this morning on a train en route from Duisburg to Crefeld while crossing the Hochfeld bridge across the Rhine. The violence of the explosion tore up the rails and blocked the line for twelve hours.

The bomb had been placed in the washroom of the car before it left Duisburg. The bridge sentinel killed was standing twenty yards away. He was hit on the head by a heavy piece of pipe.

Penalties for Duisburg.

Gen. Rucquoy, the Belgian military commander, immediately took the following sanctions in Duisburg:

Arrested twenty prominent citizens.

Closed all restaurants, theaters and other public establishments.

Stopped street cars and other means of transportation.

Ordered a curfew of from 10 o'clock at night until 4 o'clock in the morning.

Refused to deliver traveling permits.

Baron Rollin Jacquemyne, the Belgian high commissioner in the Rhineland, arrived at Duisburg this afternoon to discuss with Gen. Rucquoy further penalties against the Duisburg population.

The soldiers were sleeping at the time of the explosion.

$310,000,000 Surplus Feat of Government

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—The government closed the fiscal year today with a surplus of approximately $310,000,000, according to a statement issued by Gen. H. M. Lord, budget director. This is an even more favorable showing than was estimated two weeks ago when President Harding announced that the fiscal year would end with a balance of ordinary receipts over expenditures of approximately $200,000,000.

Reduction Is a Huge Figure.

"The reduction in the total expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, as compared with the total expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, will be approximately $265,000,000," Gen. Lord said.

"One year ago, the estimated receipts and expenditures indicated a deficit of $832,000,000 for the fiscal [illegible] 1923. The difference of $1,133,[illegible] between this estimated deficit [illegible],000,000 and the present estimated surplus of $310,000,000 is accounted for by an increase in receipts of $767,000,000 and a reduction in the estimated total expenditures of $366,000,000.

Reason for Difference.

"The difference in receipts was occasioned by an increase of $213,000,000 in customs receipts, $423,000,000 in internal revenue receipts, and $131,000,000 in miscellaneous receipts.

"The difference of $366,000,000 in total estimated expenditures was the result of a reduction of $151,000,000 in general expenditures and $45,000,000 in interest on the public debt, and a net decrease of $170,000,000 in capital outlays, operations in special accounts, refunds of tax receipts and retirement of the public debt required to be made from ordinary receipts."

POLICEMEN SAVE MORON FROM MOB AT PISTOL POINT

Ex-Convict Is Held for Attacking Children.

Three policemen with drawn revolvers and their backs against a wall at Halsted street and North avenue last night held off a crowd of more than 200 excited citizens who attempted to take away from them a prisoner who had criminally attacked two children within a few hours.

The prisoner, Alfred Hughes, an ex-convict who recently completed a seven years' sentence in Joliet penitentiary for a similar offense, confessed his guilt in one of the two cases and evidence was found linking him with the other.

The victims of the moron were Rose Dusick, 3 years old, and Jeanette Ruber, 8.

Rose had been missing from her home at 1403 North Halsted street since early in the afternoon and the police were searching the north side for her when at 9:30 last night her mother, Mrs. Helen Dusick, heard moans coming from the basement. She ran downstairs and found the child in a delirious condition, her clothes torn from her body. She was taken to the Hudson avenue station, where medical attention was given.

Second Child Attacked.

In the meantime Frank Ruber of 1528 North Halsted street had reported his daughter, Jeanette, missing. The child had joined a crowd which witnessed a small fire at Halsted street and North avenue during the afternoon. Hughes induced her to go with him to his room at 1587 Clybourn avenue, where he held her a prisoner from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 at night.

It was some time later that she staggered home, crying, her hands, arms, and body lacerated. News of the two attacks spread through the neighborhood and citizens organized themselves into viligance committees to search for the moron. A large crowd had gathered in the vicinity of Clybourn avenue and Halsted street when Detective Sergeants William Beehan and Richard Gill and Policeman Frank Blandell noticed the peculiar actions of Hughes, who was seen following another child.

Admits Luring Girl to Room.

They stopped Hughes and he admitted he had lured the Ruber child to his home. The word quickly spread. Men surged forward and attempted to drag the prisoner from the policemen.

"Lynch him! Kill him!" they cried.

Several blows were struck. The policemen backed their prisoner against a wall and drew their guns.

"This man is under arrest!" they shouted. "We'll shoot the first man who makes a break!"

A crowd surged after the patrol wagon and stood in front of the station while Hughes was being examined. The Dusick girl was brought in and screamed and fainted when she viewed him.

U. S. JURY FINDS 31 GUILTY OF BUILDING PLOT

11 Lumber Men, 15 Union Chiefs Hit.

Forty-one of the sixty-eight millwork concerns, lumber dealers, contractors, and carpenters on trial before Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe as members of the "lumber ring" which controlled the Chicago market and added between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 to building costs annually, were found guilty of violating the Sherman anti-trust law by a jury late yesterday afternoon.

The cases against the other defendants had been dismissed by Judge Cliffe before they were given to the jury. Those found guilty include ten lumber and millwork concerns, eleven officials of those concerns, five carpenter contractors, and fifteen officials and members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

The maximum penalty under the statutes is a $5,000 fine or a year in federal prison or both.

Five Contractors Dismissed.

The cases against the five contractors were dismissed by Judge Cliffe after the verdict had been returned on motion by the federal attorneys when the court granted them a new trial. Motions for new trials were made by counsel for the lumber concerns and the union and Judge Cliffe set July 14 as the date on which he will hear arguments.

The millwork concerns and their officials convicted follow:

Philip Rinn company and George F. Rinn.
California Manufacturing company and Frank Bartuska.
Commercial Sash and Door company and G. C. Delworth.
Melrose Mill company and Louis C. Harding.
William Morris & Sons company and Harry F. Morris.
Nolting & Wolf Manufacturing company and Arthur Root.
Chicago Sash, Door, and Blind Manufacturing company and Edward Dierssen.
Standard Sash and Door company.
Union Interior Finish company and Fred Werkmeister and T. E. Reynolds.
Von Platen & Dick company and H. D. Traeger and James A. Dick.

Union Men Found Guilty.

The union members convicted are:

William F. Brims.	Thomas F. Flynn.
Harry Jensen.	William C. White.
Stanley Musialski.	Daniel J. Ryan.
B. J. L. Wittman.	Joseph Veltman.
Anton Sommers.	Thomas Church.
James Smith.	W. G. (Bill) Schardt.
Joseph B. Fox.	Charles Wright.
F. C. Bromler.

Wright and Schardt both figured in indictments returned by the special building grand jury which followed the investigation by the Dailey commission. Jensen is president and Brims a former president of the carpenters' district council.

The five officers and members of the Carpenter Contractors' Association of Chicago who were found guilty but whose cases were dismissed later are D. H. Doyle, A. C. Wehrwein, Frank E. Doherty, William J. Scown and Frank M. Stresenreuter.

Granted New Trials.

As soon as the verdict was read Attorney William B. McKinley, counsel for the contractors, made a motion for a new trial. No opposing argument was offered by Special Assistant District Attorney Thomas Howe and Judge Cliffe granted the motion.

Mr. Howe then moved that the cases against the five be dismissed. It is believed the government did not oppose a new trial for the contractors for the reason that it was largely on the testimony of Doyle that the other convictions were obtained.

The trial was the outgrowth of the famous "article 3" of the joint agreement between the millwork manufacturers, the contractors and the union which forbade the use of nonunion millwork in the Chicago district, thus freezing out of the local market the products of manufacturers in Oshkosh, Milwaukee, Fond du Lac, Rock Island, Muscatine, Dubuque, Wausau and other lumber centers. "Article 3" was operative from June 1, 1918, to May 31, 1921, when the federal grand jury and the Dailey commission launched their investigations.

Heavy Cost to Builders.

Robert E. Finnegan, Chicago representative of the Paine Lumber company of Oshkosh, testified during the trial that because of this "freeze out" the business of his concern transacted here had dropped from $500,000 to $21,000 a year.

Mr. Doyle, president of the contractors' association, testified the Chicago manufacturers operating union plants had offered the contractors a 15 per cent discount on all materials if they would enter into the agreement bering nonunion made millwork from Chicago. Practically all of the concerns outside the city, it was shown, are operated by nonunion labor. Other contractors testified to having been "fined" by the union business agents in cases where they had used materials purchased outside the city. These fines ran into thousands of dollars.

Lay Blame on Unions.

The manufacturers and the contractors blamed their acquiescence to the agreement on the union, saying strikes were threatened unless they complied. The union advanced the altruistic motive of trying to better working conditions in the factories of Wisconsin and other parts of Illinois. It was shown that certain business agents charged stipulated fees for placing the union stamp on imported materials.

The trial began on June 11. Besides Mr. Howe, the government was represented by James A. Fowler and Roger Shale, special assistants to Attorney General Daugherty and experts on anti-trust cases. The defendants were represented by Attorneys Albert Fink, Fletcher Dobyns, Robert W. Childs, William C. Assay, Wallace Streeter, Robert W. Duan, and Archibald Cattell.

Twenty-seven firms and individuals were discharged on Friday by Judge Cliffe on motion of their counsel on the grounds the evidence did not connect them with the conspiracy.

The jury went out at 4:30 o'clock and was back with its verdict within an hour and a half.

100 SLAIN WHEN RUSS FACTIONS WAR IN COREA

SHANGHAI, June 30.—[By The Associated Press.]—A shipload of Russian refugees arrived today at Woosung, at the mouth of the Yangtze river, bringing the story of a bloody battle fought last week at Gensan, Corea, between rival Russian factions, who had fled from Vladivostok. One general and 100 of the rank and file fell in the fight.

Trouble between rival factions at Gensan is said to have developed over the sale of large stocks of arms and ammunition which the refugees carried off with them from Vladivostok. In the resulting battle two former leaders of Gen. Gregorio Semenoff's anti-bolshevik troops, Gen. Liebidieff and Gen. Glieboff, headed the opposing sides. Glieboff was among those killed.

Seven hundred members of the Gensan colony arrived at Woosung today on the steamer Eldorado, but were refused permission to land by the Chinese authorities.

AUSTRIAN BISHOP SCORES U. S. FOR BIRTH CONTROL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, June 30.—"Two million children were prevented by American women from entering the world last year," Bishop Sigismund Waitz, the former spiritual teacher of Emperor Charles, told a big clerical and monarchistic gathering here today.

Bishop Waitz said that 500,000 children are suppressed annually in France and that there were 28,500 denied birth in Germany last year. He asserted that European women are following Americans in this example and that this corruption of morals was dangerous to civilization.

The meeting was presided over by Cardinal Piffl and was attended by Chancellor Seipel and other important persons.

SEES EXTINCTION OF QUAIL, PRAIRIE HEN IN TEN YEARS

New York, June 30.—Extinction within a decade or two of the quail and the pinnated grouse or prairie chicken, unless radical protective measures are taken by the various states, was predicted today by Dr. William T. Hornady, director of the New York zoo and trustee of the wild life protection fund, in confirming reports that the heath hen already had become practically extinct.

Recent investigations by Prof. A. O. Gross of Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me., disclosed only twenty-nine of the heath hen family in the entire United States and all of these were males. As soon as these last survivors die, the species will be extinct.

Nova Scotia Troop Train to Strike Zone Near Wreck

SYDNEY, N. S., June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—An attempt to wreck the railway train which early today brought troops from Halifax to prevent a recurrence of last night's rioting among striking employes of the British Empire Steel corporation, was discovered a half hour before the train arrived with 250 soldiers.

HUNTER, BLACK GET BLAME FOR HERRIN'S SHAME

Committee Also Scores County's Citizens.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—Col. Samuel N. Hunter, personnel officer of the Illinois National guard, today was held responsible for the Herrin massacre of June, 1922.

The blame was laid at Hunter's door by the legislative committee appointed to investigate the massacre and events leading up to it.

The committee also held Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black responsible.

The report was signed by five of the seven members of the special house committee, headed by Representative Frank A. McCarthy [Rep., Kane.]

Those signing the report with the chairman were: Representatives Flagg [Rep., Madison], Phillips [Rep., Jefferson], Rice [Dem., Fulton], and Igoe [Dem., Chicago.]

Chicagoan Won't Sign.

Mr. Pierce [Rep., Boone], another committee member, is not in the capital. Mr. Curran [Rep., Chicago], a Small follower, refused to sign the report.

The whole citizenry of Williamson county is condemned in vigorous language.

"The spirit of a majority of people in Williamson county was in sympathy with the actions of the mob," the report says.

Delos Duty, Williamson county state's attorney, was the only county official to receive a word of commendation.

Authorities Held Unworthy.

"Melvin Thaxton, then Williamson county sheriff and now county treasurer, and his deputies, John Shaffer and S. D. Storm, now county clerk, are absolutely irresponsible, incompetent, and unqualified to hold any office of trust or confidence in that or any other county in Illinois," the report continues.

"They were criminally negligent in the discharge of their official duties.

"The committee finds that the action of W. J. Lester in undertaking to run a mine in this highly unionized territory by the use of armed guards to protect the nonunion workmen was one of the chief causes of the massacre: that his plan to operate this mine under the protection of armed guards when a strike was in progress was most foolhardy and unwise. We condemn in every particular his actions in this regard."

Small Keeps Col. Hunter.

Governor Small, who was on trial at Waukegan at the time, scarcely is mentioned in the report.

"George Sutton, secretary to the governor, testified that he told Black he ought to go down there. The report says that the situation was of such a serious nature that 'Black ought to be on the ground himself.' The testimony produced shows no action taken whatever to discipline or discharge Hunter for neglect of duty or making an alleged false report."

Representative Curran had a minority report prepared by the governor's office but failed to present it before the legislature adjourned sine die. He protested vigorously against admission of the majority report to the records, raising the question of a quorum. As no action was taken by the house on the report, Speaker Shanahan permitted the report to go into the records under the parliamentary rules. Mr. Curran insisted that the records show that he raised objections.

HELD FOR CONFIDENCE GAME.

Charged with operating a confidence game, Le Roy A. Styles, 28 years old, 900 Lakeside place, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $2,000 yesterday.

warranted action on the part of certain members of the Illinois senate" in preventing passage of the bill which would have extended the investigation beyond July 1.

"By their acts they have cast reflection on the people of Illinois, and by their passive action approved and acquiesced in the action of the fugitive witnesses in departing from the state to wait until the legislature adjourned," the report says.

Those Who Fled Inquiry.

The fugitives include Deputy Sheriff Laymen, Policeman Jake Jones and Police Magistrate Rix of Herrin.

W. J. Lester, owner of the mine, did not appear before the committee.

"Every effort was made to induce Mr. Lester, who was out of the state, to appear before the committee, but his attorney refused to produce him," the committee reports.

"The committee finds that the action of W. J. Lester in undertaking to run a mine in this highly unionized territory by the use of armed guards to protect the nonunion workmen was one of the chief causes of the massacre: that his plan to operate this mine under the protection of armed guards when a strike was in progress was most foolhardy and unwise. We condemn in every particular his actions in this regard."

As no action was taken by the house on the report, Speaker Shanahan permitted the report to go into the records under the parliamentary rules. Mr. Curran insisted that the records show that he raised objections.

Up to Adjutant General.

"The committee believes that the responsibility of the situation rested with the adjutant general; that if he was satisfied to take the judgment of one of his inferior officers instead of being upon the ground himself he therefore assumed that responsibility and the actions of that officer and is chargeable with any misjudgment or misconduct on the part of such inferior officer.

"We believe that if Gen. Black had gone to the scene when the seriousness of it first came to his attention, that he would have called troops and averted the massacre."

Col. Hunter, a native of the southern Illinois coal fields, was in Williamson county during the day the county was festering with the riot spirit over operation of the Lester strip mine by nonunion labor.

"He was in close touch with the sheriff's office," the report continues; "knew that he had only two or three deputies available if anything occurred; that the sheriff was in sympathy with the union miners and would do nothing to prevent trouble.

Knew Clash Was Coming.

"He was advised by the sheriff and others that troops would not be called in any event and that seemed to be the prevailing sentiment in the entire county. From the facts reported by Col. Hunter, there was sure to be a clash at the Lester mine and it was only a question of hours as to when it would occur.

"He knew of the looting of the stores, the killing of the union miners and many other facts from which the average person would know that there would be bloodshed.

"The committee finds that the action taken by him was entirely out of keeping with the facts and circumstances. No sufficient excuse is shown in the record and none can be shown for his failure to call for troops to handle the situation. We believe that he was absolutely incompetent, unreliable and unworthy to perform the duties assigned to him.

Unfit to Hold Office.

"We believe he is not qualified to hold his present position in the National guard, and especially a position in the adjutant general's office where he might be called upon to exercise his judgment under like or similar circumstances."

Hugh Willis, head of the Williamson County Miner's union, is held directly responsible for the murders. Willis is one of the fugitive witnesses sought by the committee. Several persons wanted as witnesses fled the state when the legislative inquiry began.

The committee "deplores the un-

WAR BRINGS LOSS OF $106,024,543 TO SINGER COMPANY

New York, June 30.—[Special.]—Evidence that the Singer Manufacturing company lost $106,024,543 in Europe during the war, of which $84,302,231 was lost in Russia by the nationalization of the Singer company's plants by the soviet government was filed in the Supreme court today in a suit affecting the estate of Frederick G. Bourne, president of the Singer company, who died at Oakdale, Long Island, March 9, 1919.

Commodore Bourne left his residuary estate of 100,214 shares to seven children, Arthur, Alfred S., and George S. Bourne, sons, and May B. Strasburger, Marion C. Elbert, Florence B. Hard, and Marjorie Bourne, daughters.

The trustees filed suit for permission to account for the period from Commodore Bourne's death to Oct. 31, 1921, and also asked for a determination of certain questions involved to make a valuation of the Singer stock from which seven trusts, each containing 14,314 shares, were set up.

2,500 WHIPPINGS IN OKLAHOMA IN ONE YEAR REPORTED

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Explanation of why Gov. Walton is determined to put an end to mob outrages in Oklahoma and is ready to use military force, if necessary, was made today by the executive's secretary, Aldrich Blake, who declared "whipping parties" during the past year have numbered at least 2,500.

Blake said the estimate of the total whippings was based upon reports received by the governor, some from his official representatives and others from victims.

Disclaiming any intention to leave the impression that cases of mob violence have been the work of "any one organization," the governor's secretary added that they could not be traced "directly" to one organization he believed most of them could be traced "indirectly."

GOVERNOR AGAIN JABS VETO PEN INTO BRUNDAGE

Bitter Tirade Features His Final Message.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—Gov. Small took a final jab with his veto pen at Attorney General Brundage when the fifty-third general assembly adjourned its regular session sine die tonight.

Salaries of four assistant attorneys general in Mr. Brundage's Chicago office were slashed from the state officers' appropriation bill by the governor. In the veto message Gov. Small directed a vitriolic attack, not only against the attorney general, but also Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Jackson], leader of the senate "vigilantes" and a potential candidate for governor against Small in next April's primaries.

Senator Glenn was assailed for drawing a salary from the attorney general as a special prosecutor in the Herrin murder trials. Payment of money to Mr. Glenn for past services was a violation of the constitution, the governor declared.

The vetoed salaries amount to $16,500 a year.

Criticizes Brundage Spending.

"Since the time that over $500,000 was eliminated from the attorney general's appropriation bill and the veto of this amount was sustained by the general assembly, more information has come into my possession convincing me that appropriations to the attorney general are, wherever that officer has an opportunity, used in a wasteful and extravagant manner and for partisan and personal purposes," the message said.

"Whenever he has a chance to use public moneys to build up a partisan political machine, the attorney general loses no opportunity to do so.

"Early during the session representations were made to the general assembly that $75,000 was necessary to enable him to prosecute violations of the law in Williamson county. Newspaper mouthpieces of the sordid political faction represented by the attorney general were loud in their demand that money be appropriated for alleged law enforcement. The amount was appropriated."

Says Glenn Broke Law.

The governor's message then states that Mr. Glenn violated the constitution by accepting $12,500 for his services at Herrin, but that he spent most of his time in Springfield vilifying the Small administration, and earning the title "Vigilante" by his "vigilance in promoting his own finances out of the state treasury." The message continued:

"This is but one instance of the flagrant disregard of the constitution and the laws, which marks the expenditure of appropriations by the attorney general whenever the opportunity is offered to him. In this case, under the guise of prosecuting lawsuits, none of which he won, the attorney general received money from the state treasury and instead of expending it in the manner in which the legislature intended, he brazenly used the same, contrary to the constitution, and very clearly for the payment of political services rendered by one of his henchmen in the senate."

Doesn't Cut Own Funds.

Among the twenty-six signed bills returned to the legislature today was the $17,798,569 omnibus bill carrying appropriations for the departments under Governor Small's direct control. The bill fully met all the governor's ideas of economy. Every penny was left in.

Nearly forty bills, some of the most important measures passed in the closing days of the session, remain in the governor's hands tonight. His ten day limit for consideration of bills does not expire on some of the measures until July 6, as they were delivered to him late in the recess which began June 19.

Five other veto messages were turned in by the governor. They included a bill by Senator Buck [Rep., Warren] eliminating the names of presidential electors from ballots in future presidential elections in Illinois.

The new fish and game codes were signed and become a law tomorrow.

"Medical" Cut Is Signed.

The new medical practice act and the anti-ticket scalping bill also were signed. The latter prohibits the sale of theatre or other amusement tickets at prices higher than the box office figures. The bill was introduced by Senator Denvir [Dem., Chicago] senate minority leader.

A ninety-nine year lease on the whole or any part of the Illinois and Michigan canal, Illinois' famous "tadpole ditch," was approved by the governor today.

Among the more important measures signed was the bill by Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill [Rep., Du Page] granting Illinois widows one-third of their husband's property outright instead of the former dower interest.

Can Still Veto Bills.

All bills approved by the governor after midnight tonight will remain ineffective until July 1, 1924. He has an opportunity to veto any of the measures still in his hands.

These include the bill removing the one year restriction against remarriage after divorce, the bills to jail speeders and give policemen authority to accept bonds from arrested motorists; Senator Buck's bill, creating a commission to make a two year study of the state's tax problems; the prohibition enforcement amendment, which gives the attorney general one half of the fines collected from liquor law violators prosecuted by the attorney general's office, and the other half to the state's attorney of the county in which the case originates; and the bill requiring the auditor of public accounts to publish state pay rolls.

Decisions Block Small from Filling New Court Positions

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—Gov. Small is without authority to hand-pick eight new judges of the Cook county Superior court, it was learned today. If he does name them they can be prevented from taking the bench and drawing salaries. This means that the Superior court will continue to function with the twenty, instead of twenty-eight judges, until after the November judicial election. Judges elected next November will receive the $3,000 salary boost granted by the legislature.

Competent lawyers have discovered Supreme court decisions which prevent the governor from handing the eight new judgeships to some of his Cook county favorites.

Ruling in Sangamon County.

Supreme court opinions back as far as 1829 will block the governor's plans, it was said today, but the case in which the most definite ruling was made grew out of proceedings in Sangamon county in 1900.

The federal census of 1900 gave Sangamon county a population of 70,000. This entitled the county to a Probate court separate from the County court, creating a new judgeship and clerkship.

Steps were taken to call a special election to fill these jobs immediately. This move was attacked in the courts in proceedings instituted against the county clerk, Charles E. Opel, to prevent him from calling the special election. The Supreme court ruled that no vacancy existed until the next regular election, which was in 1922. In the ruling the court outlined the causes which bring about a vacancy in public office.

They were: Death of incumbent; resignation, insanity of incumbent, removal of residence from the state, conviction of infamous crime, removal from office by any cause, refusal or neglect of an elected official to take the oath of office or give bond prescribed by law, a decision of a competen tribunal declaring an election void.

Don't Fit Case Here.

None of these fit the Superior court situation, it is pointed out. The intent of the law is that the Superior court shall be increased from twenty to twenty-eight judges at the next election.

Representative Senesal [Rep., Chicago], chairman of the house appropriations committee and a candidate for Superior court judge next November, is one of the lawyers who hold that the governor is without authority to make temporary appointments. Speaker Shanahan has received the same advice from his legal counselors.

Even should the appointments be made and nobody took the trouble to prevent the appointees from taking the bench no appropriation has been made for the pay of the new judges until after election. On top of this any decision which a temporarily appointed judge would make could be tossed out of court as worthless, lawyers say.

GIRL'S KIDNAPERS GIVEN TEN YEAR TERMS IN PRISON

Sentences of from ten to twenty years in the Jeffersonville, Ind., penitentiary were imposed yesterday by Judge Martin Smith at Crown Point upon Otto Maccabee and James Carr, 21, of Muncie, Ind., when they pleaded guilty to a charge of holding up Friday an automobile in which Miss Genevieve Sprague and M. A. Trussell of Dalton Ill., were driving near the state line.

Miss Sprague, who did not appear in court yesterday, was slightly wounded in the back when accidentally shot by pursuing officers after Maccabee and Carr fled in the automobile in which the girl still sat. Trussell, who was bound and gagged by the bandits, managed to free himself and gave the alarm which resulted in the capture.

LUNDIN TO TAKE STAND THIS WEEK IN GRAFT TRIAL

Thompson, Too, to Testify for Defense.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Fred Lundin will have his inning this week.

For nine weeks the ex-boss of the Thompson organization has sat in Judge Charles A. McDonald's courtroom, studying under an apparently careless demeanor, every angle of the web of criminal conspiracy which the state's attorney, General Brundage, have built around him. As a student of this complex evidence and the human equations involved, a rare political psychologist and a direct actionist, he will step out about Thursday to demolish the state's structure. The "boys" will be in the back seats to cheer him on.

Lundin has learned a lot since this case started, he confided to a reporter one day. He has even figured out a new basis for a political campaign, although he will not divulge the great secret yet. It will have to do with reform. He has regarded it all as a real show. He greets every one, even his prosecutors, in an affable manner, taking it all as part of the "game" which he plays with the relish that other men devote to golf or bridge or ballads.

Thompson Also to Testify.

On the witness stand Lundin will tell his own version of the interviews he had with Hart Hanson and Jacob M. Loeb in the "little city hall" in the Sherman house, during the golden days when the boys were crowding to the trough.

William Hale Thompson, the man who picked for mayor long before any one else dreamed of that possibility, is also scheduled to take the witness stand.

With these two men lies the basis of the case which the state has presented. Although Thompson is not a defendant, Thompson must deny he gave to Lundin the job of selecting "the right kind of fellows" for the school board. Lundin's responsibility for this board must be negatived first in order to kick out the underpinnings of the prosecution.

Thos Davis and Severinghaus.

Edwin S. Davis and Albert H. Severinghaus—Davis, "the good little fellow" of Hanson's testimony, and Severinghaus the "Uncle Al" of the northwest side—must then get on the stand and pepper away at the barrier to their liberty. There are many things for them to explain, for with them lay the responsibility for most of the business deals on which there has been testimony.

The case, as it finally developed, must stand or fall with Lundin. Until the last week he appeared to be a permanent offshore light in the picture, but testimony has now implicated him directly in two ways—insurance and steel doors—in the business of the school board.

His Doors in Schools.

Through nephew Blaine Thelin he was financially interested in steel doors which crept into school buildings—crept in, the defense says, against his wish, for he had refused to do business with public institutions in Chicago.

Through Virtus Rohm, a nephew by marriage, Lundin is tangled up with school board insurance, although he refused to take profits from this kind of business. To every charge proven there is a denial and counter proof that leaves the question clear out in the open. The jury has a tough task in unraveling it all.

A conspiracy under the law does not have to show that some one was bribed or that money was passed or that great amounts were stolen. The state has not proven, for instance, that a million dollars was stolen from the public school funds.

But it has shown by a series of facts and circumstances, testified to, that an understanding existed among the group that composed the defendants to obtain all the school board business the traffic would bear.

FEAR LIFE APART

Separation after fifty years of life together threatens Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stone, 750 East 37th street. She is 72; he is four years her senior. Doctors have said that the aged man's mind is enfeebled and have urged that he be placed in a county home. Last week the case came before Judge Jarecki and Mrs. Stone's plea won a continuance while efforts are being made to find a place for the couple where they may be cared for together. TRAGEDY RIDES 165 MILES WITH 19 LITTLE KIDS

Schenectady, N. Y., June 30.—One infant is dead and another is in a critical condition in a local hospital, in consequence, charity officials say, of an all night ride of 165 miles with seventeen other children in a hired automobile from Brooklyn. The children, seven of them 5 months old or under, were brought here by Mrs. Anna Siewers, the party arriving today after a trip of twelve hours.

At first the woman said the children were her own, but finally admitted, officials said, that five were hers and she brought the other fourteen from her home in Brooklyn. She said she came to look at farms with a view to a purchase.

Mrs. Siewers said she had been warned by the health authorities that she had to seek larger quarters than she had had in her Brooklyn apartment.

Most of the babies, Mrs. Siewers said, are children of parents who have had unfortunate marriages. She said the mothers gave the babies to her because their fathers were disabled in the war, and the money they got from the government helped pay her.

REYNOLDS WOULD AID EUROPE WITH $1,500,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 30.—George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial bank of Chicago, who is trying to work out a scheme to send $1,500,000,000 to Europe without in any sense making a loan to Europe, left for London today en route to America. He will sail in three weeks.

"I think that the whole international and economic situation would be vastly improved by the return of this gold to Europe, because the burden is in our hands," said Mr. Reynolds, who has just finished a successful cure at Vichy.

He believes that the recovery of Europe from the effects of the war have been much slower than generally believed.

U. S. ADVENTURER LEADS CHINA'S LATEST REVOLT

PEKING, June 30.—[By United Press.]—Like a soldier of fortune come to life from a page of O. Henry, a former United States army captain from Atlanta, Ga., has chartered a Russian ship, bought a lot of Japanese rifles, hired a Chinese army, and is proceeding to cause no end of concern to the Peking government. The American authorities here are endeavoring to curb the adventurous officer's activities.

Capt. L. D. Kearney, late of the U. S. A., now a commissioned commander in the navy of the "Confederate States of China," is the moving figure in what appears to be the fomentation of another of this country's many revolutions.

Poison whisky was believed by Brighton Park police to be responsible for the death of Myron Doropiewicz, 49 years old, found dead yesterday in his room at 3815 South Spaulding avenue.

MANILA IS UNDER WATER AS STORM SWEEPS ISLAND

MANILA, June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Manila, gripped by a typhoon which began raging last night, was flooded today. Many streets were under water.

At the same time this dispatch was filed the water was knee deep in many thoroughfares, and there was a foot and a half of water in the Manila palace, the residence of the governor general. The rainfall in twenty-four hours was 92 millimeters. Canoes were being used for transportation through the streets.

Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood, who has been visiting the provinces, was expected back today, but was held up by the terrific storm.

Cuts Off Naval Wireless.

San Francisco, June 30.—All the naval radio control lines near Manila were put out of commission by the typhoon which struck the Philippines' capital today, according to a report made at Twelfth Naval District headquarters.

Tavern Burns on Peak of Mt. Tamalpais, California

Mill Valley, Cal., June 30.—The Mount Tamalpais Tavern, one of the best known tourist resorts of the west, caught fire late today and a half hour later seemed doomed. Special trains with firemen and apparatus were hurried to the summit.

BROKERAGE FIRM SHORT $235,000, U. S. COURT TOLD

Receivership Asked for M. L. Meyer & Co.

M. L. Meyer & Co., for several years charged by Stock Exchange and Board of Trade members with being "the biggest bucket shop in the city," but heretofore never held legally accountable, was named yesterday in a receivership petition filed before Federal Judge George A. Carpenter by four customers who claimed that the firm's liabilities are $250,000 and its assets only $15,000.

The petition also alleges that the firm received money while insolvent and that since May 15 had been concealing money with intent to defraud customers and that it permitted Max L. Meyer, the president, to remove company funds.

Those Who Signed Petitions.

The petitioners and the amount of their claims were, M. A. Munson, $7,518.84; George Tomes, 12 East Delaware, $1,450; John A. Schraff, $2,826.31; Harold E. Morton, 5560 Quincy street, $13,000.

The petitioners claimed that the money was paid in for stock in the Gibbson-Howell company, Inc., and the Chicago Steel Wheel company.

Lewis Jacobson, attorney for the plaintiffs, was instructed by Judge Carpenter to prepare an inventory of the firm and report tomorrow, at which time, it was indicated, a receiver will be appointed.

M. L. Meyer & Co. have been under surveillance of state and board of trade investigators for some time. Examination of their books revealed no specific instances of bucketing, so far as could be told through a cursory inspection, but an unusual method of handling deals was uncovered.

How It Did Business.

It was found that whenever a customer ordered stock, an entry was placed opposite in the books showing that the stock was purchased from M. L. Meyer. Thus, state officials claim, the firm did most of its trading with its its own president, who, it is said, owns a controlling interest in the company.

Thus the law that every sale entered in the books must be offset by an entry showing where the stock was purchased was complied with. Recent reports are that the company planned to quit business within a few days.

Stock Has No Market Value.

Gibbson-Howell, Inc., is a stock little heard of in Chicago. Steel Wheel, however, has been sold in tremendous quantities throughout the city. The manufacturing company has a small plant at Findlay, O., where about ten men now are employed. Reputable brokerage firms said last night that the stock had virtually no market value now.

Lewis E. Pennish, attorney for Meyer, said the brokerage firm was solvent and would meet all of its obligations. It is not a member of any recognized exchange.

O'GARA HOME IS LOOTED; $3,000 IN GEMS TAKEN

Mrs. Weyerhaeuser Victim of Thief.

Police last night were holding one man and seeking another in connection with the robbery of $3,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry from the home of Thomas J. O'Gara, 1350 N. State street, wealthy former head of the O'Gara Coal company. The man held is a former butler in the O'Gara home; the man sought an acquaintance of the former. Both are colored.

MRS. FREDERICK WEYERHAEUSER. [Raymore Photo.]

According to the police, Mr. O'Gara's daughter, Viviah, now Mrs. Frederick Weyerhaeuser, wife of one of America's richest young men, returned recently from Europe and went to visit with her parents. She was reported to have brought with her from across the water a valuable collection of jewels; and the police believe that it was this the burglar was seeking.

Valuables in Vault.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Gara, however, stated yesterday that these valuables were safe in a deposit box when the thief ransacked their apartment, and that he succeeded in finding only a diamond bracelet and other articles which were loose in Mrs. O'Gara's rooms.

Early last Thursday, while all the members of the O'Gara family were out, the butler with another young colored man who had been doing odd jobs about the house started for the loop. Before reaching the loop, the butler told the police, the other man left him, saying he was "going looking for work."

Reappears at O'Gara Home.

Not long afterward this young Negro reappeared at the O'Gara apartment. He told a laundress who was working in the kitchen he had been sent back to "do some cleaning" and started with a vacuum cleaner. The laundress went to the basement, and when she returned the man was missing and the apartment had been ransacked.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Gara told the police, despite the fact he is being held, they did not believe their butler involved.

"He has been a faithful servant," Mrs. O'Gara said. "I believe he may have mentioned my daughter's jewels to this other man, but I do not believe he had anything to do with the robbery."

DIPLOMATS POINT TO WET FILIPINOS AND LAUGH AT U.S

Can't See 12 Mile Limit in Circumstances.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—Interest in the controversy between America and foreign governments over the question of prohibition enforcement centered today upon the fact, which foreign diplomats here say will be extremely difficult for Washington to explain, that while the United States is insisting that foreign ships shall not come within the three mile limit with liquor under seal, the Philippine islands, an American possession, are "wide open" with not even a pretense of prohibition.

Diplomats consider this a gross inconsistancy, asserting that while the Hughes proposal for extension of the zone of search to twelve miles amounted practically to an extension of prohibition to the high seas, no attempt is being made to apply the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead law to the Philippines.

But These Cannot Drink.

Also, while the Philippines have not prohibition now, and never have had, the Volstead law is in full effect in Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, where considerable sums are spent for its enforcement.

Legal experts of the government admitted today the inconsistency and also that considerable pressure has been brought to bear upon the government by the "drys" to extend prohibition to the Philippines.

These experts insist, however, that the federal government is powerless under the present circumstances to force prohibition on the Philippines, since the organic act of Aug. 29, 1916, the basic law of the islands, provides that the statutory laws of the United States thereafter enacted "shall not apply to the Philippines except when they specifically so provide or when it is so provided in this act."

Terrible Blunder of Drys.

Mr. Volstead failed to provide specifically in his law that its terms should be applicable to the Philippines, and the Filipinos have steadfastly refused to pass a prohibition law of their own.

There is no question about the applicability of the eighteenth amendment to the Philippines. The eighteenth amendment, however, is not self executing, and while the intent of the amendment may well have been that prohibition should extend to the Philippines, in the absence of any act of execution it has never been so extended.

The question of Hawaii and the Virgin islands is taken care of in the act supplemental to the national prohibition act, approved Nov. 23, 1921.

Mellon Denies Alcoholic Revelry on the Majestic

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 30.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon denied today the story published in London of scenes of alcoholic revelry aboard his ship, the Majestic. Mr. Mellon said non-alcoholic champagne was auctioned off for charity, but he saw no real booze. This statement was borne out by a census of the other passengers, who declared they had in vain offered fancy prices for drink. A few had private stocks. The Majestic was the first ship to make a round trip under the new conditions.

The romance of Robert H. McElroy Jr., oil broker and clubman, and his wife, the former Miss Ruth Van Ness, was broken several days ago, it became known yesterday, when Mrs. McElroy filed suit for divorce.

U. S. SHIP BOARD MAN JUMPS ON BRITISH, CLAIM

LONDON, June 30.—[United Press.]—Speeches attacking Great Britain "in terms which are unfit to print," were delivered at gatherings aboard the shipping board liner Leviathan during her trial trip, according to a dispatch from the New York correspondent of the London Daily Mail, published today.

W. F. GIBBS. [©, Harris & Ewing]

Lasker (then chairman of the shipping board), who was the official host, listened with every appearance of approval to a tirade of abuse of everything British from W. F. Gibbs, naval architect, who reconditioned the Leviathan," the dispatch said.

The Daily Mail quoted Gibbs as saying that he had learned "all the crooked tricks" of the British steamship owners, and that America was now going to sweep the British off the sea."

Charges Ship Board Propaganda.

The dispatch follows:

"NEW YORK.—Men who have the cause of Anglo-American friendship deeply at heart are convinced that the time has arrived when the attention of both nations should forcibly be called to the anti-British propaganda carried on by the United States shipping board. They feel that the motives of the American government in first inviting and then strictly enforcing the mandate of the Supreme court against the right of foreign ships to carry liquor are bound to be seriously misconstrued abroad unless a halt is speedily called to anti-British speeches with which officers of the shipping board are flooding the country.

"The American newspapers have observed discreet silence regarding the scenes which characterized last week's trial trip of the Leviathan. Yet, the fact remains that speeches with which the trip was celebrated degenerated into what is described to me as 'a disgusting exhibition of anti-British bias.'

"At an hour when health and customs authorities were seizing stores of liquor on British and other foreign ships in New York harbor, thereby, in the words of A. D. Lasker, chairman of the shipping board, relieving American ships from competitive disabilities of the prohibition laws, some four hundred guests of the American government were entertained at a cinema show at which speeches were delivered attacking the British in terms which are unfit to print.

Says Lasker Gave Approval.

"Lasker, who was the official host, listened with every appearance of approval to the tirade of abuse of everything British from W. F. Gibbs, naval architect, who reconditioned the Leviathan. Gibbs is quoted by his listeners as declaring in objugatory terms that he had learned while in the service of British steamship owners all their crooked tricks, and that America was now in a position to apply them to her own advantage and with the aid of the Leviathan to sweep the British off the seas.

"Apparently none of the American government officials, senators and other public men who were present made any open protest against the intemperate language used, though many of them in private conversation subsequently expressed their feeling of humiliation that such a spectacle should have been permitted on so highly official occasion aboard a government owned vessel.

"'If we had been on the eve of war,' one of them observed, 'the speeches could not have been more virulent.'

"All sensible Americans deeply deplore the idea displayed by officials of the shipping board."

LASKER DENIES ATTACK.

A. D. Lasker, former chairman of the U. S. shipping board, flatly denied yesterday that he listened while W. F. Gibbs, naval architect, delivered a speech abusing England.

"I never heard Mr. Gibbs make any such remarks as set forth in the London Daily Mail dispatch," Mr. Lasker said. "This whole thing is news to me."

Misinterpreted, Gibbs Says.

New York, June 30.—[By United Press.]—W. F. Gibbs, naval architect and designer of the reconditioned liner Leviathan, declared today he had not meant to malign British shipping interest with remarks he made while on the vessel's trial trip.

"Any such construction of my words is a misinterpretation," Mr. Gibbs said.

"America's Finest Men's Wear Store"

C&C A New Order of Things

FAR-REACHING

JOURNEYING back to January—if memory serves you well—you will recall our "Dynamite and Printer's Ink" announcement, which was the first definite step towards the inauguration of our "new merchandising plan."

In this widely discussed piece of commercial literature—charged with sincerity, and breathing defiance to the old guard—we laid considerable stress upon the fact that our new plan was "far-reaching." Indeed, that it would revolutionize the clothing industry; that its influence would be felt throughout the length and breadth of the land.

And so, hooking up past predictions with present realities, it gives us pleasure to publicly acknowledge the compliment paid us by many of the leading clothing firms of the nation, who have already adopted our "new plan," and who think as we think, and dream as we dream of higher ideals.

This is an era of Progress—an age of Service. Abundant proof of this is afforded by the first six months gruelling test of the "new plan" in our own business. Raising the standard of the clothing industry has enabled us to offer the finest clothes in America. And the public has shown its appreciation by trebling our clothing business.

At the outset of the "new order of things" not all, but many patterns were exclusive, and it is a notable fact that men who had not worn ready-to-wear clothes for years came to avail themselves of these "exclusive things." In other words, the "exclusive things" were snapped up quickly, thus proving that the big, outstanding feature of our new plan—"exclusiveness"—is precisely what the well dressed man desires.

Time has solved intricate manufacturing problems for us, and with the ides of September practically every garment in the Capper & Capper stores will be "exclusive." This will be not at all difficult, as one of the inviolable rules of this institution is to carry no goods over from season to season.

Far-reaching, indeed. As the silent, speedy Rolls-Royce maintains a position of leadership in the automobile world, so Capper & Capper "heart and soul" clothes dominate the clothing industry. Progress simply will not be denied.

"Outdoor" air—cooled to 70° and renewed every 3 minutes—makes this restaurant truly comfortable

There's all the difference in the World between a dining-place, like the North American, which is comfortably cool and one which is merely cool. One can be cool and still be mighty uncomfortable.

This great difference is due to the fact that the North American Restaurant is properly equipped with a complete ventilating and cooling system—a system not at all like the so-called "cooling-plants" which merely pull cold [and usually damp] air from underground tunnels or basements. Rooms so cooled may be cool enough but they are sure to feel "sticky" or "clammy."

Here at the North American every bit of the air is fresh. It is taken from the top of our building [several hundred feet above the street level] then forced into a big concrete chamber where thousands of tiny streams of cold water, sprayed through it, remove every particle of dust and dirt, cooling it in the process. Then the air is dried. So the air you breathe here is not only fresh and cool but is also DRY—doing away entirely with that "clammy" feeling you notice in so many places. And every bit of the air in the North American is completely changed every three minutes.

And because you serve yourself here, you can get the finest assortment of "summer" dishes in all Chicago for about half what "Service" Restaurants must charge. For instance:

Combination Salad: Made of fresh, crisp vegetables. The portion is usually ample for two, and without extra charge we include French, Thousand Island or Mayonnaise Dressing 30c

Cold Lamb Tongue: Tender and sweet, a big portion with potato salad 40c

Cold Premium Ham: Boiled in our own kitchen. Not the rolled, stringtied, ready boiled type which is usually served. A big portion with potato salad 45c

Assorted Cold Meats: A big platter full of the finest cold meats obtainable anywhere, with a generous portion of potato salad 50c

Breakfast Specialties

Honey Waffles: Cooked to your order with 3 strips of bacon, butter and pure maple sap or honey . . 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon . 30c

This is one restaurant where children are welcome!

'REBEL' STRIKERS TO BE BACK ON JOB TOMORROW

Normal Conditions Likely by End of Week.

Caisson diggers, who, through an unauthorized strike called late last week, have succeeded in halting millions of dollars' worth of Chicago construction in its first stage, will return to work tomorrow morning, Joseph Moreschi, president of the Hod Carriers and Common Laborers' district council, announced last night.

Accompanied by twenty business agents and officials of the fourteen unions of the council, Moreschi visited several construction projects yesterday and received the assurance of the caisson men that they would go back to work.

The first job visited was the Burnham building project at Randolph and La Salle streets. Several caisson diggers were ready to go to work, but Saturday being a half holiday it was decided to wait until tomorrow. The union officials next visited the Stadium in Grant park, the Merchants Bank building and the Tribune tower. At each place they were informed that caisson men and laborers would be on the job tomorrow morning.

Believes Trouble at End.

The activities of the "outlaw" strike leaders lessened yesterday. No strikes of building laborers were called. It was generally conceded yesterday that the peak of the "outlaw" strike program had been reached and that the end of the week would see normal conditions restored in the building industry.

Matthew Burke and James Connelly, heads of the laborers' union in which most of the striking caisson men hold membership, reported that the caisson men had returned to work on the C. B. & Q. job at Harrison and Clinton streets. They said the majority of caisson men would return to work tomorrow and that 95 per cent of them would be back by the end of the next week.

Edward McChrystal, business agent of the United Building Laborers' union, was released on a $100 bond yesterday after he and twenty-five of his followers in the "outlaw" strike were arrested when they attempted to use rough tactics in forcing men from a construction job at 2611 South Dearborn street.

Rioting Charges Dropped.

Charges of intimidation and slugging were dropped against McChrystal. He will be tried on a disorderly charge. Fifteen of the arrested strikers were granted jury trials. They were released on bonds of $400 each.

At a meeting of about seventy-five of his "outlaws" at 777 West Adams street last night McChrystal urged his hearers to exchange their "blue cards for red ones." Only about eight or ten of these present complied. McChrystal declared his arrest was a "frame-up," insisted he was going ahead with his strike no matter what the courts might say, and accused Moreschi of throwing his men out of the union.

Abel Sorri, 121 West 23d place, was arrested yesterday at the Furniture Mart building, Ohio street and Lake Shore drive, when he tried to force other laborers to quit their jobs.

LAKE FOREST WEDDING IN THE OPEN AIR

Smith-Thorne wedding party. Miss Ellen C. Thorne, daughter of Mrs. Robert J. Thorne, yesterday became the bride of Hermon Dunlap Smith, son of Mrs. John V. Farwell. BUILDING BOOMS DESPITE STRIKES AND HIGH PRICES

Permit Report Points to Record Year.

Notwithstanding unsettled labor conditions and rising material costs which caused an appreciable slump in June home building from the previous month's figures, all records in building activities will be surpassed this year, according to Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom's semi-annual report issued yesterday.

CHARLES BOSTROM. [Gibson, Sykes & Fowler.]

For the first six months of the current year, permits for the erection of 7,314 new buildings of all kinds valued at $188,281,915, were issued, only about $40,000,000 less than the valuation for the entire year of 1922. Last year 12,581 permits for the erection of buildings valued at $227,742,010 were issued.

Relief from house-shortage and high rents is seen in the report which indicates a considerable increase in residence and apartment building over a corresponding period last year. From 3,233 residence permits issued in the first six months of 1922, the number has increased to 3,482 for the last six months. Apartment permits totaled 1,968 for the first half of 1922 against 2,301 thus far in 1923.

"Rents Must Come Down."

"Rents must come down in view of these figures," declared Mr. Bostrom. "Like everything else, rent is fixed by the law of supply and demand, and without a doubt, this year's supply will exceed the demand. Each year for many years, statistics have disclosed that Chicago's permanent population increases 18,000 families annually.

"Assuming an average of 4.3 flats to an apartment building, permits for the completion of 9,894 flats have been issued during the last six months. With the addition of 3,482 single residences, a total of 13,376 new homes have been authorized to meet the demands of 18,000 probable homeseekers to be provided for in the year."

An increase in the frontage of the new buildings is also noted in the report which shows a total of 229,234 feet for the first half of 1923 as compared with 200,876 feet for the same period last year. This year's six months' total is approximately 60 per cent of the total frontage for last year, which was 395,478 feet.

Fewer Permits in June.

Fewer building permits were issued in June, 1923, than in the preceding month or the same month last year, according to the report, which shows the following comparison:

	June, 1922.	May, 1923.	June, 1923.
Single residences.....	700	855	641
Apartments	498	428	417
Industrial and others.	145	139	183
Total permits.....1,419	1,490	1,211

The June, 1923, figures show a total of $17,735,550, against $32,198,000 for May, 1923, and $26,576,350 for June, 1922.

"The June building slump is primarily due to sudden wage increases, increased material costs and threatened strikes which discouraged investors from building speculation," Mr. Bostrom said. "However, the falling off was not unexpected, because for many months the building activities have been unusual if not abnormal."

Society Folks Out in Force at Smith-Thorne Nuptials

Society witnessed the ceremony yesterday afternoon which made Miss Ellen C. Thorne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne of 1946 Lake Shore drive, the bride of Hermon Dunlap Smith, son of Mrs. John V. Farwell of 129 Lake Shore drive and Lake Forest, for both the bride and bridegroom belong to two of Chicago's oldest families.

The service was read at 4 o'clock at the Lake Forest estate of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. George R. Thorne, by the Rev. George Roberts of the Lake Forest Presbyterian church, before an improvised white altar in the garden. The Rev. Herbert E. Edwards, retired rector of the Lake Forest Episcopal church, gave the wedding prayer. The bridal party walked from the house to the altar along a pathway outlined with white posts surmounted by baskets filled with lilies and connected by garlands of roses and white ribbons.

What They Wore.

The bride's gown of white satin and rose point lace had a court train of lace set in satin, falling from the shoulders for several yards. Her veil was of lace and she carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies.

Miss Roberta Thorne, the "sub-deb" sister of the bride and the maid of honor, wore a girlish frock of apricot taffeta made in bouffant style with a single red rose catching the skirt drapery at one side. The bridesmaids, all Chicago girls, were Miss Marjorie King, Miss Lydia Hibbard, Miss Madeleine Childs, Miss Katherine Trowbridge, Miss Helen Isham, Miss Mart Smith, Miss Alice Carpenter and Miss Katherine Thorne, another sister. They wore apple green taffeta gowns made similarly to the honor maid's. All the attendants wore leghorn hats draped with tulle to match their gowns and carried arm sprays of red roses. The bride's little sisters, Laura and Narcissa, were train bearers, wearing dainty frocks of green taffeta and tulle hats.

To Honeymoon in Banff.

Arthur Farwell was Mr. Smith's best man and ushering were Winthrop Churchill of Milton, Mass., formerly of Chicago; Davis Medwin of Bloomington, Ill.; Keith Carpenter, James Douglas, Ogden West, William Louderback, William Boyden and Ralph Isham, all of Chicago.

Mr. Smith and his bride will go to Lake Louise and Banff for a month after which they will be at home for the rest of the summer with his stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John V. Farwell, in Lake Forest. In the autumn they will take an apartment in Chicago.

Miss Helen Hutchinson Weds.

A small but interesting wedding of the afternoon was that of Miss Helen Hutchinson, daughter of the late Judge Jonas Hutchinson and Mrs. Hutchinson of 420 Deming place, and Dr. Frederick Robin Green, which took place at 4 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother. The Rev. Thomas E. Green of Washington, D. C., brother of the groom, read the service in the presence of the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Jonas Hutchinson, wore a white lingerie gown of embroidered mull, filet lace and baby Irish lace and carried pink and white peonies.

Dr. and Mrs. Green will be at home after Oct. 1 at 16 Chalmers place.

Paul Schulze Jr. Takes Bride.

Miss Grace Mary Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Q. Cook of 5203 Kenmore avenue, was married to Paul Schulze Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schulze of 2305 Commonwealth avenue, last night at 8:30 o'clock in the Fourth Presbyterian church, the Rev. John Timothy Stone officiating.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception in the church parlors. The bride wore a gown of white crepe satin trimmed with rhinestones and pearls. Her tulle veil was held in place with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies and orchids.

The maid of honor, Miss Helen Schulze, sister of the bridegroom, wore a dress of American beauty georgette and a rhinestone coronet, and carried green and white flowers. The bridesmaids, Miss Virginia Krafthefer and Miss Virgene Morin of Wilmette, Miss Evelyn Brown and Miss Margaret Kramer of Chicago, and Miss Mary Myers of Cincinnati, wore georgette frocks in rainbow colors with bandeaux of silver and georgette to match their gowns, and carried shower bouquets of spring flowers in the shades of their costumes. Mr. and Mrs. Schulze will go abroad on their honeymoon.

Miss Spencer Becomes Bride.

When Miss Gladys Spencer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Spencer of Highland Park, became the bride of Joseph S. Richardson of Boston yesterday afternoon she wore a gown of ivory chantilly lace over satin and a tulle veil with a lace cap and sprays of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of gypsphila. The service was read at 4 o'clock in Trinity church by the Rev. Peter Wolcott and was followed by a reception at the Spencer residence.

Mrs. George Moseley of Geneva, Ill., her sister's matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Paul Harper of Evanston and Mrs. Edward A. Small of Highland Park, wore green crepe de chine gowns and white hats trimmed with orange blossoms and carried bouquets of daisies and candy tufts.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will live in Concord, Mass., after a wedding trip through the west.

FARMER-LABOR PARTY SIZES UP FORD AS LEADER

Convention This Week to Discuss 'Flivver King.'

Henry Ford may be invited to tie his presidential aspirations to the national Farmer-Labor political organization on a third party "economic platform." This possibility was revealed last night through informal statements of leaders in the Farmer-Labor party, which is scheduled to convene Tuesday morning for a three days' session at Street Car Men's hall.

HENRY FORD. [Kain & Herbert Photo.]

While indicating the convention-conference, as it is to be styled, undoubtedly will consider the Detroit automobile magnate as standard bearer, Farmer-Laborites declined to discuss details or to say what if any overtures had been made to Mr. Ford.

1,000 Delegates Expected.

Delegates began arriving last night. It is expected more than 1,000 representatives of farmers' organizations, labor unions, minority political parties, and cooperative societies will attend.

"The aim of the meetings," said Jay G. Brown of Chicago, secretary of the Farmer-Labor party, "will be to unite all existing organizations behind a program of political activity, much as has been accomplished in England within the last two years. Instead of ten minorities in the next presidential election we hope to have a single ticket which will command support of all elements not satisfied with the two old parties."

There will, however, be no effort to formally consolidate the various groups beyond centering their energies, Mr. Brown added. No platform will be drafted at this conference, but plans for building an effective 1924 machine will be discussed, he said.

Socialists Decline.

While the Socialist party has declined to participate, on the ground that "comparatively few of the great unions are yet ready to take the decisive step of launching a working class party on a national scale," many other shades of progressive, liberal and radical opinion will be represented.

A notorious exponent of the last group will be William Z. Foster, whose recent trial in Michigan on charges of criminal syndicalism resulted in a mistrial.

Among leading delegates will be Lieut. Gov. George Comings and Congressmen Snyder and Beck of Wisconsin, heading the Nonpartisan group from that state; Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, sole representative in the senate of the Farmer-Labor party; Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and R. F. Pettigrew, former United States senator from South Dakota, for the Farmer-Labor party of that state.

The American Labor party, the Single Tax party, National Women's party and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom will be represented.

The American Federation of Labor, which does not approve of a separate labor party, will not participate, although several important individual unions and various state federations of the A. F. of L. are expected to send delegates.

GOES TO CAPITAL

CLARENCE F. BUCK.

State Senator Clarence F. Buck of Monmouth will start work this week on his new job as director of finance of the United States shipping board in Washington. This appointment carries with it a membership on the board of directors of the Emergency Fleet corporation, in charge of all finances. Senator Buck succeeds J. W. McIntosh, who has been appointed assistant controller of the currency.

N. Y. REPUBLICAN CHIEF SAYS FORD NO LONGER A JOKE

G. O. P. to Take Steps to "Spike" His Boom.

New York, June 30.—[Special.]—The possibility that Henry Ford might capture a nomination for President in one of the two major parties is no longer a "joke" if it ever was one, according to Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman from New York state.

That the popular support of the automobile manufacturer shown in canvasses and other soundings of sentiment is beginning to worry the leaders of the Republican and Democratic organizations is plain from Mr. Hilles' clear cut warning. The election of Ford, in Mr. Hilles' opinion, would place "at the nation's head a mere bag of gold who knows nothing about anything except making automobiles."

Must Be Taken Seriously.

It is believed that the New York committeeman voiced the sentiments of many other members of the Republican national committee, which is said to have selected him as the man to let the country know where the Republicans stand so far as Ford is concerned. If the Republican organization leaders can prevent it, there will be no chance that a Ford for President stampede will catch the party off its guard.

"Mr. Ford's candidacy must be taken seriously," said Mr. Hilles, "because of the obvious conviction of a vast number of people that a man who has created the most prosperous manufacturing enterprise the world has ever seen, who pays high wages, and who sells more automobiles at a lower price than any competitor has evidenced the possession of qualities which would enable him to succeed as President.

Assails His "Bigotry."

"He boasts of his bigotry. Our government demands complete separation of church from state and guarantees tolerance towards both race and creed. The Declaration of Independence includes a statement that all men are created equal under the law. The spirit of the constitution is protective of the minority in fundamental rights.

"But in spite of the American spirit of tolerance and the fact that the Jews have contributed so much to our civic life, Henry Ford, with the bigotry of the Ku Klux Klan, has declared war on them."

Unions Not Fighting Ford.

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—"Thus far the unions pick no particular quarrel with Henry Ford and his ubiquitous flivver," says the July issue of the American Federationist, the official organ of the American Federation of Labor. "Ford stands in a class by himself—richest man in America, yet not disliked because of it, operating along lines developed in his own plant, not inviting union men to work for him, but not conducting warfare against them.

"The first thing unionism seeks is a decent living for wage earners and fair hours of labor. In 1914 Ford employed 14,000 workers. To keep a force of that size he had to hire at the rate of about 53,000 a year. Then he put his famous $5 a day wage into effect and inaugurated the eight hour day. The next year he had to hire only 6,508 men and most of these were to enlarge the force because of growing business. Ford logic and union logic agreed so far, with results that the unions knew would follow.

"Ford makes another fine point. He says that it is not the employer who pays wages. He only handles the money. It is the product that pays the wages and it is the management that arranges the production so that the product may pay the wages."

HARDING HAPPY OVER RECEPTION OF HIS SPEECHES

Aside from the Harding talk, because of his tour, there is little heard about other candidates, except, curiously, perhaps, Henry Ford.

Talk of Ford as Entry.

Ford is being talked about for President here and there in these western states. Politicians in some states are mystified by activities they see here and there in Ford's behalf. Agents are known to be working in his political interest.

For example, in Idaho, Senator Borah, riding through the isolated sections in his state and fighting a reaction toward conservatism, found that Ford was being discussed. Senator Borah said, after a speaking campaign which took in several states, that there was sentiment for Ford for President. He was of the opinion that the country was more ripe for a third party movement than in the Roosevelt era.

Borah Not a Candidate.

The Idaho senator himself is not a candidate for the presidency, and he does not believe that Senator Hiram Johnson of California will be. He believes Mr. Harding will be renominated, and is of the opinion that the Democrats will not take Ford. He does not hesitate to say, however, that if Ford leads a third party he might accomplish the impossible and be elected President.

One of the most pleasing responses which President Harding received in his trip through the west was to the old fashioned sentiment of individual responsibility. There is no communist movement in evidence, unless the plan for cooperative marketing and a joint interest with the consuming centers be regarded as such. President Harding himself advanced this idea.

The real fact about conditions in the west and middle west is that the people who live there are unable to find a market for their extraordinary native resources. There are not railroad facilities sufficient to take care of what it is country is capable of sending to the markets of the United States and of Europe.

The protest against freight rates is only a surface indication of this condition, but it is a live protest.

JOHNSON MAY BE LEADER OF WETS IN G. O. P. RANKS

Harding Dry Stand Seen as Hiram's Chance.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—President Harding's pronounced pro-prohibition attitude, enunciated in his Denver speech, is regarded as a development of the first importance by politicians who are making calculations on the personalities and issues that will distinguish the 1924 presidential campaign.

While it had been noted from time to time that the President was heading for the camp of the bone drys, the reserve speech generally is interpreted as announcing his arrival therein after burning all bridges behind him.

Seen as Dry Plank Champion.

The Anti-Saloon league publicly has felicitated the President upon his approval of strictly enforced prohibition, and left no doubt that its influence throughout the country will be exerted for the renomination and reelection of Mr. Harding.

Whether any Republican leader now will arise to champion the cause of beer and light wine and oppose the renomination of the President is a matter of interest. Wet Republicans, as well as Republican irreconcilables to the proposition of the United States joining any world court anywhere under any circumstances, are awaiting the return from Europe of Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.], who represents their last desperate hope.

When the California senator departed for Europe he did not expect to be a candidate for the nomination. He was represented as of the opinion that no power on earth could prevent the renomination of the President, even if the leaders knew they were consigning their party to inevitable defeat thereby. Moreover, Johnson perceived no issue on which he might challenge the President with reasonable hope of success in the Republican primaries.

While the senator has been abroad, however, the world court has become an issue on which the Republican party is far from unity, and prohibition has moved to the fore as a possible paramount issue of 1924.

Against World Court.

Johnson is against the world court now, as he was when he went abroad, but indications are not wanting that a development of the world court issue in the last two months influenced him to this.

Johnson is also against bone dry prohibition, or was at the last reckoning. He can see no harm in the light wines of California, and the beer and light wine Republicans would welcome his championship of their cause.

If Johnson should hurl his hat into the ring as an opponent of the world court and the champion of beer and light wine, the issues would be joined in the Republican party and the primaries would be enlivened by a contest of exceptional interest. Johnson displayed a spectacular vote getting ability in the 1920 primaries and his friends say he has the hang of it now and can do it again.

In 1920 Johnson developed great strength in western states, but was weak in the east. If he should be a candidate on a moist platform next year, however, he would be likely to prove more popular in the wet east than the dry west.

UNTIL SOMETHING "BUSTS"

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HARDING'S TALK, U. S. LABOR ACTS VARY: GOMPERS

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—Commenting on President Harding's labor speech at Helena, Mont., Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, today declared that the President's declarations do not square with the actions of Attorney General Daugherty and administration representatives in congress.

"It is difficult to find in the injunctions brought by the Harding department of justice against the miners and the railroad workers any great effort to conserve the forces of organized labor," Mr. Gompers said. "Those whose memories are not too short will recall that when the President's attorney general secured his injunction against the railroad workers, that attorney general said to the court, 'So long and to the extent that I can speak for the government of the United States I will use the power of the government to prevent the labor unions of the country from destroying the open shop.'

"The President would doubtless be glad if he could expunge Mr. Daugherty's speech and the Daugherty injunction from the records. That injunction sought to deny the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom of the press to railroad workers."

THE AMERICAN SPIRIT.

"We have no black looks or angry words for our neighbor if he enjoys himself in his own way and we abstain from little acts of churlishness which, while they leave no mark, yet cause annoyance to those who note them."

That was said on a great occasion by one of the greatest statesmen of history concerning his people, one of the greatest people of all time.

The occasion was a solemn celebration of the patriots who died in the battle of Marathon to save Greece and Europe from Asiatic tyranny. The statesman was Pericles, who presided over the destinies of his nation at the zenith of its greatness. The people were the Athenians, whose genius in war, in art, in politics, in philosophy raised their city state to a height never passed in history.

We repeat these familiar facts in emphasis of our quotation, because it is well for the people of this modern republic of ours to meditate upon the fact that one of the greatest of men, solemnly naming the virtues of one of the greatest of peoples, deemed it worthy of assertion that they freely and cheerfully granted one another liberty of individual judgment in personal conduct and lived genially with one another in that spirit.

If Pericles, in his great wisdom, had not believed this one of the qualities vital to the felicity and prosperity of Athens he would not have praised it over the sacred bodies of the patriot dead. And surely Pericles was right, for no nation, whether it be small yet immortal Athens or vast continental America, can preserve strength or happiness if domestic harmony is made impossible by the habit of mutual censure and censorship.

This is worth the serious consideration of Americans who if they examine American tendencies will observe that a serious alteration in what we may call the American spirit has been taking place in recent years. There has been a growth of ill nature among us, an increase of envy and suspicion, perhaps an increase of unreasoned discontent. And with this has come the disposition to regulate the individual; to impose what a part of us think is virtue upon the individual by force of law or lawlessness; to disrespect the private conscience and to enlarge the dominance of government over individuals or minorities.

This of late is inevitably extending its effects into our relations with other nations, so that we are in a fair way not only to destroy our domestic harmony but to bring upon us the dislike of other peoples and eventually war.

All this unhappy evolution, whatever its causes, is contrary to the American ideal, a defeat of the American dream. Americanism meant freedom from all tyrannies and unconquerable faith in the individual. But of late years we have developed more and more the ancient fallacy of the state and given up more and more the inspiring and vitalizing belief in the individual and his liberty. We have been turning against one another in the American household, and if we cannot restore the old athletic, generous confidence and mutual allowance we shall have thrown away the most precious heritage any people has possessed in the long story of mankind.

GOING UP AND GOING DOWN.

The Chicago sky line is changing again. It is being pierced by new structures overtopping their neighbors. It is impressive architecturally, but its real significance is not in the air. It is on the street. Twenty-five years ago Chicago regarded the Masonic temple, the Auditorium and several smaller buildings as its monumental structures. When new buildings were to go up you could hear the sound of pile drivers putting in the foundations. Piles could sustain the type of building then planned.

Twenty-five years ago Chicago had cable cars, but they used the same streets downtown now used. They looped in about the same fashion and they went about as fast as the present surface cars. They were not impeded by so much other traffic and the cable carried them along about as rapidly as the electric current can take them on the loop of the loop now.

Virtually no change for the better has been made in transportation in the heart of Chicago, but the buildings have gone into the air. Even under the building restrictions the population of downtown Chicago grows, with so little change in transportation that it can be called properly no change. About the only thing the city has done to help transportation is to limit building height, which is directing its attention to the wrong end of the question.

Buildings going high up in the air ought to mean tracks going under ground. When the steel arrestor is 400 feet up, the subway digger ought to be forty feet or so down. If we think building construction can boom alongside old fashioned small town car tracks we have a bad idea. Chicago streets have long been past their capacity. The subway ought to have been started twenty years ago. If it is not started soon half the people who must get into the downtown city will find it impossible to do so.

Small town transportation and metropolitan building cannot co-exist.

THE FARMER'S SALVATION.

Despite assurances by President Harding to the farmers of this country that the administration has done virtually everything asked in their behalf by the agricultural bloc, there seems to be a strong current of opinion among farmers that they are still out of luck. That is unfortunate both for the farmers and the country at large. But it indicates that relief of depression in our rural districts cannot be expected from legislation alone. Encouragement must be sought elsewhere.

That doesn't furnish a text for any sermon on harder work. Probably the farmers are working as hard already as any man ought to work. The work will help, but other factors are involved. Perhaps the chief reason for the depression revealed by a price of $7 for hogs today against $10 a year ago, and by a price of $1.04 for wheat against $1.11 a year ago, is overproduction. That exists in spite of heavy exports and the steady domestic demand based upon good wages and general activity in industry. Perhaps the farmer would like to know where to look for encouragement in that situation.

It is hot to be found in more legislation. It is to be found, we believe, in the economic law of supply and demand. Perhaps the farmer will resent it when he is forced to pay perhaps $70 a month for labor this season against $40 recently paid, but that may work out his salvation.

There is a steady migration of labor from the farms to the city, which accounts in part for higher wage demands on the farm. The migration is estimated at 1,500,000 from farms to city industries in the last two years and a half. This is looked upon by the farmers, and some sociologists, with alarm. We doubt that it should be so, even if it does mean that the farmers must pay higher wages to compete with the cities.

These migrated farm boys must still eat. If their loss to the farms reduces farm production it will raise prices of farm products. But so far it has not reduced production. On the contrary, it has increased it. A farmer boy building a tractor in Detroit is doing farm work as truly and far more efficiently than the same boy feeding and currying and harnessing horses to haul hay in Iowa. The result is that fewer farmers are producing more food now than ever before. High wages will force installation of more machinery, and assemble a larger number of consumers in the cities to buy farm products. In the course of a very few years supply and demand should thus be equalised.

Leaving aside the social issues involved in this migration, this development appears to us to promise happier days for the farmer than any legislation could do.

THE BATTLESHIP CONTROVERSY

Spirited discussion has been taking place in the navy over the relative importance of battleships, airplanes, and submarines. A very able officer, Rear Admiral Fullam, has been a chief controversialist on what may be called the anti-battleship side of the debate, but in an article in the Army and Navy Journal, summarising his opinions, it appears that Admiral Fullam is far from favoring the abolition of the battleship. He sets forth his views of his party as follows: "They claim that the dreadnought alone is weak; that it cannot blockade a coast; that it dare not cross the sea or leave home unless it is protected at all times from above and below; that the operations of big fleets are limited nowadays—they cannot go far from their bases." Or, in other words, they believe that "the battleship is no longer unafraid; that its type may soon change; that air forces and submarines combined so menace the surface fleet that they dominate in naval warfare. The surface fleet cannot exist without them."

The controversy—a very useful one, by the way, which the public should follow—thus comes to an issue of emphasis, rather than of principle. Capt. Dudley Knox, naval editor of the Army and Navy Journal, expresses the views of the department, we believe, when he concurs in what is the basis of policy, the conception of a balanced fleet—namely: one able to fight below and above the surface as well as upon it. This is the three-plane navy, and Capt. Knox believes the departmental conception is sound, and if there is lack of balance it is for lack of appropriation for needed units. He agrees with Admiral Fullam that we require fifty modern submarines, new types; that we need more fast cruisers, and a big air force.

But we agree with Capt. Knox in one respect in which, perhaps, our opinion may be regarded as expert—namely: as to the effect on the civilian public and congress of the policy of "swatting the battleship." Admiral Fullam says that "it has been necessary to swat the battleship pretty hard in order to prove that we need something else." So far as this applies to opinion within the service, we suspect he is right. Conservatism tends to degenerate into bourbonism in any public service, and the privilege of overstatement is entirely justified when intelligent progressivism meets unawakened or stubborn standpattism. But the situation as to civilian opinion is different. Expert assertion does not meet resistance from preconceptions. It meets uncritical acceptance and the drawing of sweeping inferences never intended by the expert. The civilian welcomes novelties, and when Admiral Fullam and Admiral Sims swat the battleship the civilian completes the job by sinking it.

That means for the balanced fleet, the three-plane navy, a defeat, not a victory.

Fortunately at the moment this is not likely to have serious results in congress, because our battleship complement under the limitations of the treaty is complete. But if it were not for that it would do harm by encouraging refusal to appropriate for battleships on the theory that our forward looking naval men considered them useless in modern war.

We believe our public needs to be warned against its tendency to place too much value upon novelties, which encourage us to think wars can be won by clever Yankee inventions. The airplane and the submarine appeal to the civilian imagination, while the battleship is an old story. We have civilian strategists with ready typewriters who are winning the next war in the air or under the sea by one marvelous device or another. But the next war will not be won that way any more than the last or all preceding wars.

Whatever need of emphasis on behalf of progress may be in the service—and we certainly would favor it wherever it is not misinterpreted—the civilian public needs to be reminded that the submarine did not win the late war, but was defeated because its surface support was dominated by the surface power of its enemy. The civilian, especially his representative in congress, needs to be told that, as Capt. Knox says, "all types have their deficiencies and limitations—the air forces more than any other and the battleship the least," and "the strongest naval power, both offensive and defensive, is represented by a properly balanced fleet."

We need more submarines and aircraft, more cruisers and carriers, not to take the place of the battleship, but to enable it to perform its functions fully and to carry on operations outside of its scope. As we know it, the battleship will evolve into another form of surface ship, but to assume that warfare is to leave the surface plane and be carried on solely in the air or under the surface is a delusion of romantic fiction. War has got into the air and under the surface, but it keeps its feet on the ground just the same. So must our experts.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Fireflies flash at the edge of the thicket where the viburnum has blossomed, where wild sunflowers have grown, where the violets were and where wild roses are. Wild phlox and geraniums will make way for asters and goldenrod. The petals of the peony are on the ground. The petals of the poppy are gone with the dew.

Elusive days filled with color, charged with perfumes, rush out of the sun and into the night.

We clutch at moonlight on running water.

COMMERCE AND PEACE.

We have said the increase of our trade with South and Central America and the West Indies depends largely upon our investment in those countries. That law of trade development has not been sufficiently regarded by the American government or people. But there is another law. We cannot sell unless we buy. Trade is reciprocal, and as an encouragement to a policy of trade expansion in Latin America, American manufacturers, merchants, and financiers may note the increase of our consumption of tropical foods. The Trade Record of the National City bank of New York reports that our cocoa imports have increased from 156,000,000 pounds in 1913 to 250,000,000 pounds in 1922; coffee from 853,000,000 to 1,250,000,000 pounds. Tropical and subtropical fruits and nuts were imported in 1913 to the value of $49,000,000, and in 1922 these imports were $75,000,000. Vegetable oils, largely tropical and subtropical, increased in that period from $27,000,000 to $60,000,000.

Secretary Hoover calls attention to this "great shift in our foreign trade" by which our imports from tropical countries have grown till they amount to more than half our total imports. And we would have our people note the corresponding fact that our exports to Latin America have increased in the less than a decade mentioned from $820,000,000 to $525,000,000.

The expansion of our investment and commercial ties throughout America should bind the peoples of the western hemisphere in durable bonds of friendliness. "The natural effect of commerce," says a great Latin philosopher whom our Latin neighbors respect, Montesquieu, "is to bring peace. Two nations which do business together render themselves interdependent." Commerce is not a guaranty against war, and where it produces rivalry for markets it may make war. But under the conditions which Montesquieu predicated, and which apply to our relations with Latin America, a large commerce and, in this case, its prerequisite investment will make war between us or mischievous political enterprise unlikely, if not out of the question.

Propaganda of rivals is doing what it can to check the natural growth of commerce between North and South America. We shall have to overcome unjust suspicion, fears, and prejudices. But we believe an enlightened policy on our part would be working on lines of natural tendency. Latin America and the United States must find so large a profit in cooperation that it will develop inevitably. Latin America needs our capital and our market. We shall profit by meeting its needs, but the benefits will be mutual.

Editorial of the Day

A LAW CRAZY NATION

[Tampa (Fla.) Sunday Tribune.]

The United States is going law crazy, Bruce A. Campbell of East St. Louis told the Illinois Bar association the other day.

"Unless sensible men come to the rescue, we shall have a government of laws, with a statute governing our every action."

Which means, of course, that paternalism has become the order of the day, and affords an explanation of the astounding statement made a few days earlier by Senator Smoot, that never again will the tax needs of the federal government fall below $3,000,000,000 annually. Because if the various legislatures persist in providing a government agency to superintend everything from hatching chickens to human accouchements, creating numerous offices and supporting them by liberal appropriations from the public funds; if government in its various forms, municipal, county, state and federal, continue to put on the public pay roll more and more citizens, creating a parasitic class of unexampled proportions, duplicating and reduplicating the permissible activities of government on the one hand, vying with each other in an effort to discover still more ways to give rein to the unbridled demand for paternalism on the other, it can be but a matter of short time until the productive classes of the republic and their capital investments will be working almost solely to maintain the official class.

Law crazy? This country is not merely going law crazy, it is law crazy! And this craze is at the bottom of most of its discontent and economic ills. In a few months another national campaign will be upon us. THE TRIBUNE is willing to hazard its reputation on the prophecy that the outstanding issues of that campaign will be rivalry between the various candidates as to which can promise the most in the way of new benefactions of a paternalistic nature; that not one will sound the note of retreat or appear in the role of that "sensible man" which Mr. Campbell holds to be necessary for the country's rescue.

From a republic, which is a popular government conducted by the representative system, we first degenerated into a democracy through demagogic appeal, and now stand on the verge of seeing the whole original beautiful and sound structure taken into the maw of an office holding autocracy!

"Unless sensible men come to the rescue, we shall have a government of laws, with a statute governing our every action." How short are we of that status now? And is there anything in sight capable of being diagramed as "sensible men"?

BEWARE OF RAW MILK.

THERE is greater need of avoiding raw milk in the feeding of babies in the summer months than during the other seasons of the year. I mean babies that are not breastfed. When a baby has the great privilege of drawing fresh, uncontaminated milk from the breast of his mother there is no need for cooking the milk, nor the mother.

Few farmers put up ice with which to refrigerate milk on the farm or on the farmer's wagon. Few farmers' wells or springs furnish water as cool as 55. Not much raw milk is shipped in refrigerator cars. Did any one ever see anything that "looked better" than a milk platform, in town or in country?

These are a few of the reasons for the extra advantage of pasteurized milk in the hot months.

How about the disadvantages? Hawk and his associates have been reinvestigating some of these. One was that the use of pasteurized milk induced rickets. In Hawk's experiments, animals were fed on pasteurized milk and then very carefully examined for rickets, for the rate of growth and for the condition of the teeth and bones. He found no evidence of harm in either of the lines which he studied.

So far as his studies showed the content of the milk in lime and phosphorus was not changed. That such harmful changes were brought about by pasteurization was one of the charges.

Dr. Hawk went a step further in his studies. He compared sweetened, condensed milk with pasteurized milk, and, incidentally, with raw milk. His studies showed that the use of sweetened, condensed milk did not cause rickets. Expert examinations of the teeth and of the head bones showed that these were not harmed by the use of sweetened, condensed milk. Young animals fed on this milk grew normally.

Chemical analysis showed that sweetened, condensed milk was not harmed in so far as its lime and phosphorus were concerned. The indications were that the vitamines were not materially decreased. Such decrease as there was in the vitamine which protects against scurvy could be easily offset by giving fresh fruit juice and vegetable foods, which are easily obtained in summer and which all older babies should have, regardless of whether they are drinking cow's milk or getting their food from the breast.

The drawback to sweetened, condensed milk is not the danger that it will spoil, that it conveys contagion, or that it causes rickets. It is this. It contains more sugar than babies need or should have.

Furthermore, after a baby has had diarrhoea, it is generally good policy to give food that is very poor in starch and sugar for a while.

"WEATHER PATCH."

M. E. D. writes: About three years ago a small spot appeared under the eye and has since gradually grown larger. It is like a thick, brown coating over the skin, but has never been sore to the touch.

What might cause this and how might it be removed?

REPLY.

Your description does not indicate that this is skin cancer.

It probably is one of those mild skin troubles which are so frequent in old people exposed to the weather and which some call "weather patches."

It can be taken off nicely with X-rays, radium or carbon snow if there be any reason for removing it.

SOME SKINS TAN; OTHERS DO NOT.

H. S. B. writes: I swim quite frequently, and, as I am of a fair complexion, I suffer greatly from sunburn.

Why is it I never tan like the other fellows?

REPLY.

Certain skins tan readily and well. Others tan poorly.

IT WILL KILL THEM.

Miss L. S. writes: Is the heat of an oven [hot enough for baking] sufficiently hot to kill tuberculosis germs which might be in the milk used in making biscuits?

REPLY.

Yes. Entirely safe.

NO HARM; NO GOOD.

Mrs. F. E. D. writes:

1. Will you give me a little advice on whooping cough? I read an article recently in a book about placing balls of brown paper saturated with turpentine on a dish at the head of the bed during the night and how it would check a cough considerably, but it did not state this included whooping cough. So I am going to ask you what you think would help?

2. Also, what foods are best for children suffering with whooping cough?

3. How long does it last?

REPLY.

1. It will do no harm; neither will it do any good.

2. Let them eat about what they ate before they got sick. Diet is not a factor.

3. It is not contagious after about four weeks. The children may have some cough for several months.

MINERS' CONSUMPTION.

Anxious writes: Is miners' consumption contagious?

REPLY.

Miners' consumption, if not complicated with tuberculosis, is not contagious. However, a large part of the cases of miners' consumption develop tuberculosis, whereupon they are contagious to the degree that tuberculosis of the lungs is.

French Lick, Ind., June 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Regarding income tax deductions: When a cash settlement has been made, and a stipulation signed by the prospective plaintiff in a threatened breach of promise case, and in which the fear and dread of publicity was the deciding factor, is the amount paid deductible?

2. Must the party making payment report the sum paid, as well as the name and address of party receiving payment, to the treasury department?

C. A. P.

1. The money received by a prospective plaintiff would be taxable as income. Assuming you meant "defendant," such loss would not be deductible for purpose of income tax.

2. Yes, if it exceeds $4,000.

ACCIDENT IN BORROWED CAR.

Chicago, June 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know if a motor car owner is permitted to loan his car to a friend in Illinois, and if the person borrowing the car is in an accident, who has to stand the responsibility? Would this fall to the owner or the borrower of the car?

Henry Ward Beecher knows better than any one else how true or false are the stories told about him, and yesterday, for the first time since they were set afloat, he took public notice of them. His long silence has been trying enough to his friends, for even those who believed wholly in his innocence have longed to hear him declare himself free from stain. In a letter to the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, he makes a clean, square denial of the charges. They are grossly untrue, he says, and utterly false in particular and in general. He gives Mrs. Woodhull, and any other persons who have letters of his, full permission to publish them. This may be construed as an indirect admission that he has been corresponding with her on the subject.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY (FACSIMILES)

Madrid, June 30—Midnight.—A rumor is in circulation here tonight, though unconfirmed, that there has been a great battle at Santiago de Cuba, resulting in favor of the Spaniards.

BATTLE SAID TO BE IMMINENT.

(Special Cable to Chicago Tribune Also to the New York World and The Chicago Tribune.)

Seville, June 30, via Port Antonio.—A great battle is imminent. It is expected to take place tomorrow, and cannot be delayed much longer.

General Shafter is at the front and his position besides the troops. Shafter is chasing Wheeler's men.

All the movements of both armies indicate that the crisis is at hand. The Spaniards are busy reinforcing the defenses outside of Santiago. Earthworks are built on all the hills commanding the approaches. There are extra lines of barbed wire fence in front of the trenches around the city.

DESPERATE, BUT THEY WILL FIGHT.

The Spanish situation is desperate, but they will fight. It is supposed Cervera's guns are posted on the hills, not all the ships reinforcing their armament. The Spaniards are not stinted in horseshoe exported, but are patiently awaiting reinforcements.

CANADA is begging for two-cent postage. Let it come into the American union and it will have two-cent postage without delay.

EGYPT'S refusal to allow Camara's fleet to coal at Port Said has had a cooling effect on Spanish enthusiasm.

IF the Kaiser has entered into a private trade with the treacherous Spaniards for a portion of the Philippine Islands he will find his title barred by a first mortgage.

A GOOD deal of ridicule has been heaped by naval experts on the inefficiency of Camara's fleet, but it ought to be able to execute a "promenade" to the Philippines any way.

THERE are said to be only fourteen German and Swiss merchants in Manila, which is just two for each transport that the Kaiser is reported to be providing in Manila waters for their protection.

IF the dreaded Anglo-Saxon alliance ever becomes an accomplished fact it will be brought about by some such "grand stand play" as the German Kaiser is suspected in some quarters of preparing.

HOW IS THIS, IOWA?

Chicago, June 25.—Twenty-five years ago an athletic girl was considered a tomboy. Well, to make a long story short, we donned the bloomers, left normal, high school and university for the vacation, joined a female ball team and played forty-five towns in the state of Iowa. So I think I know what I write about when I ask you, dear Iowans, to go a little easy with your athletic history from that other side of the Mississippi.

The Iowa farmers said to us then: "We are glad you came, girls. God bless you, for we haven't had nothin' in this state but 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' for the last nineteen years. There won't be a girl or woman at the game today. The whole town of women are against you. They're mighty strict out here. Won't let a fellow smoke, chew, or drink or play ball on Sunday. The minister's son is going to pitch against you, and the minister says he'd rather have his son lose his right arm than pitch against a set of bold huzzies from Chicago." It was then that we, from the Calumet bergs of Illinois, gave you Iowans your first trimming and you woke up.

Do you remember our famous pitcher, Maude Nelson, who knocked a home run, and the little school girl who ducked between the third baseman's straddled posture and stole home? We girls showed you how to get a move on yourselves. That's how you Iowans first got athletics into your system.

So now please excuse this language I'm about to use. It doesn't sound good, but I'm not a-tellin' what "you una" said to us out there. I'm just gonna quote the novelist in a little of that western stuff. It oughta hold you for a while: "You square headed, stiff legged, squint eyed, lop eared four flushers—you ornery, pigeon toed, knock kneed, bow legged corn huskers, surely I say you were slow.

A CALUMET SQUAW.

PEACE AT AMHERST.

Amherst, Mass., June 23.—The smoke of conflict here at Amherst has cleared away. The tumult and the shouting have died; the captains and the kings have departed. Here in the peace of the Pelham hills I have been thinking it all over, and I have reached certain broad conclusions which I believe few of my fellow alumni will attempt to controvert:

1. That we had an imperfect president.

2. That we had and still have an imperfect faculty.

3. That we had and still have an imperfect board of trustees.

4. That, in spite of them imperfections, it is doubtful if there is a better place in the United States to which to send a boy who needs to have his mind awakened.

5. That this has been proclaimed as notably true during the Meiklejohn regime; that it was equally true twenty-five years ago; that it was true fifty and one hundred years ago; that it will no doubt be true twenty-five and fifty years hence. And in those days alumni of Amherst college will read of the passionate partisanship of 1923 with a smile of amused and affectionate tolerance.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE ARSENAL AT SPRINGFIELD.

By Henry W. Longfellow.

This is the Arsenal. From floor to ceiling,
Like a huge organ, rise the burnished arms;
But from their silent pipes no anthem pealing
Startles the villages with strange alarms.

Ah, what a sound will rise, how wild and dreary,
When the death angel touches those swift keys!
What loud lament and dismal Miserere
Will mingle with their awful symphonies!

I hear even now the infinite fierce chorus
The cries of agony, the endless groan,
Which, through the ages that have gone before us,
In long reverberations reach our own.

On helm and harness rings the Saxon hammer,
Through Cimbric forest roars the Norseman's song,
And loud, amid the universal clamor,
O'er distant deserts sounds the Tartar gong.

I hear the Florentine, who from his palace
Wheels out his battle bell with dreadful din,
And Aztec priests upon their tocallis
Beat the wild war drums made of serpent's skin.

The tumult of each sacked and burning village;
The shout that every prayer for mercy drowns;
The soldiers' revels in the midst of pillage;
The wail of famine in beleaguered towns;

The bursting shell, the gateway wrecked asunder,
The rattling musketry, the clashing blade;
And ever and anon, in tones of thunder,
The diapason of the cannonade.

Is it, O Man, with such discordant noises,
With such accursed instruments as these,
Thou drownest nature's sweet and kindly voices,
And jarrest the celestial harmonies?

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals or forts.

The warrior's name would be a name abhorred,
And every nation, that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
Would wear for evermore the curse of Cain!

Down the dark future, through long generations,
The echoing sounds grow fainter, and then cease;
And, like a bell, with solemn, sweet vibrations,
I hear once more the voice of Christ say "Peace!"

Peace! And no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of war's great organ shakes the skies!
But, beautiful as songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love arise.

DRIVER HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER IN AUTO KILLING

Two Is Motor Death Toll in Chicago for Day.

Two automobile fatalities yesterday brought the toll since Jan. 1 to 317. Charles Schaefer, 40 years old, of Belleville, Ill., died at St. Luke's hospital after he had been struck by a taxicab at Michigan avenue and 8th street. The driver, Orr A. Johnson, 1227 East 44th street, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

Daniel McNeill was killed when the truck he was driving was struck by an Illinois Central train at Riverside, Ill.

K. J. Cook, 19 years old, 1432 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, was probably fatally injured when his automobile was struck by another, driven by James B. Dickson, 1819 Hinman avenue, Evanston, who was not held by the Evanston police.

Girl Killed in Joyride.

Miss Elsie Rambatt, 21 years old, 9322 Exchange avenue, is dead and her sister, Miss Anna O'Connell, 20, of 9616 Exchange avenue, lies at the point of death in a Joliet hospital as a result of a joy ride they took Friday night with two youths in that city. The girls were visiting Miss O'Connell's sister, Mrs. Louis Perry. Two young men invited them to go for a ride. Miss O'Connell asked to be allowed to drive. She had gone a mile when she drove the car into a telephone pole.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smerage, 1142 Wilson avenue, and their children had narrow escapes from death yesterday when their automobile, in which they were driving to Boston, skidded on the Grand Rapids road and rolled over three times. Only Mr. Smerage, whose right hand was out, suffered injury.

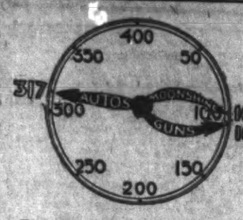
Bar Loiterers at Speed Court.

The corridor outside Judge Harry M. Walker's speeders' court, a gathering place for alleged "fixers" and professional bondsmen, was ordered cleared by Judge Walker yesterday. Loiterers were driven away by bailiffs.

Edward Berger, arraigned on a charge of speeding, asked for a jury trial. Policeman Paul Winton, who arrested Berger, charged he carried a revolver and a bottle of moonshine when he was arrested Friday, and a charge of violation of the concealed weapons act was also placed against him.

An unidentified woman about 40 years old was killed by a motor car at Campbell avenue and Irving Park boulevard at 12:30 o'clock this morning and half a dozen other cars are believed to have passed over the body before it was discovered. She carried a tambourine upon which was inscribed, "Free dinners for poor children at 1042 West 31st street."

HANDS OF DEATH



The clock indicates the number of deaths caused by automobiles, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

SMALL'S ALLIES' TALK 'WON'T RUN' TO GET BIG FIELD

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Friends of Gov. Small have dipped into the old medicine show bag of tricks and are putting on a new bit of legerdemain. The aim is to make the anti-Small groups believe the governor will not run for renomination in the obvious hope that this might bring a swarm of candidates into the field and make it easy for Small to pounce in and between and grab it off. They are circulating reports in Chicago that Small will do a fadeaway.

Since the recent powwow at which anti-Small leaders started a movement to get behind one candidate, those reports have been made more and more emphatic. "Wild horses could not drag Len into the running," say the Small men talking outside the corral. Among themselves, however, they say Small is sure to be a starter.

All Signs Indicate He'll Run.

During the session of the legislature the governor and his lieutenants gave every indication that he will run. While no "formal avowal" was made, many legislators and state officers were certain that Mr. Small was a candidate. This is the prevalent belief among political chiefs of various factions.

Now in Chicago the administration forces are peddling the word that it was necessary for the governor to give the impression that he was a candidate while the assembly was in session, otherwise his program would have been dumped overboard. They are saying many legislators accepted favors from Small and helped put his bills through because they believed he might get a chance for a second term. Now they say that situation has passed and the reports are being circulated that he will not be a candidate.

See Hand of Lundin.

Men experienced in politics regard it as a bit of strategy prompted by Fred Lundin and Percy Coffin. In the last mayoralty election they made a mistake. Early in the game Mayor Thompson permitted wide circulation of the report he would be a candidate. The result was that the anti-Thompson-Small groups decided that the welfare of the city demanded they unite on one candidate against the mayor, instead of allowing the opposition to be split. That caused the mayor to withdraw—quit cold.

With this in mind, the Lundin-Small crowd is now trying to work an old trick backwards. It is regarded as highly probable that the opposition to Gov. Small will go the route in trying to unite on one man to fight him if he runs. So now the Small men are trying to create an early belief that he will not chase the office again in the hope that several candidates will come out.

How They Figure It.

With only two candidates in the field, Gov. Small would have to get a majority of the Republican votes cast to win a renomination. Assume there will be—as there was in 1920—only 810,950 votes cast at the 1924 primary for governor. With only one opponent, Gov. Small would have to get more than 405,475 to be renominated.

The governor would have a much easier job if there are three other men fighting for the nomination. With three strong men in the field they might poll an aggregate of 600,000 votes. Then Small could cop by garnering in the remaining 210,950 votes. That is only a trifle more than half the number he would be forced to get with only one strong opponent.

Bigger Field; Better Chance.

But only two candidates might be persuaded to enter the contest. That would be much better than only one for Gov. Small. It would be possible for him to win in that case with less than 271,000 votes. That was the plan which the Thompson-Lundin forces worked with such success when William Hale Thompson was elected mayor the second time. He was reelected when he only received 35 per cent of the total votes cast.

As seasoned politicians view it, Small's friends are attempting to work that same game at the primaries next April.

Few remember there were more candidates than Len Small and John Oglesby for the Republican nomination in 1920. The fact is there were two other candidates. Together they polled only 64,842 votes out of a total of 811,000. But Small beat Oglesby by less than 8,000. One of these two minor candidates was Oscar F. Carlstrom, who got only 30,336 votes. Gov. Small made Carlstrom a member of the state tax commission as a token of esteem.

Blow from Ball Bat Fatal to Boy Watching Game

An accidental blow on the head from a baseball bat caused the death yesterday of James Zeutka, 12 years old, 3639 South Hermitage avenue. He was watching a game in Douglas park on Decoration day when a bat slipped from a player's hand and struck Zeutka. At first it was thought the boy's injury was not serious.

HIS FLIGHT AFTER AUTO DEATH LAID TO NERVOUSNESS

Nervousness because of never having had a serious accident while driving an automobile was given the police yesterday by A. Johnstone, 1227 East 44th street, as his reason for fleeing the scene after his car had struck and fatally injured Charles Schaeffer, 2927 West Main street, Belleville, Ill., at Michigan avenue and 8th street Friday night. Johnstone surrendered to Capt. Charles Larkin of South Clark street station yesterday. A sister of the victim, Miss Anna Schaeffer of Belleville, is reported en route to Chicago to complete identification arrived at through papers found in Schaeffer's pocket. Schaeffer died after removal to St. Luke's hospital by Carl Nelson, 4705 Lake Park avenue.

ELGIN'S CRIPPLE NEWSBOY'S LEGAL FIGHT STILL ON

5,000 Protest Police Ban on His Stand.

George Stage, newsboy, a cripple with a body so bent and twisted that "he has never seen the sunshine," came back yesterday armed with attorneys employed by the Chicago newspapers to stay the arms of Elgin officials who at the behest of Spiro Paulos, a fruit dealer, sought to brush away the cripple's only means of a livelihood—his news stand.

JUDGE SLUSSER.

Stage for many years had a news stand in front of the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago railroad station in Elgin. Recently the fruit stand inside the station, where papers also were sold, changed hands. And immediately afterwards Stage was arrested by Policeman John Rahn, his stand was torn down and taken to the police station, and he was forbidden to sell papers on Elgin's streets.

Newspapers Aid Him.

The Chicago newspapers heard of Stage's plight. Attorneys Arthur L. Paulson and Harry Daniels of Elgin were employed for him and obtained a temporary injunction restraining Mayor Earl Kelly and Marshall Louis Freeman of Elgin from enforcing the rule against the boy and his stand.

Judge C. F. Irwin issued this injunction and the hearing for a permanent one was to have come up before him yesterday. But yesterday Judge Irwin was ill and the case was transferred to Judge William Fulton, who, after hearing an attorney representing the Elgin officials argue that the stand should be moved from the street to the sidewalk, continued the hearing for one week.

The hearing for the permanent injunction now is to be heard by Judge Fulton and Judge Maxzini Slusser, sitting together in Wheaton next Saturday. At that time Attorneys Paulson and Daniels will present arguments to show that the removal of the boy's stand was unwarranted.

5,000 Citizens Protest.

In the meantime the case has aroused the entire city of Elgin. A petition has been circulated, and more than 5,000 citizens of the Fox river city, including practically every business man in Elgin, have placed their names upon it, protesting against the official ruin of the boy.

The boy's case, the citizens have pointed out, is made doubly pitiful by his unfortunate crippled condition. His body is twisted so that it is almost doubled up in jack knife fashion.

It is impossible for him, the citizens say, to do physical labor. Without the stand beside which he has stood through the summer's heat and the winter's storms he would be compelled to starve or to become a charge upon the county.

Hearing in suits for $25,000 damages which have also been filed against the city for the boy by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein also were continued in Geneva yesterday and are expected to come up next Thursday.

FRANCE HALTS RECEPTION TO HONOR VATICAN

Row Over Pope's Letter on Ruhr Grows.

ROME, June 30.—[By United Press.]—A tense situation has arisen between the Vatican and the French government over the pope's recent letter with regard to French occupation of the Ruhr.

Announcement today that a reception planned to be held at the French embassy to the Vatican July 3 has been postponed indefinitely increased the tension of the last twenty-four hours and was given significant political interpretation. The postponement followed action of the leaders in the French senate yesterday repudiating suggestions of the pontiff.

While spokesmen at the Vatican let it be known that the pope believes his letter was misinterpreted in French circles, there is a strong feeling that his efforts to remedy the situation were not received in the spirit in which they were made.

French to Ask Explanation.

The Italian newspaper Messagero stated that the French ambassador, Jonnart, has been instructed from Paris to seek explanation at the Vatican. M. Jonnart, it is said, intends to inquire as to the motive of the pope in speaking for French evacuation of the Ruhr.

The paper foresees that the Vatican will take the position that no denunciation of French political policy or approval of the German position was intended. The Vatican will reaffirm its stand that all interested parties should hasten to return to normalcy, as suggested in previous papal documents, the paper adds.

It is denied that recall of M. Jonnart is being considered as a result of the situation.

Will Discuss Pope's Letter.

PARIS, June 30.—[By United Press.]—The French chamber of deputies has set next Friday as the date for interpellating the government on the letter of the pope.

The senate is strongly aligned against the suggestion of the pontiff for French evacuation of the Ruhr.

Even leaders of the Catholic group are reaffirming their stand with the government.

Klopfer Boy Given Into Custody of Grandfather

Steffen into the custody of his grandfather, David Block, vice president of the United Cigar Stores company. Mrs. Frances Klopfer, 3825 Rokeby street, the boy's mother who a year ago was divorced from Arthur L. Klopfer, complained to Judge Steffen that Klopfer's second wife was not fit to be custodian of the child.

Funerals at "Hursen's" Instead of at Home

A great many families in Chicago have preferred to have funerals conducted at one of "Hursen's" palatial establishments, instead of at home. There are many reasons for this:

No matter how large or how small a funeral may be, there is available an exclusive chapel, appointed in the utmost elegance, quietness and comfort.

This eliminates crowding and confusion. It assures complete seclusion. There are also many spacious rooms set apart for the private and exclusive use of families. These have the rich furnishings, the consoling comforts and the dignified environment of "home" itself.

Yet, there is no extra charge for these unusual facilities, which are found nowhere else in America in an establishment of this nature.

Such broadness of service, such extraordinary elegance, all at lower cost than has ever been available anywhere else—have established the fame of Hursen all over America. He is today the acknowledged authority on the technique of funeral direction.

Call Hursen, of course!

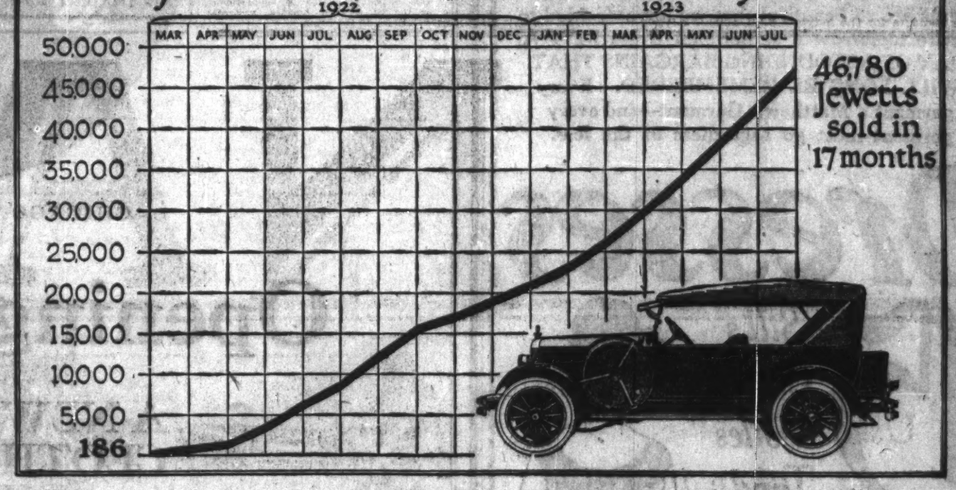
How Jewett Sales have Mounted Month by Month



Why Jewett Six Succeeds Like This

Look at Jewett's sales success; the chart tells the story. What made it possible?

No sales genius could have put this over. Nothing but startling quality, and performance at the price, could have done it. There are plenty of average satisfactory quality cars around Jewett's price, yet look at Jewett's first 17 months! Why? Why? Surely it is wise to learn of Jewett's qualities before you buy any car.

First, Jewett offers a powerful, sturdy Six at the cost of a Four. Jewett is the only car in the thousand-dollar class built by a maker of highest quality cars at $2000 and upwards. The Paige-built Jewett Six is a Paige-designed product through and through. Paige-built motor, Paige-type clutch and transmission, Paige-Timken axles, Paige ball-bearing steering spindles, Paige high-pressure oiling system.

Paige performance—the ability to pass most any car on any hill—the pick-up of 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear—the flexibility to go 2 to 60 miles an hour in high gear—are characteristics of the Jewett which have won it friends everywhere. And Jewett, like the Paige, is easy riding in spite of its moderate size. It rides easily because its springs are 80 per cent of its wheelbase, because it is a stoutly constructed car—200 pounds heavier—and will not bounce around.

Jewett handles as no car ever handled before, because it has but 11½ lbs. weight for every horsepower. You do not realize how powerful Jewett is compared with average cars until you raise the hood. Jewett's fifty horsepower motor fills the hood. You cannot imagine an emergency which such a car would not out-maneuver.

A ten-minute ride in a Jewett, with your own hands on the wheel, will tell you more than all the engineering facts or sales records in the world. You're welcome to drive the Jewett whenever you want—as far as you want—to prove to yourself the Jewett Six is not only the dominating car in the thousand-dollar class, but so fine a car that few need to pay more.

ZONING ROW WILL BE IRONED OUT, DEVER DECLARES

Rocks Ahead for Rebel Aldermen, Is Hint.

Peace was accomplished yesterday in the conference between Mayor Dever and the recalcitrant aldermen on the building and zoning committee who have threatened to thwart the mayor's plan to recreate the zoning board of appeals appointed by him two weeks ago and abolished by the legislature almost immediately after.

No sooner had the committee, headed by Ald. W. R. O'Toole [14th] and John H. Lyle [17th], passed out of the mayor's office than City Controller Martin J. O'Brien, Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Clayton Smith and Anton Cermak, president of the county board, hastened in. Secretaries tried unsuccessfully to telephone Corp Brennan.

And where, a few minutes before, puffed by the opposition to his selections by forty of the fifty aldermen, he had admitted he might not ask the council to approve reappointment of the appeal board, Mayor Dever announced that "there is no trouble which cannot and will not be ironed out."

Drastic Methods Hinted.

The "ironing," it was whispered, might be brought about by well placed hints that, unless the committee tomorrow morning recedes from its stand and recommends adoption of the recreating ordinance in the council's afternoon meeting, many aldermen will find themselves in disfavor with the administration. This disfavor, it was pointed out, may take the form of discharge of "cause" now holding temporary jobs and withdrawal of privileges to aldermen.

Assuming that council would restore power to review all decisions of the zoning board of appeals, two weeks ago the aldermen approved Allen B. Ford, James Young, James J. Kobyashek, and Charles Bostrom for the board. Then the legislature fixed the terms of board members at one, two, three, four and five years and decided that their rulings should be absolute, and reviewable only by a circuit court.

Insist They Were Deceived.

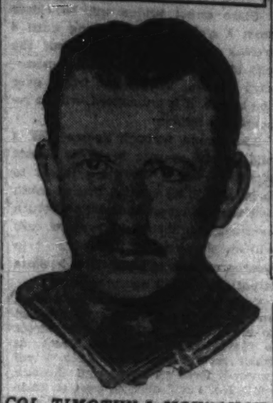
Insisting they had been tricked, several aldermen hailed the clause that said reappointment necessary as their weapon of revenge and began a campaign to prevent recreation of the board as originally named.

As a substitute for the mayor's plan the aldermen proposed to him that the board should consist of two aldermen, the health commissioner, the fire commissioner, and the corporation counsel.

"It would be a most serious mistake to constitute this board predominantly of city officials and aldermen," Eugene A. Rummler, chairman of the City club city zoning committee, told Mayor Dever. "It should be entirely free from political influence of any kind if the zoning ordinance is to be made effective and permanently reliable.

"If the council should fail to make possible the reappointment of the present well qualified board it will destroy confidence of the citizens in the zoning ordinance and will most detrimentally affect building operations and real estate values for a long time to come."

Fightin' Irish Hero



COL. TIMOTHY J. MOYNAHAN.

Col. Timothy J. Moynahan, world war hero, who led the New York Irish regiment, the 169th infantry, through the overseas campaign, will be the principal speaker at the Fourth of July celebration by the Clan na Gael of Illinois at Brand's park. Col. Moynahan will discuss "What Independence Day Means," from the viewpoint of citizen and soldier.

He was a major in the old Irish 69th National Guard regiment when America entered the war, and his regiment was the first New York guard unit to be federalized and go overseas. The history of the regiment dates back to civil war days. As an A. E. F. unit it was known as the 169th.

An innovation in the park celebration will be in the form of a great card party under the trees, and there will be the usual picnic games and athletic events, and dancing. Among the directors of the celebration are John A. McGarry, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, Assistant State's Attorney William J. Grace, former Judge George E. Barrett, Hugh O'Neil, and others.

5 KILLED, 3 HURT IN EXPLOSION ON U. S. DESTROYER

Pipes Burst and Steam Floods Fire Room.

Newport, R. I., June 30.—Five lives were lost aboard the destroyer Williamson today through the flooding of the fireroom with steam and hot water. Three other members of the fireroom crew were seriously injured and it is feared they cannot recover.

The Williamson went out from this port early today to test torpedoes on the long range outside Narragansett bay. Preparations were being made to fire the first torpedo when the accidental closing of a ventilator cover turned back the heated air escaping from the fireroom, the pressure causing the ventilator blower to fly to pieces and the steam and hot water pipes to burst.

No Chance to Escape.

The eight men in the fireroom had no chance to escape. Four were scalded to death almost instantly and the others dropped to the floor overcome by the rush of steam and hot water. One of the injured died later.

At great risk, Lieutenant Commander H. E. Knauss, in command of the Williamson, and other officers and members of the crew rushed into the fireroom and took out the injured men and the bodies. The injured were given first aid and the destroyer, which was not seriously damaged, speeded back to Newport.

A board of inquiry was appointed shortly after the destroyer had returned and immediately began an investigation. The board is headed by Commander F. H. Sadler.

Victims of a Heartless Undertaker

Daddy's long illness had wiped out his savings account so that when he passed away there was left to mamma only the one thousand dollars for which his life had been insured for their protection.

On the recommendation of an unthinking friend she selected a conscienceless undertaker of the profiteering breed. Overcome with grief and anguish, with no thought but to demonstrate her love for daddy, she was an easy victim of the wily rascal and was readily persuaded to choose a $450.00 casket.

To this day she does not know that others have bought and are buying the very same casket from Skeeles-Biddle Company for $220.00. Nor does she know that we would have refused to let her spend even that much money from her small funds.

Her experience is that of hundreds of others who are preyed upon by the most vicious gang of business pirates to be found anywhere, Chicago's colony of curbstone funeral directors.

Are you a father? See to it that your wife is warned. Take now the necessary steps to protect her. Make your own investigation and comparison of the prices asked by us and those demanded by the undertaker your widow would be likely to call. If you do not find our prices from one-third to two-thirds less than his we would be glad to have you tell us. If you find that our service and facilities are excelled by any other funeral directors in the city it will be news to us that we will appreciate.

We are the only funeral directors in Chicago having an office in New York City. Residents of New York desiring to arrange for funerals in Chicago, and Chicago families having funerals to be shipped to New York or any other city in the country will find our facilities for serving them most complete in every detail. Our New York office is located at 307 West 51st street, phone Columbus 6400.

Political Clubs Move to Put Him in Race.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.)

BERLIN, June 30.—Former Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, now an exile in Holland, will be a candidate for the presidency of the German republic at the next election.

EX-CROWN PRINCE FREDERICK WILLIAM.

Political clubs in Berlin and Potsdam have sent a petition to the reichstag, quoting legal opinions of leading Berlin attorneys, declaring the prince is eligible for president.

The movement is backed by the prince's friends in various parts of the country, and they are preparing to seek the support of the conservative forces. They assert Frederick was a popular leader during the war and is eminently qualified to become the leader of his people.

Allies Might Bar Him.

There is not anything in the German constitution, it is believed, to keep the crown prince out of the presidential race, but an awkward situation might arise in the refusal of the allies to permit the crown prince to return to Germany.

President Ebert will remain head of the German state until autumn of next year, when the general elections will be held. The various parties will nominate candidates, but the crown prince probably will stand independently, as any German has the right to become a candidate for this office. A plurality will elect him.

Has Strength in South Germany.

The candidacy of the crown prince will have the popular support of certain Germans, especially in the south, where monarchial traditions are maintained.

All the parties of the center and left certainly will oppose him. Leaders of the left and center look on the attempt to elect the prince as the first act towards restoration of the Hohenzollerns.

COP'S SLAYER ON HUNGER STRIKE AT CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., June 30.—John L. Whitfield, held in jail here for the slaying of Patrolman Dennis Griffin, is on a hunger strike.

Whitfield has eaten nothing since he was captured at Detroit last Tuesday, climaxing a man hunt over the mid-west since May 11. He has taken no food and today began refusing water. All he has had has been many cups of black coffee.

Whitfield constantly expresses himself in enigmas.

"I won't be here long," was one expression. "I'll beat them to it," was another.

In response to offers of food or questions as to his behavior, he merely replies, "I don't care for it."

Whitfield still maintains Officer Griffin was shot by accident during a tussel. But Coroner Hammond and Prosecutor Stanton say he lies. He is to be tried July 23.

Against the Law

Holding that it was against the law to shoot a bird other than a crow or a sparrow, Justice Harry G. Williams of Evanston yesterday fined Ferdinand Kutz of Niles Center, Ill., $5 and costs for shooting a parrot belonging to Mrs. Bertha Flugge of Morton Grove. The parrot escaped on June 6 and when Kutz saw it on one of his trees, he shot it, afterwards sending it to be stuffed. When Mrs. Flugge advertised her loss, he informed her of the killing, whereupon she swore out a warrant for his arrest.

TWO TURN TABLES ON POLICEMEN; CHARGE SLUGGING

Policeman James L. Dyer of the Hudson avenue station became a defendant instead of a complainant yesterday when he appeared in Judge Joseph La Buy's court. Harry Wesling, owner of a garage at 56 Schiller street, and Olaf Ternstrom, 24 East Division street, had turned the tables.

They obtained warrants for Policeman Dyer and another policeman known only as "John Doe," whom they charged beat them when they were arrested on suspicion of selling moonshine. A can of gasoline was confiscated for alcohol, Wesling said. Both men exhibited bruises. Judge La Buy issued the warrant for the policemen and discharged Wesling and Ternstrom. Dyer was allowed to sign his own bond.

EXTENSIVE HUNT ON FOR SLAYER OF 'GREEK KING'

Search for Angelo Barbous, coffee house owner, named by witnesses as a participant in the assassination Friday of two men in the west side Greek colony, became countrywide yesterday when no trace of the fugitive was found in Chicago. Capt. James McCann of Maxwell street police is working on the theory that Barbous, also known as Axell Mparmpas, has fled to New York. He is said to have many friends and adherents in the Greek coffee house district of the eastern city.

A coroner's inquiry into the killing of the two, one of whom was George [King George] Charoukas, and Thomas Visiadis, both leaders in the colony and coffee house proprietors, is also under way.

George Gerines, 29 years old, 733 South Halsted street, captured by Patrolman John P. Brown, was identified by eight witnesses as having fired upon Visiadis, known as "Peg Leg." While admitting he was present at the killings, which took place in a resort across the street from Hull house, he denies he did the shooting.

A evening preparatory course. Zenner's average was 92.8 per cent, one of the highest ever made. He has also been mentioned for a special scholarship at the University of Illinois

GRAFT JURY TO CONTINUE QUIZ FOR MONTH MORE

Sworn In Again Despite Scarcity of Funds.

The special grand jury which has been investigating city hall graft for the last six months was sworn in for another month's service by Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley in the Criminal court yesterday. The jury is now in the eleventh month of service, having been inaugurated by former Chief Justice Kickham Scanlan to investigate school board graft on Aug. 1, 1922.

At the same time it became known that the future of the investigation is in doubt owing to the shortage of funds to defray expenses. Of the $165,000 appropriated, only $5,000 remains, it was said.

Appeals for More Funds.

Assistant Attorney General Fred-erick A. Brown has appealed to the county board for an additional appropriation, but the matter has not been acted. Notwithstanding, the jury is anxious to go ahead with the inquiry. "The investigation is of such wide scope," said Prosecutor Brown, "that it is impossible to continue without additional funds. It will take about $5,000 to complete it. The $5,000 now asked will be used to prosecute the cases of Michael J. Faherty and Thomas D. Garry, both of whom have been indicted for their share in the looting during the Lundin-Thompson administration."

Other Work of Jury.

In addition to Faherty, who as president of the board of local improvements was one of the "big guns" in the Thompson political machine, and Garry, the grand jury has indicted two aldermen and two ex-aldermen. Indictments also have been returned against several others alleged to have figured in graft.

Two meetings will be held during the summer months, according to present plans and several phases of the inquiry will be pushed as rapidly as possible if the necessary funds are forthcoming. The matter is expected to be taken up by the county board on Monday.

FRACTURES SKULL IN FALL.

Harry Fish, 1531 Wilder street, Evanston, was taken to the Evanston hospital yesterday with a fractured skull received when he fell from a building at 906 Clinton place, Evanston, which he was working.

FINNEGAN BEATS ELLER FOR JUDGE IN FINAL RECOUNT

Official recount of last November's election ballots, completed yesterday by the board of election commissioners, indicates that without the benefit of 1,361 disputed ballots Assistant Probate Judge Philip J. Finnegan defeated Emanuel Eller for a Municipal judgeship by a majority of 1,116. The disputed ballots, with the recount report, were submitted to County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki for decision. On the original canvass report Eller had a majority of 848 votes.

Michael K. Sheridan, member of the board of assessors, was confirmed in his post by the recount, which shows he defeated George K. Schmidt by 21,357 votes, although attorneys for the latter disputed 8,655 ballots. The recount scaled 359 votes from the 21,666 credited to Sheridan in the canvass figures.

GOLDEN RULE OF THIS FIRM LETS MEN FIX WAGES

Mankind Is Honest, in Merchant's Eyes

New York, June 30.—[Special.]—A new kind of business organization has just been started in New York.

Actuated by somewhat the same convictions that caused Charles Garland to give up his inherited fortune, Fisher C. Baily, grandson of Joshua L. Baily & Co., dealers in dry goods, has started a dry goods commission business in which profit making is not to be the principal consideration. The business is to be conducted along altruistic lines.

In circulars which he is sending out to the southern cotton mills, Mr. Baily says:

"Our employés shall set, raise, and lower their own salaries.

"Our mills shall set the commission they will pay us."

Sure Mankind Is Honest.

Mr. Baily is convinced a large portion of humanity is honest and his circular sets forth his views as follows:

"We guarantee to deal with scrupulous honesty with every mill customer, agent or employé connected with us. We reserve the right immediately to sever connections with any one who is not absolutely honest in every word and deed, or who does not at all times tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

Everyone connected with us will consider himself his brother's keeper. We will reward or advance any one discovering, even the head of the house, not in every way living up to our standards."

Didn't "Earn" Inheritance.

"I did not earn what money I have," Mr. Baily said. "I inherited it and it came mostly from the southern cotton mills. If I can give them any service it would only be returning to them what originally came from them. It is not necessary that this should be a profit making concern."

Another new feature of Mr. Bailey's business code is that he will be only too glad to have his competitors steal his ideas.

BANDITS ROB CARD PLAYERS.

A friendly card game participated in by ten employés of the Railway Terminal and Warehouse company, 444 West Grand avenue, was interrupted yesterday afternoon by four armed bandits, who escaped with $110.

DRY AGENTS FACE PERJURY QUIZ BY U. S. GRAND JURY

Andrews to Give Himself Up Tomorrow.

Perjury charges against six of the "most active" agents of the prohibition department are expected to result from the complaint made by the retiring grand jury Friday in connection with the return of indictments against Roscoe C. Andrews, former state prohibition director; his chief field agent, John E. Earley, and eight others in connection with the Grommes-Ulrich "booze dividend" case.

This was announced yesterday at the United States attorney's office, where plans were being completed for a further investigation of the agents and submission of evidence against them to the succeeding grand jury, which will be sworn late this week.

Best Known Sleuths Involved.

"The half a dozen men involved in these charges, because they have been connected with most of the big cases, are the best known in the department," Harold L. Hart, assistant district attorney, said. "The reflection cast upon them, however, should not shadow all other agents. Many of them deserve praise for the assistance they gave the grand jury."

The grand jury, in its report for Federal Judge Wilkerson, charged the agents had hindered the investigation and connived with lawbreakers.

Andrews telephoned yesterday to Robert R. Levy, United States marshal, and stated he was arranging to give bond and planned to surrender himself tomorrow. Earley was not located and it was understood he was out of the city. Bond for all defendants will be $5,000 each.

More Raids Planned.

The impetus given liquor law enforcement by developments last week will be followed this week, it was said, with drives in which the marshal's office, the district attorney's department, and the prohibition officers will cooperate.

New raids will include not only Chicago, but communities at a considerable distance, it was learned. As rapidly as places are raided the district attorney's office is prepared to bring suits for permanent injunctions restraining them from reopening.

French Die in Morocco

CASABLANCA, Morocco, June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Heavy French losses are reported to have been suffered in the capture of the village of El-Mers, in the Atlas plateau, from rebel tribesmen. There was a hand to hand struggle, according to press dispatches, and the French lost, in killed or wounded, thirteen officers, twenty noncommissioned officers, and fifty soldiers.

MILLIONS TO BE ASKED TO FINISH STREET WIDENING

Bond issues, totaling several millions of dollars to complete street widening projects now under way, will be submitted to the people for approval within the next year, it was announced yesterday after a conference between Mayor Dever, Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch and Ald. Ross A. Woodhull [7th], chairman of the council finance committee.

It is possible that the council, in its last meeting tomorrow before summer vacation, may approve the submission of a $2,500,000 bond issue at the November election for the construction of a bridge at La Salle street.

Out of the $17,000,000 voted for the extension of Ogden avenue, the widening of Western avenue and the widening and double decking of South Water street, less than $10,000,000 remains, it was said yesterday. Work on the three streets will continue, Mayor Dever ordered, until all available money is exhausted.

"South Water street will cost between $22,000,000 and $25,000,000," declared J. J. Sloan. "From the original bond issue of $3,800,000 there is left about $2,500,000, and no actual work begun yet. More than $6,000,000 is needed to carry Ogden avenue through Goose Island and connect the two completed ends of the street."

Packard Single-Eight Touring Car

We ask you to judge the Packard Single-Eight—successor to the Twin-Six—on the basis that it surpasses in riding and performing qualities any other car on the European or American market.

These superiorities are the result of new principles of eight-cylinder engineering, which have been three years developing.

They embrace every phase of performance from the rush of seemingly endless power. to the finest points of acceleration and perfect balance, and exclusive provisions for braking, steering and control.

It is to the great credit of Packard engineers that these notable advances have been accomplished in the Single-Eight with all the simplicity, and all the extraordinary economy of maintenance, that distinguish its companion car—the Single-Six.

The terms of Morris Plan loans are simple and practicable and fair.

Thoughtful people who do not abuse credit facilities will find it possible to borrow on The Morris Plan to their advantage.

The Chicago Morris Plan Bank

A STATE BANK
21 North La Salle Street

Loans—For the average man.
The mechanic, clerk, professional or business man of moderate means who needs $50 to $5,000, or more, is as welcome at THE CHICAGO MORRIS PLAN BANK as the more prosperous merchant is at his commercial bank.

Loans are made for any sound and sensible reason—past due accounts, sickness, home improvements, taxes, discounting bills, and many other demands.

Time—Twelve months or less.
MORRIS PLAN notes are usually executed for 1 year though they may be given for any period of from 3 to 12 months.

Security—Character or collateral.
Comakers—The signatures of two other persons of good character with adequate income to guarantee the installment deposits are sufficient.

Comakers may be relatives, fellow workers, business men—your friends.

Collateral—MORRIS PLAN CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT, Savings Bank pass books, first mortgage bonds, listed stocks, or other negotiable security of market value are acceptable.

We strongly recommend the use of Liberty Bonds as collateral to loans in preference to selling them. By borrowing on Liberty Bonds you save the bond and the interest on your bonds.

Cost—Legal banking rates.
Notes are discounted at the rate of 7% per annum. A fee of $1.00 for each $50 or fraction borrowed is charged to cover examination cost, no fee exceeds $5.00 and no fee is charged if loan is not granted. Collateral loans are made at 7% per annum discount.

Loans over $250 paid before maturity are subject to a rebate of 4% per annum for the amount and time anticipated.

Payments—Within the range of your earnings.
For each $50 or fraction borrowed, you agree to deposit $1.00 per week on a Savings Account, the proceeds of which may be used to cancel the note when due. The minimum deposit required is $2.00 per week. Larger deposits are accepted and encouraged.

Deposits may be made on a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly basis as you prefer. It is suggested that borrowers arrange to pay on their own pay days.

Service—Prompt and confidential.
Loans are passed within a day or two after filing application—with few exceptions.

THE MORRIS PLAN BANK is a State Bank. All our inquiries are conducted discreetly and the information obtained is treated in confidence.

We have loaned $15,000,000.00 in six years.

Every one of our 72,000 borrowers has found our terms wisely designed to meet his need.

The Good MAXWELL

There is a world of meaning in the unprecedented increase of the good Maxwell on the streets of Chicago.

In brief, this growth is due to the public's recognition of the fact that the good Maxwell gives more for the money than it has been accustomed to getting.

The outstanding fine performance of the good Maxwell—its splendid sturdiness and reliability—its almost unbelievable economy—its advanced beauty—all confirm and emphasize the conception of the car which the whole buying public of Chicago now seems to have.

The Chicago dealer organization appreciates most keenly its obligations to the owners of such a fine car, and the good will which has come to it through its merchandise.

The good Maxwell dealer in your own neighborhood—he is not far from you—is a good man to know.

SOVIETISM FOR U. S. FAR AWAY, VIEW OF TROTZKY

American Capital to Ruin Europe, He Says.

MOSCOW, June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—The "revolution" in America is far distant and this constitutes a condition which can be combated only by the creation of a proletarian "United States of Europe," declares Leon Trotzky, soviet war minister, in a lengthy article in the newspaper Pravda indicating the view that America will be the last stronghold of capitalism.

LEON TROTZKY.

"Closer economic cooperation among the European nations is necessary," he adds, "as the only means of saving our continent from economic disintegration and enthrallment by the mighty American capital.

"Having got what she wanted," he continues, "America withdrew her hands from the European mess and returned home, and she is now calmly awaiting the agony of European economy to reach a crisis in which Europe may be bought up, as was Austria, for little money.

U. S. Strengthened by War.

"America emerged from the war not weakened, but strengthened. The internal power of the American bourgeoisie is still very great. The revolution in America therefore is in the distant future."

Trotzky declares the workers of Europe must be shown the way to revolution regardless of how the movement develops on the other continents. Europe, he concludes, can no more wait for the American revolution than could Russia for the European.

Trotzky predicts that "the workers and peasants of Europe, blockaded by capitalistic America and, at first perhaps by Great Britain also, will be able to withstand the onslaught and develop a close military and economic alliance."

Sees Ruin of Europe.

"We cannot close our eyes," he says, "to the fact that the danger of the United States bringing about the ruin of Europe and preparing to enter upon the right of inheriting its dominions makes it absolutely imperative for the European nations to combine firmly in a United States of European workers and peasants."

The principal reasons for the slow development of the "world revolution," Trotzky thinks, were the false hopes built in Europe on "America's Wilsonism, the philanthropic penetration of the famine stricken districts, the American loans, and so on."

However, he predicts that the European revolution will inevitably give impetus to the movement of the proletariat in America and all over the world.

LEVANT ORPHANAGE NAMED AFTER FORMER CHICAGO RAIL CHIEF

The first home to be established in the Levant for working boys beyond the regular orphanage age limit is to be named after a Chicagoan. The new home will be known as the George E. Smith home, in honor of Capt. George E. Smith, 5856 Dorchester avenue, formerly assistant division superintendent of the New York Central railroad, and now assistant director general of the Near East Relief in Trans-Caucasia. Capt. Smith organized the Alexandropol orphanage, where the Near East Relief is now sheltering 2,000 famine children.

ALLIES AGAIN AT ODDS ON TERMS OF TURK TREATY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LAUSANNE, June 30.—There is little likelihood of the allied proposition being presented to the Turks before Monday or Tuesday now as the differences of the allies were not settled tonight.

An anomalous situation has resulted from the fact that France, after doing all possible to keep Great Britain from getting the straits during the early part of the Lausanne conference, now asks the British to agree to postpone the evacuation of the straits until the negotiations over the Ottoman debt are settled.

These negotiations have been taken out of the treaty discussion and will be carried on after the signature of peace according to the French plan received from Paris Thursday night. It may take another year or two to get the Ottoman debt question settled.

SWISS BALK AT MERGER OF RED CROSS SOCIETIES

Want Control of International Body.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 30.—An ultimatum is being sent to the International Red Cross society by the League of Red Cross Societies, which is pro-ally and which was formed in 1919 by the late H. P. Davison, a partner of J. Pierpont Morgan.

An effort is still being made to amalgamate these organizations, which both wish to act as the international representative of the forty-six national Red Cross societies. The International Red Cross, which is a self perpetuating body formed of Geneva citizens, actually demands fifteen votes in the new council for itself, but the forty-six national societies are to have only one each. This block of fifteen votes would hold the balance of power in the council of sixty-one.

America Larger Contributor.

America, which provides $180,000 annually out of the $200,000 contributed by societies of the League of Red Cross Societies, would have only one vote as compared with Geneva's fifteen votes. Geneva itself does not donate a single cent to the budget of its organization, which is made up by the national societies. It now has a deficit of about $100,000.

For some years at least the American Red Cross would continue to provide the bulk of the funds for the projected amalgamated Red Cross as it is now doing for the League of Red Cross Societies.

The International Red Cross, which was founded at Geneva in 1863 and which was pro-German during the war, also demands control of the secretariat of the amalgamated organization.

Amalgamation Is Certain.

The amalgamation is inevitable because many national Red Cross societies, such as the British, Italian, Japanese, and Norwegian, have been growing in importance and are demanding one international body instead of two on the ground of efficiency.

Two Geneva delegates walked out of the conference this week when their exorbitant demands were refused, but some agreement must be reached.

The league leaders today are discussing the nature of the ultimatum which will be sent to the Geneva organization. It will probably include a threat to open warfare and the withdrawal of all support.

The American Red Cross, through the league, is actually helping to support the Geneva organization.

Turks to Seize All Greek Ships at Constantinople

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 30.—[United Press.]—All Greek ships coming to Constantinople will be seized, Turkish authorities notified the allies today.

B. & O. GIVES PAY BOOST TO CLERKS, STATION MEN

Wage increases, effective July 1, for members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employés on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad have been agreed upon following conferences between representatives of the carrier and the union, it was announced last night.

Clerks are to receive a boost of 10 cents a day and other groups from 1 to 2½ cents an hour. An agreement allowing time and one-half after eight hours and on Sundays and holidays for all classes represented by the brotherhood also was reached.

Representatives of the big four train service brotherhoods, which are protesting the proposal of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway to move a passenger and freight terminal from Sedalia, Mo., to New Franklin, will be heard before the United States railroad labor board tomorrow. The men contend the move would be a hardship to them because they have established permanent homes at Sedalia.

GOD'S OUT-OF-DOORS

VISIONS arise in the minds of men when they meet God's Great Out-of-Doors. Business is swept aside and the cares which beset the housewife fade in their significance in the brilliance of Nature.

Swift flowing rivers over which bend great beckoning trees, the white ribbon of roadway leading on and on inviting the mind to the vast empire of outdoor charm, mountains and hills, the expanse of plains stretching into the horizon are resting places for surfeited eyes.

Thoughts like these, of the Great Out-of-Doors, must unfortunately remain but thoughts in the minds of those dejected ones who for the sake of a little saving, must cherish the hope of someday finding themselves among those who enjoy the reviving influence of Nature.

The man in business, the housewife with her irksome indoor tasks find God's Out-of-Doors a soothing remedy for tired nerves. What a relief to be able to be for a week or two, with rivers, trees and open fields.

The experience of such excursions goes back into the memory as one of "The Good Things of Life" and it is made possible in most instances by saving, and it becomes assured by investment in safe Real Estate Bonds.

BOY BANDITS GET $5,500 PAY ROLL IN OFFICE HOLDUP

Cash Drawer in Webster Hotel Yields $225.

Robbers yesterday morning held up the offices of Burson Bros., plastering contractors at 3231 Cottage Grove avenue, obtaining $5,500, and the Webster hotel, 2160 Lincoln parkway, where they got $225 from the cash drawer. Harry Burson told Lieut. John Egan of the Stanton avenue station that he was filling pay envelopes when three bandits entered. The leader, he said, was a boy appearing to be about 17 years old. Everyone in the office, William Burson, Miss Ruth Hutton, 3141 East 72d street; Thomas E. McCarthy, 6122 Indiana avenue, and Albert Pomkins, employés, were forced to stand against a wall while the robbers scooped up the money. The boy bandit threatened to shoot Miss Hutton when she protested against being handled roughly, she said.

The Bursons and their employés were then locked in a rear room, and the bandits stepped into a waiting automobile and were soon out of sight.

Throw Checks on Floor.

It was about 4:30 a. m. when four men entered the Webster hotel and drew revolvers to James H. Milliken, night manager. Checks totaling hundreds of dollars were thrown on the floor, only the currency being taken.

Sergt. Thomas McMullin of the Stanton station fired several shots at four men escaping in an automobile following Paul Klinnert, owner of a soft drink parlor at 4125 Armitage avenue, early in the morning. They had obtained about $600.

Battle Auto Bandits.

Some time later, Cicero police engaged in a revolver battle with men believed to be the same ones McMullin fired at. It was believed two of them were wounded.

Sergeants Burke and Rodonsky of Cicero sighted the bandit car wildly speeding east over Roosevelt road at Austin avenue. The policemen drew their guns and signaled the car to halt, but it roared past, its four occupants pouring a volley of shots over their shoulders. The police returned the fire and pursued, but the bandit automobile outdistanced them.

On account of the demand for transportation to the Jackson Park bathing beach, two of the south side motor bus routes are to be extended, beginning today, so that they terminate at the beach. The routes are No. 1 and No. 7, at present terminating at Midway and Stony Island avenue, and Jackson park and 56th street respectively. The busses will operate on the new routes only between the hours of 2 p. m. and 11 p. m.

ONE ARMED HERO OF 'KILL AND KILL' FAME NEARS U. S.

French General Will Visit Chicago.

New York, June 30.—French and American veterans of the western front and officers of the army and navy will greet Gen. Henri Joseph Eugene Gouraud, one armed hero of the French Dardanelles campaign and the battle of Champagne, when he arrives tomorrow on the France, to be a guest of the Rainbow division.

The grizzled veteran, who was five times wounded during the world war, will remain in the United States six weeks, and will attend the reunion of the Rainbow division in Indianapolis July 15, the fifth anniversary of the great French drive he directed in the Champagne. He will arrive in Chicago July 15.

Veteran of Many Fights.

Gen. Gouraud fought six colonial campaigns against the natives in the Soudan, Senegal, the Congo, Mauritania and Morocco, before he was recalled to France at the outbreak of the world war.

He had just taken over command of the French forces in the Dardanelles when he was severely wounded in action. Undaunted, he directed his troops from his bedside until the gravity of the wounds in leg and arm necessitated his removal to France. On board the hospital ship he asked of the surgeon how long he would have to wait before he could fight again, and was told a year, at least.

Gave to God for France.

"And if you amputate my arm?" he suggested.

"Three weeks," was the answer.

"Then cut it off," he ordered.

A few days later he wrote a letter with his left hand to his mother, saying, "I am getting on, minus an arm, which I offered to God for France."

Soon afterward, in command of the sector of the western front between Reims and Massiges, he led the Champagne campaign, crying to his men, "Kill, and kill many, until they cry enough."

Success after success crowned his tactics, and in December, 1918, he entered Strasbourg at the head of the Fourth French army.

The International convention of the Baptist Young People's Union in America including Canada, will be held in Boston, Mass., beginning next Wednesday and it is expected that Dr. White's resignation will be accepted and a successor elected at that time.

Dr. White will sail immediately following the Boston convention for the Baptist World Alliance meeting in Stockholm, Sweden. He expects to tour Europe.

4 CHICAGO BOYS' "HOBO" VACATION HALTED BY COPS

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—Following a successful "side door Pullman" trip from Chicago to Baltimore, four Chicago high school boys got into trouble at the beginning of their homeward journey. They were arrested by Railroad Detective Joseph Capnike in the Baltimore and Ohio yards just as they were climbing into a box car.

They are James Murry, William Rooney, and Joseph Fowle, each 18, and Martin Coleman, 21 years old. When they explained to Magistrate Formollen, in police court, that they were "bumming around the country for a vacation," he dismissed them. He told them to find work here until they could afford to pay their railroad fare to Chicago.

FURNISHED BY———

You can always tell a house or a room which has been furnished by or under the supervision of the owner. It may be poor, or it may be magnificent; it may be in good or bad taste according to one's standards. Nevertheless, it bears the stamp of individuality and a homelike atmosphere which no amount of outside assistance can achieve.

There are some families who chose their furniture and floor coverings as they would their groceries—on stock lines. Or they give their dealer or interior decorator a free hand and meekly foot the bill.

As a result, they find themselves restless in an environment chosen by another. And they have missed the real joys of home furnishing.

BRIDGE SURVEY BY SPRAGUE PUT UP TO COUNCIL

Commissioner Estimates Cost at $12,500.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The city council will be asked tomorrow whether it desires to guess or to know with certainty what would be the difference between fixed and movable bridges over the river in the city's commercial interests.

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, is willing to undertake a comprehensive investigation and make an authoritative statement of the facts. To do that he estimates he will need $12,500. The finance committee believes this expenditure would be worth while, and will recommend it to the city council.

What Survey Would Do.

If the council approves, Col. Sprague will put ten men to work to collect data and information on the following lines:

A complete traffic count over all bridges, with estimates of anticipated increases, for the purpose of determining the saving in time for all land traffic.

A survey of the river traffic to show the diminution in river use by large vessels and the high cost of such use, and also a statement outlining the development of river barge transportation.

An investigation of all dock property, showing its value and uses.

To Estimate Bridges Needed.

List of new bridges required over two decades to adequately provide for the city's anticipated land traffic needs. Also investigation of existing movable bridges to determine their adaptability to converting each into a fixed bridge, with estimates of cost.

A study of types of fixed bridges and the selection of one suited for use in Chicago, together with design and estimate of cost.

A comparison of construction, operation, and maintenance costs extending over a sufficient period to thoroughly establish the cumulative savings resulting between fixed and movable bridges. This will include a comparison of traffic capacity of movable versus fixed bridges.

A survey of future barge requirements with special reference to terminal and dock facilities, outer harbor requirements and facilities, and legal phases and authorizations involved.

Benefits to City.

With a report on all of these subjects, Col. Sprague believes that the city would be able to discuss the subject and determine exactly what should be done and have sufficient and definite information with which to back up any reasonable claim advanced.

The only official investigation which the city has ever made is a rough estimate of the saving which would result to the city treasury from fixed bridges as compared with movable bridges. There was no effort made to ascertain what effect the closing of the river to large vessels would have upon particular industries located on the stream, nor upon the value of the property abutting. Indeed, the city has no trustworthy information about the amount of commerce shipped on the river.

CHICAGO BANKER QUITS TREASURY; BUREAUS SHIFTED

Washington, D. C., June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—A reorganization within the treasury department, with the shifting of several important bureaus, is provided for in regulations effective at midnight tonight.

Simultaneous with the issuing of the regulations it became known that Assistant Secretary Edward Clifford, whose jurisdiction within the department will be materially changed under the reorganization, is to resign.

Mr. Clifford declined to make any statement as to his resignation, but friends insisted that it had no connection with the organization. They said Mr. Clifford had determined some time ago to return to the banking and financial business. His home is in Evanston, Ill., and before joining the treasury he was in the banking business in Chicago.

Under the reorganization regulations the coast guard service and the supervising architect's office are removed from Mr. Clifford's jurisdiction. Previously the customs service had been transferred from Mr. Clifford's office.

Two of the three deputy controllers of the country, as well as Controller of the Currency Henry M. Dawes, are Chicago men. The other deputy, Joseph W. JUNE MARRIAGES TOP SAME MONTH LAST YEAR BY 167

June marriages this year topped the record of 1922 by 167, it was stated yesterday by Louis C. Legner, chief clerk of the marriage license bureau at the County building.

At the same time it was announced that beginning tomorrow, marriage licenses will cost $3, instead of $1.50.

Licenses were issued this June to 5,191 couples, as compared to 5,024 in 1922. Nearly 6,000 licenses were issued in 1920, Mr. Legner said.

ORPHANS AND OLD FOLKS WILL GET YEARLY OUTING

Harry N. Fowler, president of the Orphans' Automobile day association, has called a meeting of directors of the association for tomorrow at the Lexington hotel, to arrange the 1923 annual outing of all orphans and old folks in Chicago's homes. Such outings have been held for the last sixteen years, beginning with the children from one institution only and now including all institutions of the city.

Automobile owners will be asked to pledge use of their cars for the children and old folks from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. on August 15. On that day the children and old people will be taken for their usual ride over the boulevards and afterwards to Lincoln park for their grand frolic and dinner, returning to their homes at 4:40 p. m.

MUSIC STUDENT'S CHARGES OF JILT DENIED BY ADMAN

Charles W. Jackson, member of the Gundlach Advertising company, and alleged author of a packet of love letters made public by Mrs. Mary West, Grand Rapids, Mich., music student, when she filed suit for $50,000 in the Superior court, alleging breach of promise to marry, yesterday filed a formal denial of the charges.

"Coming and defending the wrong complained of," the plea, filed for Jackson by Attorney Howard Wykoff, stated, "this defendant avers he is not guilty of the charges, and asks that the suit be dismissed."

Rumors that Mrs. West would withdraw her suit gained no credence yesterday. It had been reported her father, Judge Willis B. Perkins of the Circuit court, Kent County, Mich., had insisted the suit be dismissed, and had come to Chicago to make necessary arrangements.

THEY EVEN CRY ON SCHEDULE AT CAMP NURSERY

Baby Dormitory Liveliest Spot at Algonquin.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

Do you know the liveliest place within a radius of a thousand miles of Chicago?

It is the cottage dormitory at Algonquin, equipped with its infant nursery. Built primarily by the churches of Oak Park, through the deep personal interest of Dr. William E. Barton, pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park, it was enlarged last year to double its former capacity.

Now it is fairly bubbling over with infants, tiny infants, two and three months old, and ranging on up the years to the years. Everything that can be done for babies is done for them. Infant welfare nurses look after them to see that they are fed properly and clothed properly, that they sleep when they should and cry when they should. In fact they are on the strictest schedule out there. Still, even so, the nursery is voted by everyone around as altogether the liveliest place you could possibly find.

Experts Supervise Play.

In addition to the health activities toward the older children and women as well as towards the babies, there are special recreational and educational activities on the daily camp program. Experienced play directors supervise the play hours and there are also some special teachers provided by the Chicago board of education.

And now we have motion picture stars joining our galaxy of notables interested in camp and ice philanthropies.

From a friend of Thomas Meighan came word of a generous contribution toward the kiddies' outings this summer. And Harold Lloyd, who was here in one of our blazingly hot spells, put himself on record as contributing towards the free ice fund.

Thanks for the bathing suits. They are still coming in—and still needed.

Acknowledgment is made for contributions as follows:

$500,000 LEFT BY BROTHER AND SISTER IN WILLS

Wills of a brother and sister, each disposing of an estate of approximately $250,000, were filed for probate yesterday before Frederick W. Elliott, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. They were the wills of Thomas S. Chalmers, president of Chalmers & Williams, mining machinery manufacturers, and Mrs. Joan Chalmers Williams, who died within a week of each other last March.

Chalmers' estate is divided in three equal parts, one to the Country Home for Convalescent Children at Prince Crossing, Ill., and one to each of Mrs. Williams' two children, Joan and Norman.

Mrs. Williams left her property to her husband, Norman Williams, and the two children.

GRACIOUS AND KINDLY MANON WINS RAVINIA

Schipa Thrills Audience in Dream Song.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Ravinia Park, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—This report ought to dwell almost exclusively on the lyric virtues of Tito Schipa and Thalia Sabanieva, since their union of talents made Massenet's Manon as gracious and kindly and altogether charming an entertainment as one is likely to find in an intensive survey of the opera houses of the world. It happened at Ravinia last night.

It was, perhaps the oldsters will say, a Manon of small proportions, but the proportions were there and carefully fitted. As a matter of fact, Manon, with the possible exception of one scene, is much more charming when played to a small scale.

Schipa Like Tenor Angel.

I can admit that Mr. Schipa and Miss Sabanieva are neither of the type to tear the passions of the St. Sulpice scene to tatters in the vociferous manner of some of their predecessors, but that fact seems of slight importance in the memory of some of the other proceedings of the evening.

When Mr. Schipa, for instance, reaches a number like the dream song of the second act, he sings it like a young tenor angel. There was a perceptible interval last night when one might have thought that Ravinia would enter a new operatic tradition and begin giving encores.

Makes Rôle Explicable.

Also out of all the artists that this department has been called upon to observe in the rôle, Miss Sabanieva is the only one ever able to make the mental processes of that improper young female, Manon, at all explicable or even understandable during the same act. It was not because she was as graceful as a kitten or that in the part she had about as few morals as one, which was true enough, but because when she made up her mind to start down the easiest way, her resolution was plain to the audience.

It was a good performance and a good show, done with youth and the manner of high comedy. Manon can be an entertainment worth going miles to witness when it is done as it was last night.

Smoot Sees Harding Easy Winner in 1924

President Harding will be renominated without opposition and reelected without a real fight, prophesied Senator Smoot of Utah yesterday as he passed through Chicago on his way to Europe. Henry Ford will be a candidate, but will make little difference, he added.

GUNSMITH TESTS EX-PRIEST'S GUN BEFORE JURORS

Montreal, June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Trial of Adelarde Delorme, former Roman Catholic priest, charged with the murder of his half-brother, Raoul, in January, 1922, took a dramatic turn today when Oscar Haines, gunsmith, made a special test to substantiate his contention that the three bullets taken from the slain student's body were fired from an automatic pistol owned by the prisoner.

Calling the jury's attention to a peculiar longitudinal scratch on the bullets taken from Raoul's body, Haines then went to the basement under the courtroom and fired another bullet from the gun. It showed the same marking as the others.

Haines testified that he had sold the gun to Adelarde Delorme several weeks before the slaying.

BIBLE STUDY FOR YOUTHS INCLUDES BALL GAME PASS

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Attending daily vacation Bible school became unusually attractive to several thousand boys and girls who will enroll at some 200 centers tomorrow morning when they learned that the owners of the White Sox and Cub's ball parks have promised to give every student free admission to games on certain days. The announcement of the ball magnates' generosity was made yesterday.

Plan Athletic Field Day.

A final field day for individual schools or groups of schools is also planned with stunts, races, athletic tests, and prizes.

Every pupil will have something to do besides study and there will be a lively competition to decide which school will have the finest display of handiwork.

A three days' teacher training conference at Northwestern university's loop building, 31 West Lake street, closed yesterday with an attendance of more than 1,200. During the five weeks of the daily vacation Bible schools the teachers will have one session of instruction each week.

16 Denominations Coöperate.

The management of the daily vacation Bible schools is a commission of the Chicago Church federation with sixteen denominations coöperating. Attendance is open to children without reference to creed, color or nationality. Schools are to be conducted in Evanston and Oak Park and in some of the residential church districts as well as in the congested districts of the city, where the need was first felt. Children from well-to-do homes enjoy the schools, it is said, as much as do children of the poor.

FORCED TO EARTH IN STORM

BY CAPT. E. V. RICKENBACKER

FINAL ARTICLE.

AFTER spending more hours over enemy lines than any other American aviator during the war, according to the official records, without a single crash or "washout," as it is called in aviation, it fell to my lot to encounter my first accident at the very start of my first attempt to fly across the American continent in an airplane.

The general staff of the original contingent of the American expeditionary forces, with which I sailed on the Baltic in 1917, was holding a banquet in the spring of 1921 to commemorate the event.

I decided to make the trip from San Francisco to Washington in a ship. Taking off at San Diego, where the plans had been rebuilt for the long journey, I headed for 'Frisco, which was to be the official starting point.

A heavy storm was raging. I was forced to return to Los Angeles. With an unusually heavily laden ship, an airdrome none too large, and the field a sea of mud from a week of rain, I landed. The plane rolled about fifty feet, and flopped over on its back in the twinkling of an eye. It was my first smashup in an airplane.

I tried again, taking off at noon the following day, arriving south of San Francisco at 6 o'clock in the evening.

At 4 o'clock the next morning I zoomed into the air, hoping to make North Platte, Neb., a distance of 1,600 miles, before dark. After an hour and a half's attempt to feel my way out of the heavy and low hanging fog, I was forced to land. At 8:32 a. m. a hole appeared in the wall of darkness over the mountains from the Pacific side, and I again headed eastward.

Safely across the treacherous Sierra range, I pointed for Salt Lake City and was over at an altitude of 10,000 feet at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. I would be fortunate to reach Cheyenne by dark.

In my anxiety to make my destination, the hours turned to minutes. At 6 o'clock the sun started to set behind the mountains. Gradually it became darker. Arriving over Cheyenne, I could not locate the flare lights which were to mark the landing field for descent from the darkness. Denver appeared to the south of me, I reasoned. After thirty minutes of maneuvering I decided that I had been over Denver in the first place. So, with full speed ahead, I returned to Cheyenne.

Unfortunately for me, the men had placed the flaring T at the wrong end of the field, with the wind instead of into the wind.

I placed my wheels, as customary, about 100 feet before the T, rolled for 150 feet after a perfect landing, and then struck a six foot ditch. The ship turned completely over, knocking off the tail and tearing the motor from the plane.

The next morning I was shipped as a package in a mail plane, changed ships at Omaha, and landed in Chicago at 6 o'clock in the evening. Before breakfast the following morning a ship from Rantoul, Ill., was flown over for my use. I arrived at Dayton, O., about 10 o'clock in the morning, with another ship ready for me to take off.

Over Wheeling, W. Va., the clouds were very heavy. The nearer I approached the mountains the lower the clouds descended, the peaks blending into them. I would have to land. High voltage wires seemed to net the entire countryside. I jockeyed around for a landing field. Up one valley I flew, crossed the pass, and returned by the next lane. There was no place to land. Hopefully, I flew into a third valley. There was a terrific wind pressure from above. In a flash I was forced down to within 200 feet of the ground. It was land or crash. So I came down on the only clearing in sight.

I wouldn't shut off the motor. I was afraid I couldn't get it started again. I had to be in Washington in time for the dinner or be disgraced. After an hour and a half I attempted to take off. But the load was too heavy to plow through the softened soil. I drained off fifty gallons of gas and relieved the air pressure in the tires so that they would flatten out and ride over the soft muck, instead of cutting into it.

Thus I reached Washington a few minutes after 5 o'clock—one hour before banquet time.

I was horrified a few hours later to hear the sad news of the destruction of a plane carrying five very dear friends by the same storm about 100 miles south of Washington.

MIKE LAUDS GIBBONS

SHELBY, Mont., June 30.—(Special.)—Billy Miske, retired heavyweight boxer, who is in Shelby to see the Dempsey-Gibbons bout, thinks that Gibbons has a chance to defeat the champion. Miske is qualified to speak. He fought Dempsey three times, once for the championship at Benton Harbor, Mich., on Sept. 6, 1920, when he was knocked out in three rounds, and in two no-decision bouts in 1918. He has had even more experience with Gibbons, having met the challenger in three no-decision contests, won once on a foul and lost on a decision in ten rounds.

Miske says he feels sure Gibbons will last at least ten rounds if he doesn't elect to box Dempsey too much.

JACK KEARNS.

SHELBY, Mont., June 30.—Maj. J. R. Lane of Lewistown, Mont., is the new boss of the proposed fistic carnival, heavyweight championship fight at Shelby on July 4 between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons. The selection of the man who was seriously injured when Earl Sande's airplane crashed to the ground some three weeks ago was announced today after Jack Dempsey, Joe J. Mulumby, the original promoter; Jim Johnson, mayor of Shelby, and Mike Collins, auctioneer, assigned all their rights in the show to Maj. Lane as trustee.

The change in management was made necessary when the twenty Montana men, who have pledged the third payment of $100,000 to Jack Kearns, stated that they must have first grab at the gate. They did not like the present mixed up condition of affairs and Lane finally said he would take all of the affair if Mulumby et al. would step aside.

Sign New Agreement.

This they appeared glad to do, according to Judge E. Ayres, who will act as trustee and Lane's personal counsel. An agreement was drawn up and signed by the original promoters, however, will cut in on the profits if any materialise. They probably won't be able to buy an all day sucker with their profits, according to the present outlook.

The men behind the last $100,000 are still are waiting to hear from some of the men who pledged their bit to make the July 4 show go over. Maj. Lane said that some of the money already was in hand, but did not make up the amount. He assured everybody, however, that the fight would go on July 4.

Here's Lane's Statement.

The following statement regarding the status of the fight was made late this afternoon by Maj. Lane, through Judge Ayres:

"All promoters of the fight have made complete assignment to Maj. J. R. Lane, as trustee. Maj. Lane accepts this trust after I had consented to act as his private lawyer and counsel and after securing the advice of George H. Stanton, president of the Stanton Trust and Savings Bank, H. A. Singleton, of the Monarch Lumber company, and many other prominent, professional and business men of Great Falls.

"I want to say that this committee is acting on the square and the cards are on the table. We have raised a portion of the money necessary to the payment of the purse needed, and have no reason to believe but that the fight will take place as scheduled on July 4.

Kearns Lends His Aid.

"I have had a talk with Jack Kearns, manager of Dempsey, and am more than anxious to aid in every way. As an earnest of his intention to aid he has given to Mr. Lane his 33 1-3 per cent of the picture privileges and has given to those subscribing the fund for making the last purse.

Kearns in on Movies.

"In addition to the 33 1-3 per cent of the picture privileges as given by Kearns, it is understood that the 33 1-3 per cent given by Johnson, Collins, et al, also

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Scoring the winning run on a double steal in the eighth inning, the peppery Cubs downed the Cardinals, 3 to 2, and took the jump on the St. Louis outfit in the series at the north side yesterday. Some 12,000 fans were treated to weird baseball during the contest, for both nines were trying hard to win and players pulled a couple of plays that had even the umpires stuttering.

Vic Keen, who set the Cards back with four hits, pulled a play for the well known "hook" when the Bears scored their winning run in the eighth. With O'Farrell on third and Miller on second and two out, a double steal was started, Miller making second and O'Farrell sliding in under Ainsmith. Ainsmith in falling over O'Farrell dropped the ball and lost sight of it, and Keen waiting his turn at bat picked the leather up and handed it to the Card catcher.

Calls Miller Out.

Miller rounded second and sprinted to third, and immediately after Keen picked up the ball Cardinal players swarmed around Ump. Finneran behind the plate like flies at molasses and after stuttering around for a few long minutes and holding a conference with Umpire Barry McCormick on the bases, Finneran called Miller out for interference, but O'Farrell's winning run was over.

Keen pitched great ball for the Killefers. For six innings he shut the Cards out without a hit and Flack was the only man to reach second base. Then in the seventh, the Rickey men ganged on Vic for three singles, which with a wild pitch, a sacrifice, and an error shoved two runs over to knot the count, but that was all for Keen yielded only one more blow.

Cubs Score First in Third.

Wee Willie Doak was laced for nine hits by the Killefers, the first run appearing in the third, Keen scoring on singles by Statz and Hollocher. The second marker came in the fifth on singles by Keen and Statz, Hollocher's sacrifice bunt and Grantham's sacrifice fly, while the winning run in the eighth originated from one bases by O'Farrell and Miller and Friberg's sacrifice and went over on the double steal.

George Grantham stole his nineteenth base of the season in the first inning, increasing his lead over the rest of the league. Friberg, Grantham and Miller put a busy afternoon in the defensive ring.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

WAKERS FAVOR DEMPSEY.

READERS of The Wake pick Jack Dempsey to defeat Tom Gibbons next Wednesday by a straw vote of 145 to 70.

These figures are somewhat surprising. In what betting there has been Champion Jack has been the money choice at from 3 to 1 to 5 to 1. Many of the Gibbons voters explained, however, that their selection was dictated as much by hope as by confidence. In general, boxing skill was advanced as the reason for picking the St. Paul battler.

Dempsey's admirers advanced all the well known arguments in his support. One of the most popular was

Gibbons' showing against Harry Greb and the inquiry, "What would Jack do to Harry?"

It was notable that Dempsey's followers predicted a quicker finish than those supporting Gibbons. Averaging the Dempsey estimates, the finish should come early in the sixth round. Averaging the Gibbons votes, the end would occur in the eleventh round. Here is the result of The Wake straw ballot:

What They Handed Us.

Adam and Eve on a summer day
Walked through the Garden of Eden, they say.
Eve spied an apple not far away,
So Adam was ordered to get it.
Poor Adam obeyed the forbidden command,
And he gazed at the apple he held in his hand,
And sorrowfully murmured, "I know we'll be canned
From the beautiful garden this minute."

From a Hotbox of cans, they were ordered to toil,
To cook and to pare and to wash in the soil,
And to do all this strictly according to Hoyle
In the job they'd descended to can.
So now we must labor from morning to night,
Never ending, relentless, we put up a fight
For our very existence. By Gosh, it ain't right,
So why shouldn't all of us cans?

Bubble.

HARDING CUP WINNERS HOME

(Picture on page 5.)

The Chicago team which won the President Harding trophy in the national public links championship arrived home yesterday. Manager Arthur W. Dixon had the silver trophy, which Chicago will hold for a year. Bob White, John Dawson, and Matt Jans brought back large gold medals presented by the United States Golf association, and Ted Lloyd, who returned Thursday, will get his this week. Pittsburgh, Buffalo, and Dayton have made bids for the 1924 championship.

YOUNG HACKL TAKES CHICAGO DISTRICT TITLE

BY JOE DAVIS.

George Hackl Jr. of Midlothian, graduate from the Lincoln park course and freshman at the University of Chicago, won the championship of the Chicago District Golf association, defeating Allan Loeb, of Ravisloe, 5 and 4, in the 18 hole final at Indian Hill yesterday.

To gain his place in the deciding round Hackl defeated young Ira L. Couch of Glen View, last year's title holder, 7 and 6, while Loeb reached the final bracket by a meritorious win over Paul Gardner, Onwentsia, 5 and 3.

Having won the main honor of the sixth annual tournament of the C. D. G. A., Hackl will play off with Howard Schendorf of Briergate, for the low score medal at 1 o'clock today. They tied at 158 on Thursday.

The tournament is considered a stepping stone to higher honors and Hackl's win fulfills the belief of many that he will take high rank among the golfers of the country.

George started out by winning the first two holes, Loeb's first two shots on the first hole landing up in the rough and his drive on the second being in the rough. The next two holes were halved, both missing twelve foot putts on the fourth. The fifth was even, and so was the sixth, where they both missed easy putts. Three putts on the seventh put Loeb one more behind, but he won the eighth when Hackl's approach rolled down the steep green.

Hackl made it 3 up at the short ninth with a par three, Loeb needing two putts. Loeb's putt on the tenth rimmed the cup and he lost that hole. He went over the green at the eleventh and then made a fine try for the cup with a mashie shot, just nicking the cup.

The cards:

Par—Out	5	4	3	4	4	4	4	4	5—37
Hackl—Out	5	4	3	5	3	5	4	5	5—39
Loeb—Out	5	5	3	5	3	5	5	4	4—43

Hackl—In	3	4	4	4	4				—19

John S. Reardon Takes Feature Event.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Hawthorne race track opened its gates yesterday afternoon to Chicago's turf population. Chicago's turf population, to the number of 20,000 responded to the invitation, filled the commodious grand stand and overflowed on to the brick lawn as the bugle sounded for the first race at 2:15 o'clock.

When Hawthorne opened last fall with a trial meeting of thirteen days, it asked the question, "Does Chicago want racing?" Attendance figures answered that question in the affirmative.

This season Hawthorne invited Chicago to come and enjoy racing, and so far as the inaugural day's sport is concerned, Chicago accepted the invitation in typical Chicago fashion.

Many Old Regulars.

Among those 20,000 persons were many regulars of the old days, many who daily mingle with handbook operators many more who make a turf holiday of the Kentucky Derby, but as a whole it was not a turf wise crowd.

It was an aggregation which went out to see the horses run rather than to wager upon the result of their running. It was an appreciative crowd of tremendous potential possibilities for the support of the highest class sport in this city.

Did this crowd wager on the results? Possibly. The writer saw plenty of bat pools among spectators who never left their seats in the stand in quest of what was once a betting ring. There were individual wagers between friends of horse against horse.

There was no open betting. Shortly before noon the word was passed around among the wise "to lay off for the opening day. Further instructions later."

Public Bets but Little.

Little clusters were seen here and there but maintained no fixed positions as was the case last year. Nor were the slips on which instructions were written overtly passed. What wagering was done apparently was between bookies and clients who already knew one another. The public, as a whole, did not participate to any extent. Naturally those concerned hope for a loosening up next week.

Despite the fact that it was the tightest "betless" betting ever seen by the writer, nearly a score of arrests were made by plain clothes operatives working under instructions from the state's attorney's office. Deputy sheriffs present made no pinches. Considering the efforts to prevent open betting on the inaugural day, at least, the arrests were a disappointment to the management.

Hawthorne is not yet a Washington park, nor a Hawthorne nor Harlem of the old days, but it was a surprise to those who had not realized what the expenditure of $100,000 would do.

Improvement Over Last Year.

All débris from the dismantled government buildings in use during the war have been removed from the infield. Even a start at landscaping has been made. An American flag, horseshoe, and the word "Hawthorne" stand out in red, white, and blue stones in front of the stand in what will eventually be a grass plot. Grass, however, has not had time to spring up from the barren patches left from the building sites.

The grand stand was ready for occupancy with a fresh coat of paint, but not too fresh; buntings were in place as decorations, and there was an orderliness in marked contrast to the confusion of a year ago. It is a creditable effort to serve the public.

As eight 2 year olds paraded to the post for the first race there was a composite volume of handclapping and applause.

After Starter Milton had raised the barrier and the youngsters came to the wire in a driving finish of three contenders there were shouts of exultation characteristic of those having a pecuniary interest in the result, but not in sufficient volume to indicate any considerable number of such persons.

Two Track Records Equaled.

The time for the five furlongs was 1:00 1-5, compared with the track record of :59⅘, which indicated that the track was fast and in good condition.

That the track was fast was verified in the second and third races. Noon Hour in the five and one half furlong second event won by a neck from Lieutenant Colonel, in 1.06 2-5, equaling the mark set by Sir Edgar.

In the third race at six furlongs, Judge Pryor, on whom nearly everyone able to place a bet seemed to have a wager, reeled off the distance in 1:13 1-5, which equaled the mark of Vogue. Judge Pryor's margin over Lorena Marcellia was three lengths.

The feature attraction was the Hawthorne Revival handicap at 1 1-16 miles for a purse of $3,000, in which eight starters went to the post. Abadane of the Irwin stable opened favorite but was supplanted by Trajanus, neither of which finished in the money.

Tallor Maid set the early pace with John S. Reardon and Dorius in attendance. Rounding the stretch run, Tallor Maid faded as Reardon challenged and took the lead, which he maintained and won handily by a length and a half. Winner Take All, which had moved up to third position entering the stretch, outlasted Dorius in a drive for second money.

For the benefit of those who wonder how odds can be given at a "betless" meeting, the prices quoted in this story and accompanying racing chart are those furnished by the handicapper for a turf news service. They were generally followed by those bookies who undertook to accommodate their patrons.

CROWE'S MEN RAID BETTORS AT TURF MEET

NINETEEN arrests were made at the Hawthorne track yesterday, the first of the scheduled twenty-five day racing meet. The charges were betting and bookmaking. Several professional bookmakers were prevented from operating, but not arrested. The word went out that they would be permitted to take bets this week, under the direction of John Haskett of Cicero, who is said to have been given the betting privileges. The price is said to be $65 a day from each "bookie."

ROBERT E. CROWE.

Former State Senator John Broderick gave bail for many of those arrested. Judge Harry Sandusky of Cicero fixed their bonds at $1,000 each and set the cases for trial on July 6. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe said that if the men are found guilty he will ask an injunction to stop the remaining races.

Assistant State's Attorney Frank Matusek, who was in charge of the state's attorney's staff of police at the races, said he would bring the entire matter before the grand jury tomorrow. Mayor Joseph Klenha of Cicero said his police force would stop future gambling.

Gives Assumed Name.

One of the men arrested was said to be an attorney prominently identified with Mayor Dever's cabinet. He is said to have given an assumed name. Another, Frank Perkins, is said to be an employe of the county recorder's office, and John J. Mitchell and Martin Ryan were said to be employes of the Sanitary District.

Those arrested for bookmaking were:

JOSEPH F. REIN, 1610 Bryn Mawr.
FRANK C. PERKINS, 4153 N. Ashland-av.
GEORGE PECK, 3519 Flournoy-st.
GEORGE PERITT, 2610 Shields-av.
JOHN L. GORSKI, 4916 W. 32d-st.
EDWARD WILSON, 201 W. Washington-st.
THOMAS KASSIN, 146 N. Latrobe-av.

These Backed Their Judgment.

Those arrested for making bets were:

HARRY ROSE, 1814 Mohawk-st.
ANDREW WALSH, 4738 Congress-st.
CHARLES E. KRABOCHIL, 4430 Thomas.
SAMUEL WHITE, 349 E. 89th-st.
JOHN MARTIN, 1600 Catalpa-st.
JOSEPH BARBORAT, 5000 W. 30th-st.
ROBERT BORNEZINSKI, 5506 W. 31st-st.
JOHN GORSKI, 4916 W. 32d-st.
JOCK MALONE, Plaza hotel.
H. E. CRAWFORD, 713 W. Madison-st.
JOHN J. MITCHELL, 4231 W. Jackson.
MARTIN RYAN, 5858 W. Van Buren-st.
K. ERICKSON, 4221 Park-av.

100 Officers at Track.

State's Attorney Crowe said last night that while he had nearly 100 men assigned to the track yesterday, he also had a number of investigators visit bookmakers in the loop and make bets. He said that in each case where the bookmakers accepted bets the matter will be referred to the grand jury.

The campaign against loop bookmakers raised an interesting question. In the event any are arrested they will have to be taken before a Municipal judge for preliminary hearing, and race followers are wondering what will happen if that judge should be Judge Bernard P. Barasa, who is one of the stewards at Hawthorne.

More Raids Tomorrow.

The men arrested at Hawthorne will be locked up and those having previous records of arrest for handbooking will be prosecuted under the habitual criminal act.

Mr. Crowe also said that the same conditions will prevail at the track on Monday and the rest of the meets. Any one caught writing anything on paper pertaining to money or horses will be arrested.

ZEV TO RUN IN ILLINOIS DERBY AT HAWTHORNE

ENTRY of Zev, winner of the Kentucky Derby and champion 3 year old of the year to date, as a candidate for the Illinois Derby at Hawthorne July 14 was received by Hawthorne officials yesterday. A check for $50, covering the entry fee of Zev and his stable mate, Sunference, of Harry Sinclair's Rancocas stable was proudly displayed in the press stand by the management.

Dempsey-Gibbons Referee Arrives at Battle Scene

Shelby, Mont., June 30.—[Associated Press.]—James Daugherty of Philadelphia, referee for the Dempsey-Gibbons title bout here July 4, arrived today.

GIBBONS' NERVES GIVE HIM LEAD OVER DEMPSEY

BY HUGH FULLERTON.
ARTICLE VIII.

Shelby, Mont., June 30.—[Special.]—Comparing the nervous organizations of two men may be done only by a neurologist or by studying the reactions of the men when under pressure. Boxers, during a fight or during training, are under the highest pressure, and, of course, the effects of nerves in them are more apparent than in the case of average men. Also, during the periods between strains boxers are marked by a corresponding depression in most cases.

The manifestations of nerve force and numerous habits as shown by Jack Dempsey and Tom Gibbons are extremely clear and in distinct contract. Dempsey ever since he first entered the ring has been one of the most highly nervous men in the history of boxing, not excepting Jim Corbett when he was nearing the finish of his training.

Dempsey Shows Improvement.

He seems so super charged with nervous vitality that it often is impossible for him to remain still or rest, excepting when asleep. He is a light but easy sleeper, wakening at the slightest sound or movement near him.

His restlessness, his desire to go somewhere else, and his constant movement have been the despair of his associates.

But in the last year Dempsey seems to have calmed down greatly. He no longer shows extreme nervous activity, but can sit and talk calmly without jumping up and running around the room. He has a poise, a certainty and a look which betokens undisturbed nerves. Perhaps it is because of his extreme confidence in himself, or the natural result of getting older.

It seems to me that he fights more calmly and with more deadly certainty than ever before. He seems to hit many fewer blows, and to place them with more certainty.

Gibbons Calm, Friendly.

Gibbons is the antithesis of Dempsey in nerves. He is calm, friendly, pleasant, even in the ring. Fighters say he is too good natured and kindly to be a great fighter. He is one of the most pleasant, obliging, and decent men in ring history. In sparring he is liable to smile at a blunder and yet his calmness and nerve poise are apt to be disturbing to an opponent.

While Dempsey has the higher strung nature and the greatest excess of nervous energy, Gibbons is less liable to lose his head in event of any untoward happening. In two of his big fights Dempsey has shown symptoms of tossing his head with extreme small cause. When he had Willard butchered and seemingly at his mercy, he left himself open, and the giant pawed him on the side of the head and bounced him off the ropes.

Against the weak Carpentier he dropped his hands when he received a heavy jarring right on the side of the head, but as the Frenchman leaped in to finish him he recovered, dropped his jaw under his massive shoulders, and met the attack with a volley of short arm blows.

Only One Bad Fight.

Gibbons never has shown any symptoms of that sort of thing except in the Greb fight, and that we may throw out on the grounds that Gibbons was a sick man when he entered the ring, although he never allbied by telling the truth. He fought a sluggish, bad fight, but only twice showed symptoms of lack of clear thinking.

The only manifestation of nervousness, of being overnerved, in Gibbons' case, lies in the fact that he breathes heavily and almost snorts when he delivers a hard blow. This, according to nerve specialists, often is a symptom of nerves. Gibbons, however, has a slight nasal impediment which is not observed when he is at rest, but which shows when he works hard.

The nerve comparison is extremely favorable to Gibbons.

was turned over to the committee. One of the original men in the scheme is said to hold 8 per cent and it is believed that he also will turn it into the pot. This will leave the newest crowd and Eddie Kane, manager of Gibbons, the sole owners of the moving pictures, which will amount to something if Tommy does the unexpected.

JACK'S CONDITION GREAT

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

Great Falls, Mont., June 30.—After all is said and done it is the fight that the fans want. While a flock of officials connected with this bout between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons scheduled for July 4 at Shelby were meeting and unmeeting every few minutes along the various routes in this thriving town, the champion was out at his camp tearing into the final stretch of his training work.

Dempsey opened his daily training stunt with a hard, long workout at the small bag. Then he leaped into the ring and shadow-boxed a round. With that over they yelled to Jack Burke, former amateur light heavyweight champion who hails from Pittsburgh. Jack has been an able assistant for the champion for several weeks and they made quite a pretty exhibition of it, with Dempsey socking just as hard as ever.

Dempsey is now in wonderful form. His cheeks are hollow, indicating the strenuous work he has left behind him during the last twelve days. While his speed might not be up to his usual standard, he is certainly hitting just as hard, if not harder, than ever.

Billy Wells, the English welterweight, and a right smart boxer, went two rounds with the champion at top speed. Several times during the session the champion had Billy on Queer street but refrained from completing the job.

Dempsey will stay here until the morning of the fight, when he will leave on a private car for Shelby at 7:30 a. m. It is expected that Jack Kearns, Joe Benjamin, and Barney Dempsey will handle the champion in his fuss with Gibbons.

TOM TAKES IT EASY

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Shelby, Mont., June 30.—Tommy Gibbons did his semi-windup work today while Shelby, finally convinced that there will be a fight on July 4, commenced to wake up.

True, the Eight Horned Hrose closed after a one day engagement and the sheriff was busy levying attachments on concessions, buildings, and even houses to secure the unpaid lumber bills, but Shelby arose from the mud of depression and, for the first time, real evidences of a crowd coming to town were seen.

Autos, stalled for days in mud and water, crept into town while eight arrived on flat cars, having finally reached the railroad and rescue. The roads are drying out and people actually are paying cash for tickets.

Gibbons took his final road work this morning, shortening the run but adding speed to it. He rested then until 3 o'clock this afternoon when he limbered up lightly on apparatus, and went two two minute rounds with Bud Gorman, outspeeding the plump pounder but taking no chances on injury of his hands.

After Gorman he went two fast two-minute rounds with Tillie "Kid" Herman, showing great speed with his left and followed with a round each against Manley and Delaney. It was evident he was testing his timing and speed rather than trying to show anything of his hitting power and he was under instructions to take no chances.

He plans a rather stiff workout tomorrow, after which he will knock off entirely.

There is a lot of curiosity among the boys who are announced for the preliminary bouts as to whether they will box without guarantee of payment. The promoters have been too busy raising the final $100,000 to pay Kearns to think much of the preliminary boys.

THAT SHELBY FIGHT MUDDLE DRIVES POOR REPORTERS TO SONG

SHELBY, Mont., June 30.—Newspaper men are taking a more active part in the Dempsey-Gibbons enterprise than in any observed in years, excepting possibly the Ford peace party. Most of the visitors who have come into Montana in search of the fight are correspondents. Their board bills have kept Shelby alive in so far as it is alive. Two journalists last night thought this thing had gone far enough to be commemorated in song, so they hammered out the following:

O, promoters, the guys with the notion
On whom dapper Jack put the boo,
The cause of the whole dasst commotion—
The world offers fromage de brie.
Your contracts make boosters dissemble,
In the town where the mud sticks like glue;
All the dumbbells in Shelby will tremble
When the last hundred thousand is due.

CHORUS:
Three cheers for the prize fight that blew,
Three cheers for the prize fight that blew,
All the dumbbells of Shelby will tremble
When the last hundred thousand is due.

CLAIM $150,000 SALE OF TICKETS FOR BIG GO AT SHELBY JULY 4

SHELBY, Mont., June 30.—Tickets for the July 4th bout were being sold rapidly at fight headquarters today. Phil Campbell, ticket manager, said the demand indicated that purchasers had held off buying tickets until definite assurance had been given that the third $100,000 would be paid Dempsey on schedule.

While no definite figures were made public as to ticket sales, it was intimated by those in charge that the total sum already received, including money contributed here for the payment of the first $100,000, for which tickets were promised, might run as high as $150,000.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. E. L. Mattingly, 1355 Kenilworth avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think Jack Kearns would be justified in taking the $200,000 already put up for Dempsey-Gibbons bout, and quitting the arrangement if the third and final $100,000 were not paid over tomorrow?

Where Asked.

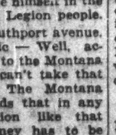
Lincoln park.

The Answers.

H. A. Cole, 4053 Greenview avenue, clerk—I don't think Kearns would be justified in taking the $200,000, after the men in Montana had gone to the expense of building the arena and making all other preparations. Another thing, who's going to refund that money to the people who bought tickets?

Carl Trasch, 1808 School street, clerk—They ought to go through with the fight, for the good of the sport, even though they don't receive the next $100,000. This fight was practically put on by the American Legion, and it is incidentally a good chance for Dempsey to partially vindicate himself in the minds of the American Legion people.

Neal O'Hara, 3214 Southport avenue, mechanic — Well, according to the Montana law he can't take that money. The Montana law reads that in any proposition like that the money has to be refunded regardless of contract. First thing you know states where boxing is allowed will be putting a limit on the size of purses.



Patrick Gannon, 403 Eugenie street, clerk—I don't think they would be justified in calling off the fight and taking the $200,000. A manager who tried to do that wouldn't be much of a sport. He would kill his name and he would be killing the game.

Fred Clarke, 1528 North La Salle avenue, clerk—As long as they promised to give him the $300,000 on such a day he should quit fussing around about it. This won't help Dempsey's reputation, and it isn't fair to Shelby, nor to the people who tried to put on the fight.

JACK MAY NEED THAT $100,000

Great Falls, Mont., June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Jack Dempsey's worries were increased today when suit was filed by Alex P. Geranious of Great Falls, who asks $20,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received when his 7 year old daughter was bitten by a dog at Dempsey's training camp on June 10. Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, was also made a defendant in the suit.

LEW TENDLER READY FOR FREEDMAN BOUT

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of The Tribune's boxing representatives yesterday were:

At New York—Panama Joe Gans stopped Willie Walker [9].

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Lew Tendler, the Philadelphia southpaw who will try to wrest the lightweight championship from Bennie Leonard in a fifteen round decision bout in New York on July 23, and Sailor Freedman, the rugged Chicago lightweight, are expected to draw a large gathering of boxing fans to Floyd Fitzsimmons' sky blue arena at Michican City, where they will meet in a ten round no decision contest on Wednesday afternoon.

This pair of lightweights have met on four different occasions. The first bout was a ten round no decision affair in Milwaukee, and two others of the no decision variety were held in Philadelphia. In order to settle supremacy, the pair met in New York on Dec. 16, 1921, and at the end of fifteen grueling rounds Tendler was given the decision.

Sailor Out to Win.

In the New York battle Freedman was knocked down four times in the second round, but went the route.

Freedman, however, will have to be at his best, for Tendler is ready. His recent fights with Pal Moran and Tim Droney were just what he needed to put him on edge for his tough opponent. His work in the gymnasium has impressed local boxing fans, who have changed their opinions, and, instead of Freedman being the favorite, Tendler will enter the ring a 5 to 3 favorite, according to some wagers yesterday.

Lew Will Train Here.

Tendler knows he must win over Freedman to make sure of the Leonard match, which should be one of the most attractive contests of the outdoor season in New York. When this pair met in the same city last July the gate amounted to $367,852. This is the third largest gate in the history of boxing. Under such conditions, Tendler may make a careful fight and will be content to go along and outpoint his man.

Tendler has decided to complete his training in Chicago, instead of going to Michigan City. The easterner is afraid of taking cold by training outdoors.

Freedman has been hard at work at Michigan City and is in the pink of condition, according to Manager Dick Curley. Like Tendler, the Chicago boxer will wind up training tomorrow. They have agreed to weigh 138 pounds at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Tommy Ryan in Prelim.

Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., who meets Herbie Schaeffer of Chicago in one of the preliminaries, arrived in Chicago yesterday and will complete training at the Arcade. Manager Hughie Shannon will arrive today. In the semi-windup, Patsy Rocco of East Chicago and Dennis O'Keefe of South Chicago will box eight rounds at 147 pounds. Charley Glaser and Rocky Castle, both of Chicago, will open the show in a six round 126 pound bout.

Eddie Long, manager of Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, leaves today for Indianapolis, where Taylor will meet Johnnie Sheppard of Boston in the main event of Steve Hunter's show in the Indianapolis ball park on Tuesday night.

SAILOR IN SHAPE

Michigan City, Ind., June 30.—[Special.]—One hundred and fifty members of the Railmen's club of Chicago, comprising representatives of the biggest railroads of the country, were guests at the Sailor Freedman training camp here this afternoon. Freedman worked nine rounds and is in near perfect condition. He will work out tomorrow.

$300,000 Insurance Out on Leonard-Tendler Battle

New York, June 30.—Insurance policies aggregating $300,000 were taken out yesterday by Jimmie Johnson, promoter of the bout between Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler, to take place at the Yankee stadium July 23. Leonard and Tendler were insured for $100,000 each against injury or death before the fight and the stadium was insured for an additional $100,000 against destruction by fire.

NET MATCH TODAY.

Ogden Park Tennis club will open its annual men's singles and doubles open journey today, with entries acceptable until 10 a. m. at the courts, 67th street and Racine avenue. Play will continue on holidays, Saturdays, and Sundays until completion of the final round.

MAJOR LEAGUES SHOW BIG JUMP IN ATTENDANCE

The old war whoop of "baseball is dead," broadcast by pessimists ever since the scandal of the 1919 world's series, should be drowned out completely when the final figures on attendance at major league ball games during the 1923 season are announced. Right now, with the season not near half over, both American and National leagues are far ahead of their record marks set last year and conservative estimates placed on the increase in attendance this season are near 2,000,000.

In the American league President B. B. Johnson, when asked about the increase to date, showed figures that the eight clubs have drawn 441,403 more fans to date than they did during the corresponding period for the same number of games last year. Philadelphia leads in increased attendance with 144,483 more fans attending the 32 games the Mackmen have played to date than for any 32 games staged last year. New York shows an increase of 139,258 for 29 games, while the Chicago White Sox have drawn 55,709 more than last year for 22 games.

The same conditions prevail in the National league, although President John Heydler has not yet completed the figures for the season to date.

The Cubs with their rebuilt park have already drawn more than 90,000 more patrons than in 1922 for the same period, according to President William Veeck. President Veeck expects that his club will draw around 250,000 more fans this season than last.

Following are the figures shown by President Johnson of the American league, five clubs showing tremendous gains while three teams, largely due to the low standing in the league race and adverse weather conditions of the cold spring, small losses:

Games.	Team.	Gain over last year for similar period.	Loss over last year for similar period.
31	Detroit	94,378
29	Cleveland	41,276
32	Philadelphia	144,483
29	New York	139,258
22	Chicago	55,709
32	St. Louis		5,715
31	Boston		29,976
18	Washington		2,600

Inquiring Reporter Discovers That Shelby Uses Profanity

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

SHELBY, Mont., June 30.—[Special.]—Disguising myself as the "Inquiring Reporter," I stood today on the corner of Main street and Cedar, in the city of Shelby, Mont., and propounded the following question to the citizens: "Will the Messrs. Dempsey and Gibbons fight in this city on the Fourth of July?" The replies were most interesting.

Mr. "Red" Smith, manager of the Hotel Shelby: "You go to hell."

Mr. Sol Harris, fight promoter: "O, you go to hell."

Mr. James Nally, proprietor of 600 bed tent hotel in Shelby: "Go to hell."

Mr. John Terrible Storm Cloud on the Mountain Top, Blackfeet Indian, now performing at the Shelby rodeo show: "You makum Injun sick."

Even the Ladies.

Miss Clara Hodge, leading lady of the Girlie Girlie Mammoth Tent show, now performing in Shelby: "Well, if I wasn't a lady I would tell you newspaper guys where you could go to."

A close analysis of the replies seems to augur a feeling of disappointment on the part of those questioned in Shelby today by your "Inquiring Reporter" regarding the fight situation. We all know that that hundred thousand dollars, commonly known as a hundred grand, the last installment of money to be paid Mr. Dempsey, has been secured, or at least practically secured. This hundred grand will be paid, or practically paid, to Mr. Dempsey next Monday. Then on the afternoon of the glorious day dedicated to liberty Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Gibbons will step forth in the arena and do battle. We know it. Still there is an undercurrent of distress.

But Does the World Know.

We the citizens and the visitors in Shelby know that the big fight will take place as advertised in Shelby on the Fourth of July. But will the great wide world outside of Shelby know it? Has confidence been restored? Or will it be restored in time for the world to get to the ringside on the afternoon of next Wednesday. There are seats in the great arena for forty thousand excited spectators. But Shelby is far from the beaten path. Can those who dwell far from quiet Shelby get all heated up over the fight in time to get here?

We, the fight fans, war correspondents, red poppers, hot doggers, and owners of tents containing sanitary beds and bedding, earnestly hope so. Yet the demon of doubt stalks in our midst. "For Sale Cheap" signs stare one in the eye everywhere he turns.

"Yes, I Have No Bananas."

Yesterday afternoon when the glad news came from Great Falls that the fight would positively occur we were all busy marking up merchandise 25 per cent. Today many of us are engaged in marking it down again. The visiting war correspondents are also distressed and downhearted. Our slogan now is, "Yes, I have no bananas." But still we know that the government at Washington yet lives and that the great fight will take place July 4.

The sun shines brightly in Shelby today and autimobiles that have been derricked out of the mud are slowly coming into the city. Many are arriving on flat cars on the railroad and others are being towed in, but they are coming.

The cowboy bands from the Wild West shows are playing bravely on Main street. New banners and flags are waving in the breeze. Mary Ellen the celebrated horned horse, began a limited engagement in our fair city this morning. Mary Ellen is the only horned horse in the world. A cowboy wittily remarked this morning, "I wish I was this here horse, then I could horn into that there prize fight next Wednesday." Whereat all laughed heartily.

Old General Depression.

Old General Depression has been with us so constantly of late that funny remarks and droll sayings are not frequently heard. But the other night a buckaroo out at the Wild West show observing Col. Gibbons being initiated into the Blackfeet tribe observed that Chief Curly Bear, who was conducting the ceremonies, must have been down to Great Falls and seen Col. Dempsey work out. Somebody asked why, and the buckaroo replied, "Because he's handing Gibbons a gun and a tomahawk. That'll give Tommy an equal chance."

The buckaroo disappeared before the maddened populace could lynch him. But I'm glad Tommy has the gun and the tomahawk. I also hoped that the beautiful princess Many Victories, who presided over the Blackfeet initiation, slipped Tommy a scalping knife. If I had to fight Mr. Dempsey I would also like a war club and a spear.

Genuine pleasure driving through traffic! That's what the Chandler owner enjoys—thanks to the phenomenal high gear capacity of the

Pikes Peak Motor

He can roll along so slowly in high that pedestrians pass him. Yet the pull of his motor is flawlessly smooth.

The instant the road clears he can "give her the gas." And his car leaps ahead in a swift, unlabored, silent rush.

He can drive for blocks without touching the gear lever—without slipping the clutch—without riding the brake—without nursing his motor in any way.

That's unadulterated driving delight! And it is possible only because the performance capacity of the new Chandler power plant was developed on the highest automobile climb in the world. No other motor quite equals it. Drive it yourself—and see!

Ted Blankenship

Being pressed for help in the second game, Glenson sent Ted Blankenship, who in his club this morning after the initial tion. BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Cleveland, O., June 30.—[Special.]—With a burst of speed that showed them at their best in all departments Gleason's White Sox tore loose against the Indians today and snared a double victory that lifted them into fifth place. The first half of the bargain bill ended in 1 and the nightcap 5 to 4, the pitcher in the latter whitewashing until the ninth frame in both battles.

Urban Faber looked after the slab work in the first tussle and was invincible all the way, the Indians not even having an opening through which to shove a run until the ninth inning. He allowed only seven blows and meanwhile his mates had bunched the same number on old Guy Morton to pick up a trio of tallies one at a time.

Ted Blankenship Wins.

Being pressed for hurling talent in the second game, Gleason called for Ted Blankenship, who rejoined the club this morning after a long vacation. The tall man came through in an unexpected manner, being in trouble continually, but pitching himself out with the aid of sterling support. Not until the ninth could the Indians nick the pan, and then they did a good job of it by scoring four on a homer by Speaker with the sacks loaded after two were out.

The Chicago gang got away to a fine start in the opening game when Hooper rammed Morton's first pitch over the right field fence for a homer. Another tally registered in the second on a double by Sheely and a single off Kamm's bat. The fifth brought the third and final Sox marker of the game, and Faber carted it across himself on his own single, a pass to Hooper, and sacrifices by McClellan and Collins.

Six Chase Uhle in Seventh.

In the afterpiece the Sox were forced to make mincemeat of George Uhle, who went along great for six innings, allowing only three hits and a run, but in the seventh the Chicago gang let loose with all their guns and Uhle was forced to retreat under a blast of four runs.

The lone tally in the fourth was promoted by McClellan's single and Mostil's double. Then things were quiet until Sheely singled with one gone in the seventh. Falk also hit safely, but Sheely hesitated about advancing and was forced at second, Falk getting the hit. Kamm then singled and Graham walked, filling the sacks. Blankenship drove two home with a single and Hooper two more with a similar hit.

SENATORS, 2; RED SOX, 1.

Washington, D. C., June 30.—The Senators took the Sox in the tenth inning of an interesting battle today, 2 to 1. It was a standing battle between Quinn and Johnson and the latter retired in the fifth with an injured arm. Russell held the Chasemen scoreless. The decisive tally developed in the seventh frame from singles by Rigney, Judge and Goslin. Score:

Won driving, second same. Noonhour, breaking well, stole away going to the stretch turn, but was weakening at the end and just lasted to wind. Lieutenant Colonel saved ground on the stretch turn and closed resolutely under a strong drive and would have won in a few more strides. Courtship was carried wide in the stretch after meeting with early interference and finished strongly. Norfield closed some ground. Peace Pal had no excuse. Hughie was shuffled back early. Last two at the start had no chance.

George Kuffan had no excuse. Betainda was always out run. Alleden had no speed.

PEEL TO AID IN SELECTING YANK OLYMPIC ELEVEN

Peter J. Peel, president of the United States Football association, left yesterday for New York to do some preparatory work in connection with the Olympic games in Paris next year, particularly in regard to the method of selecting the United States team. The U. S. team has had invitations to play in several others countries, and these will be discussed. President Peel has asked for a meeting of the International de Football association to be held at Paris next year.

The International Soccer Football league will stage its benefit medal final game today at Winnemac and Robey street, the Scandinavians playing the Continentals at 3 o'clock. The Scandinavian team consists of players from the Swedish-American, Norwegian-American, and Sture clubs. The Continentals are recruited from Sparta Union and Victoria players. Following is the lineup:

Scandinavians—Ring, goal; Vesperman, Swedlund, backs; Nyman, Grafdolt, S. Carlson, half backs; Dahl, Anderson, Berg, Anderson, and G. Swedlund, forwards.

Continentals—Teichman, goal; Herbst, Elfier, backs; Fink, Schuls, Rusicka, half backs; Steinberger, Fencl, Stephenson, Trimmel, and J. Fencl, forwards.

Aleck Currie was reelected president of the Illinois State Football association at the annual meeting held in the Great Northern hotel Friday. The popular player and manager of the north shore club had no opposition.

ARMY POLOISTS SMASH DAYTON VISITORS, 12 TO 9

Lake Forest, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—Army poloists from Fort Sheridan led by Capt. Pete Rodes shot the Miami Valley Hunt and Polo club from Dayton full of holes yesterday afternoon in the first game of the invitation tournament at Onwentsia and won by the score of 12 to 9.

The army team is composed of two veterans, Rodes and Calhoun, and two new players, Smith and Jones, and was given a handicap of five goals to start with, as the team from Dayton has been playing polo for a good many years. This handicap was too much for the Ohioans to overcome. In fact the army played the visitors to a standstill up until the last period when Dayton was able to get two of the handicap back in a couple of fast rallies.

The next game in the tournament will be played Monday between Grasmere, the midwest champions, and the Onwentsia Reds. Lineup:

ARMY, 12.	DAYTON, 9.
Jones ..... No. 1	Mead
Smith ..... No. 2	Gardner
Rodes ..... No. 3	H. Talbot
Calhoun ..... No. 4	N. Talbot

Referee—Berch. Umpire—Borden.

30,000 FANS SEE THE CLOWN WIN LATONIA DERBY

Latonia, Ky., June 30.—Under a beautiful, cloudflecked sky, over a good track and to the plaudits of probably 30,000 race fans, The Clown won the Latonia Derby this afternoon in the last few jumps from Hopeless. It was a wonderful race, with In Memoriam third and Rialto and Martingale unplaced.

This forty-first running of the classic was a brilliant event. The fact that the field was cut to five did not detract from the class. So great was the caravan of automobiles en route to the track that thousands found the fifteen minute journey from Cincinnati taking more than an hour. There were acres and acres of automobiles parked around the great oval.

The Clown paid $7.50 for a $2 ticket to win, $4.30 place and $3.10 show. The price on Hopeless was $6.90 for place and $4.30 to show. In Memoriam paid $5 for show. The time for the mile and a half was 2:32 3-5. Jockey Lunsford was up on the winner.

Martingale led all the way around, but tired badly in the stretch and The Clown moved up from third place.

Getting off from the barrier, Martingale was out in front. At the quarter he held a lead of nearly a length.

The Clown caught him coming down the stretch, however, and Martingale fell back out of the money. Hopeless, always a contender, moved up fast in the stretch and won second money.

Whitney's Horses Win Two Stake Races at Aqueduct

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 30.—The Tremont stakes for 2 year olds at six furlongs, worth $10,000, and the Brookdale handicap for 3 year olds and up at a mile and an eighth, featured the program at Aqueduct today. H. P. Whitney's Transmute beat the pacemaker, Lord Baltimore, a head, with Diogones, favorite, a head behind in the Tremont stakes.

The Brookdale handicap furnished a thrilling duel through the stretch between H. P. Whitney's Flagstaff and J. S. Cosden's Dunlin, the former winning by a nose.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

A WISCONSIN CANOE CRUISE AND FISHING TRIP.

Of all the lake cruises that a fellow could take in northern Wisconsin it is doubtful if a more varied or interesting one could be mapped out than that known as around the Horsehead circle. The complete trip means seeing some thirty-nine lakes, crossing twice the divide which separates the Mississippi waters from those that flow into the Great Lakes, and takes the canoeist over three watercourses.

This trip can be started at several points, but probably the best jumping off is Winegar, Wis., to which you can ship your canoe and then launch it on Horsehead lake. The cruise can be made in a few days, but to get the most out of it and to enjoy the fine fishing in the various lakes a fellow ought to take at least two weeks. Watch your outfit as to weight, as there are several portages ranging from a few rods to a mile in length, so a light outfit is desirable. There are all kinds of camping places along the way, as only two lakes are taboo as far as putting up a tent is concerned. Those are Crooked and Crab lakes.

Starting at Horsehead lake you hit for the east, portaging over to Ox Bow, then south into Anna, Lynx and Rudolph lakes. After passing Bettine and Twin Island lakes you hit the Ontonagan headwaters. This is a real wilderness country and you sure do get the fishing here. Some of the finest bass waters in Wisconsin are here and there are several trout streams for you to experiment with, on stopping.

Tenderfoot lake with its pretty islands you will not soon forget and unlimber your fishing tackle here, too. From Tenderfoot you cross over the line into Michigan, making a little swing into that state and hitting Wisconsin soil again when you strike Big Lake. [See map in the automobile section of today's TRIBUNE.] Then the route leads southwest through Palmer, Cochrane Jones, Devils and High lakes. After covering Flaintrap, the next lake on the route, you hit the Manitowish. This river takes you westward to Boulder lake, which will keep you for a day or two if you want some fun with the finny tribes. If you wish to terminate your trip at this point and not return to Winegar you can get a haul from Boulder over to Boulder Junction, which is just a few miles southeast of the lake, and from there you can get a train. But completing the cruise back to Horsehead lake and Winegar will take you through some beautiful lakes such as Big Crooked, Wolf, Little Bear, Crab, and Armour.

Although this canoe cruise looks long and, to the uninitiated, difficult, it can be made with comparative ease if the outfit is right. But no matter how it goes, the canoeist-fisherman will be more than rewarded for his paddling when he comes out on a lake surrounded by virgin forest and finds himself the only traveler on that body of water. That's what you can find in this northern Wisconsin region, and many a time yours will be the only campfire visible for many miles when you pitch camp for the night on some of these lakes in this cruise. And if the fish are hittin'—well, we're willing to carry a canoe a mile when the bass are slappin' the baits as if they meant it.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

THE SAFE AND SANE HERO.

He's great to read a gallant story
Hanging o'er the fool's palette,
Waving prize sword at ballets tramp
And whistle round you all about.
It's grand to show heroic gobs
The way to shoot ten miles or twenty
There may be more romantic jobs
But I can't call to mind a ninety.

The pirate chiefs, I've heard it said,
Lift least the kind the writers paint;
Careers intriguing always led
And ne'er of ennui had complaint.
It certainly was snappy stuff
To grapple with a reckless booty

CUMMINGS, YALE GOLFER, TAKES COLLEGE TITLE

Mount Vernon, N. Y., June 30.—Playing golf worthy of an open champion, Doctor Cummings of Yale won the intercollegiate title today by defeating Rudolph Knepper of Princeton, 2 up and 1 to play, in the thirty-six hole final match of the annual tournament at the Siwanoy club.

The 20 year old Yale student, who is a brother of Edith Cummings, well known woman golfer, took the lead at the first hole and never was headed. In defeating Knepper, Cummings accomplished something that few other golfers have been capable of doing. Making the early round in 74, Cummings retired for the intermission 2 up.

Considering that he had several bad drives that got him into trouble, Knepper did well to keep as close to his rival as he did. When Cummings did weaken it was only for a hole or two.

EDDIE HELD WINS TRANS-MISS. GOLF TITLE TOURNEY

Minneapolis, Minn., June 30.—[Special.]—Eddie Held grew immensely in golfing stature today when he defeated Dick Bockenkamp in the final match of the Minikahda course for the trans-Mississippi championship, 5 up and 4 to play. Yesterday morning Held was a great shot maker, holder of an important title and untried as a fighter on the links. Last night he had been tempered in the fire of fierce competition and had shown himself to be of good steel, for there was not a quiver during his match that he did not have a fight on his hands.

From the first hole, when he missed a three foot putt for the half and started at a disadvantage, to the thirty-second, where he was forced to run down a twenty foot putt to fight off his ever menacing opponent, Held knew that he dare not falter, for there was Bockenkamp playing desperately, waiting for his chance, always ready to avail himself of the first break, and that is precisely what he did.

He was 1 down at the first and again at the sixth, and it was not until the ninth that he took the lead for the first time. Thereafter he was never overtaken; 1 up at the first turn, 2 up at the luncheon hour, 3 up at the turn of the afternoon match, and, playing better golf each nine, he brought the match to an end by some superlatively fine shooting on the first holes of the homeward nine, best of which was his long putt for an eagle three on the fourteenth.

The match stood dormie then, and Held played conservatively for a half as the fifteenth, but did better than that when Bockenkamp, taking desperate chances, as he had to, used five strokes.

CHICAGO YACHTS GET STARTED ON RACE TO RACINE

Chicago and Jackson park yachts got away yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Racine race of the Chicago Yacht club. The starting line was off Belmont harbor and a big fleet of boats of various classes got the gun.

The interest in the contest aside from the class events was the battle between Dorello, the big sloop from Milwaukee, and Intrepid, the fastest of the large sloops here. Dorello is owned by Commodore J. C. Van Dyke, and is a couple of sizes larger than Intrepid. In fact it is the largest sloop now sailing on Lake Michigan.

In the Mackinac race a year ago it finished second, being beaten in this order by Intrepid, but the crew was new to the boat and unable to get the best out of it. The showing made in the Racine race will give Chicago yachtsmen a line on the capabilities of the boat this season as it is entered in the Mackinac race again.

The Chicago fleets will hook up this morning at Racine in the annual regatta of the Racine Yacht club and will meet fleets from Kenosha, Milwaukee, and Racine. At the finish of the race today in Racine the boats will continue on to Milwaukee where they will sail in the annual regatta of the Lake Michigan association, July 4.

The three one design sloops, Ancona III., Arab, and Naiad, which will meet three similar craft in a match contest, July 4, at Milwaukee, started on their way yesterday morning under sail.

CHICAGO CRAFT AFTER HONORS IN 'SIPPI REGATTA

Burlington, Ia., June 30.—Banks of boats to accommodate 5,000 spectators, auto parkings for as many more, and hundreds of places in private boxes are now ready for the opening of the sixteenth annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association in this city tomorrow, and ending with a big program on Independence day.

Forty-two boats, the greatest entry list in the history of power boat racing, have entered the ten events.

One of the spectacular features will be the clash between Miss Dubonnet of the Southern Yacht club of New Orleans against a dozen from northern points in the free for all event for the Webb trophy, emblematic of the championship of the midwest and south.

This trophy has never been held below the Dixie line and entries from Chicago, Minneapolis, Peoria, St. Louis, and Terre Haute, Ind., will attempt to carry the mug in the north. For the last two years it has been held by Miss Chicago, owned by Sheldon Clark, commodore of the Chicago Yacht club.

The world's record for runabouts, now held by Edsel Ford, is expected to fall in the duel between Miss Liberty, owned by L. H. Piper of Minneapolis and Miss Virginia by Walter Plummer Jr. of Chicago. New world records are looked for in many of the class events.

FISCHER VICTOR IN COLLEGE NET TITLE TOURNEY

Philadelphia, Pa., June 30.—Carl Fischer, of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, won the intercollegiate singles tennis championship at the Marion Cricket club today by defeating Gerald Emerson, of Columbia, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2. Emerson was baffled by the left handed service of the Philadelphia star.

FOUR YANK NET STARS STILL IN WIMBLEDON MEET

WIMBLEDON, June 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Four American tennis players, two men and two women, had reached the round before the semi-finals when the first week of the championship carnival ended tonight. In the men's singles, William M. Johnston, the favorite for the title, remains in the upper half of the draw and Francis T. Hunter in the lower. There is, therefore, a possibility of an all-American final at the end of next week.

The same chance exists for the American women, but it is not such a strong one. Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, who remains in the upper half, will have to defeat Mrs. Beamish, one of England's best woman players, and Suzanne Lenglein, four times world champion, to reach the finals.

Miss Goss Meets Kitty.

Miss Eleanor Goss, who remains in the lower half, will be pitted Monday against Miss Kathleen McKane, who ranks No. 1 among the women players of the British isles. Miss Elizabeth Ryan, formerly of California, is also in the lower division.

Hunter was hard pressed in his match this afternoon against the lean and limber Briton, Capt. Dicks, and while he was able to win in straight sets, the Englishman kept two of them going well into deuce, the scores being 9—7, 6—4, 8—6.

The American, after his customary slow start, warmed up and when fiercely challenged, played with a punch he had lacked heretofore at Wimbledon.

Molla Has Easy Time.

Mrs. Mallory had an easy time in defeating Miss Lidderdale, 6—3, 6—3, while Miss Goss had no trouble in disposing of the tiny English girl, Miss E. M. Beckingham, 6—2, 6—1. In fact none of the women survivors had much to worry her in the fifth round. Mlle. Lenglen won with customary ease, dropping only one game to Mlle. Vlasto of Greece.

The stadium was crowded to its capacity again today. The spectators wanted to see Mlle. Lenglen in action, but when her match was half over the crowd departed, to circulate among the outside courts and the tea tables.

BIG ENTRY MAKES FOUR QUALIFYING DAYS IN U. S. OPEN

New York, June 30.—[Associated Press.]—Because of a record entry list of more than 350 players, the United States Golf association has decided to have four instead of three qualifying days for the American open golf championship at Inwood, Long Island, thus extending the title event over the entire week of July 9.

Under the revised plan, the field will be divided into four sections, each containing about ninety players, for thirty-six hole qualifying tests July 9 to 12, inclusive. The championship, seventy-two holes, will be played Friday and Saturday July 13 and 14.

Last year, with three qualifying rounds in the title event at Skokie, the best twenty-four scores and last place ties qualified on each of the three days for the championship proper. It is probable that with four divisions not more than the first twenty and ties for last place will remain in the running.

THREE YANKS TO TRY FOR FRENCH OPEN GOLF TITLE

DIEPPE, France, June 30.—Three Americans and three holders of French or British championship titles are among the sixty-seven entrants for the French national open golf championship, play in which will begin here tomorrow. The American entrants are Tommy D. Armour of New York, S. S. Allen of Brookline, and G. D. Dixon, living in France and attached to the St. Cloud club. The other strong contenders include Arthur G. Havers, the British open champion; Michael Scott, the French amateur champion; Aubrey Boomer, the French open champion, and Pierre Lafitte, who tied with Walter Hagen for the French open championship in 1920 and lost in the playoff. Angel De La Torr of Madrid is the only Spanish entry.

Little Drops of Gas Saved Make Reserve Ocean

13,000,000 Gallons Saved Each Month by Campaign.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—The U. S. Bureau of Mines' reports of gasoline consumption throughout the United States encourage the belief that car owners have already begun to act upon the gasoline economy suggestions broadcast several months ago by the National Motorists' association.

Though the rate of increase in registration of new cars is at the highest point in the history of the automobile, Uncle Sam reports that "gasoline consumption has not increased at as rapid a rate since February of this year as it did in 1922."

In its campaign the N. M. A. has been pointing out the enormous aggregate savings in fuel possible through urging each car owner to watch the small, but cumulative, forms of waste.

That progress is being made in this direction is only a matter of noting that the indicated consumption of gasoline in April shows an increase of but 29,000,000 gallons despite an 8,000,000 gallon increase in gas exported and an approximate increase of 1,500,000 automobiles in service.

The average car has not displayed any startling increase in gas mileage because of changes in design, while productions of cars and traveling by motor have never reached a higher point.

There can be only one answer, says the association, to the fact that the rate of consumption of gasoline is showing a tendency to decrease. Car owners have come to realize that the savings of one gallon a month by each represents a combined saving of 13,000,000 gallons.

Additional evidence of this saving is found in the fact that the monthly consumption of gasoline is now but 96,711,912 gallons in excess of the average monthly consumption in 1921, when there were but 10,000,000 cars registered.

The 2,000,000 additional cars are, therefore, resulting in a monthly gasoline consumption of only 32 gallons a car, which at an average of 15 miles to the gallon represents but 384 miles of travel a month for each car.

For those who worry about the shortage of gas the N. M. A. points out that simultaneously with this saving in consumption goes a healthy increase in production. The April production was 209,042,667 gallons—just 174,375,224 over the monthly production for 1921.

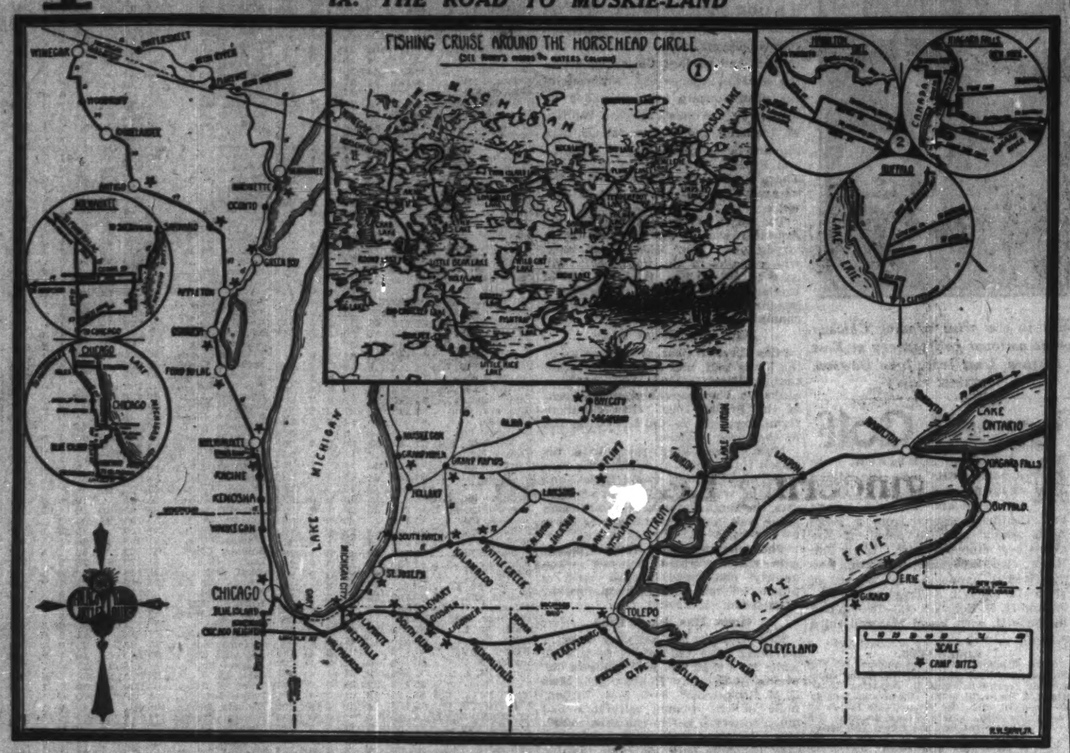
IX. THE ROAD TO MUSKIE-LAND



These blissful weeks are pictured in this vacation suggestion. The motorist angler will find it a little the best excursion into the haven of open road and game fish waters that can be found in years of searching. It combines the best of highways and scenery with from ten days to two weeks of the finest fishing in the north woods.

Today's Woods and Waters column explains some of the advantages to be found in a canoe trip through the Horsehead circle of lakes and streams at the northern Wisconsin border. The inset in this map shows the trip in detail, including the easy portages to be negotiated.

The route to the lake circle leads north from Chicago via the Waukegan road and Sheridan road, entering Milwaukee on Wisconsin trunk 57. From that point No. 15 leads north with concrete to Appleton and highways 47 and 39 cut through the pines to Winegar, where the car may be stored and the canoe unshipped. The total distance from Chicago to Winegar is 419.5 miles, an easy two days' drive.

The map also indicates the best routes at present to Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Here's a Tip.

A headlight rim which has become rusted can easily be removed by the use of a strap or belt. Place the belt around the rim and pass the end through the buckle. When the belt is drawn tight, a sudden pull will loosen the rim without injuring the lens.

Beaucoup Parade.

If all the automobiles in the United States were lined up in a procession the string would reach four-fifths of the distance around the world at the equator, or seven times the distance from New York to San Francisco.—Automobile Digest.

HEAP INJUN FACE.

Automobile tourists driving through Boulder canyon are impressed with "Chief Niwot" a huge rock image of a famous Indian whose camp was located for years in the Colorado Rockies.

Official Highway Report Outlines Detour Routes

FOLLOWING is the latest report issued by the state highway department on road detours in the Chicago district:

HIGGINS ROAD; RECONSTRUCTION

Detour—Elgin and Dundee to Chicago. Turn left [north] at Dobling road—Orchard on southeast corner, forest preserve in sight about one mile east—for 1.5 miles. Turn right [east] at first cross road—Algonquin road—orchards on southeast and southwest corner and continue east 2.5 miles crossing north and south concrete paved road. Continue east one mile after crossing paved road and turn right [south] at first road—orchard on southwest corner—one mile to Higgins road.

GENEVA TO ST. CHARLES.

ST. CHARLES TO GENEVA.

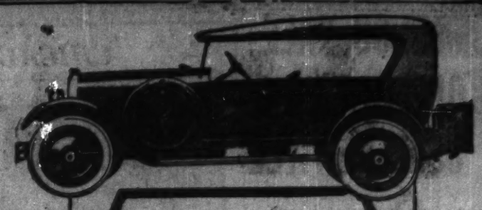
DETOUR—CHICAGO HEIGHTS.

Chicago Heights—"Brown's Corners." Traveling south on Chicago avenue—Lincoln-Dixie highway, turn east at 26th street, one block to Commercial avenue—old gravel road. Turn south on Commercial avenue—cross car line one block, continue south four blocks to Lincoln highway. One block to Dixie highway at "Brown's Corners"—Gas station on southwest corner—Turn south on Dixie highway completing detour. Rough.

Vote for Closed Car.

The marked trend toward an increased use of closed cars is indicated by the replies to a questionnaire recently received by the N. A. C. C. Sixty per cent of the replies from 20,000 questionnaires stated the buyer's next purchase would be a closed model. All around use, better protection, and neater appearance were the answers generally given.



Turns on a Dime

An exaggeration of course. But this is the way one Westcott owner described the Westcott's ease of handling.

The Westcott was designed particularly for heavy traffic service. Its brake and clutch action are remarkably soft and easy. It steers with scarcely conscious effort. It turns on a diameter seven feet shorter than the average car of equal wheel-base, and it parks, with one backing, in a space at least three feet shorter than the average car of its size.

These are but a few of the many advantages you will find when you come and see the Westcott.

Call at any of our show rooms for demonstration.

Save a dollar or more

You save in first cost and in operating expense if you install dependable Champions by the full set. Champion is a better spark plug, but because of its tremendous production, the price is only 60 cents for Champion X and 75 cents for the Blue Box Line.

Champion is outselling because it deserves to outsell. Six out of every 10 cars you meet on the road are Champion equipped. More than two-thirds of the makes of cars selling for $2000 and upwards have Champions in their cylinders—including the fine foreign cars Minerva, Peugot and Lorraine Dietrich.

The owner of a Rolls-Royce, Locomobile, Pierce-Arrow, Lincoln, Peerless, Winton, Cunningham, Wills Sainte Claire, Franklin or an H. C. S., pays but 75 cents for his dependable Champions. Why should the owner of a Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Dodge Brothers or Maxwell pay more for his spark plugs?

So put in Champions by the full set. You will be one of the great majority of motorists if you do this. You save in initial expense. You save in gas and oil consumption. Your engine will perform better. Power and pick-up will improve.

Insist on genuine Champions. You will know them by the Double-Ribbed core. A type and size for every engine. Sold by dealers everywhere

Will Your Name Be In Thursday's Paper?

IF history repeats itself this Fourth of July—you will not care to read next Thursday's paper. Its news will not be pleasant.

You will read of a boy and a girl—full of youth's buoyant dreams—who carelessly ventured too far from shore in an all too frail canoe!

You will read of a reckless, pleasure-bent motorist, whose eagerness to reach the picnic grounds beyond the path of an oncoming train, hurled seven of his loved ones to an untimely death.

And you will read—even with all the agitation against fireworks—of a tousle-haired boy, much like your own, who went back to examine the firecracker that did not explode.

Let Us Make This Fourth Really Safe and Sane

Pause for a moment today—and think! Whisper into the ears of your loved ones a note of warning and of caution. Drive safely—drive with a little more care than you ordinarily exercise. If you go boating or bathing—don't tempt treacherous currents. If you have fireworks—be extremely careful, and forget those that fail to explode.

Ponder over these words of caution today, practice their lessons Wednesday—and this Fourth of July will go down in history as a day of greater security and peace—a peace that more nearly approaches the dream of our forefathers when they sheathed their swords at Yorktown.

4-wheel BRAKES

Again—Rickenbacker Engineering Leads, and Shows the Way

First assumed that leadership, by creating a motor free from any period of vibration—the most destructive force in an automobile.

The Rickenbacker "Tandem Flywheel" accomplished this.

Then the "Air Cleaner"—which doubles the life and renders your motor free from excessive carbon deposits.

And now—we announce the greatest improvement made in an automobile since the advent of the self-starter—13 years ago.

Here is a feature that is super-efficient; for not only do the four wheel brakes increase your tire mileage and eliminate all tendency to skid, but they offer the only practical solution of the twin problems of congested traffic and public safety.

With the same effort, you stop in about half the distance—with half the strain on tires, brake linings and other parts that you do in the same car equipped with 2-wheel brakes.

Or, with much less effort, your car stops in the same distance with still less strain on tires and axles.

Verily: "A demonstration is a revelation!"

For, if we told you here all the advantages of this great engineering achievement your credulity would be unequal to the test.

One cannot believe, until he himself has experienced the sensation, of riding in—and driving—a Rickenbacker with 4-wheel brakes.

So convinced are we of the superiority of four over two, we predict that one year from today 4-wheel brakes will be universal.

Remember this when rival salesmen try to argue against 4-wheel brakes—for of course they must, not having them, yet.

The superiority is so marked and so manifest, there is just no ground left for argument.

As we have stated, this is, and will be, regarded as the greatest single improvement in an automobile since the advent of that other epoch-making feature—the self-starter.

Here's a self-stopper—if you will!

Amazing in performance.

Does not affect steering unless it be to give you better control of the car when turning.

Actually stops car on wet asphalt quicker than 2-wheel brakes do on dry, with no skidding.

There's a feeling of security when driving on a wet or slippery surface that is indescribable and most reassuring.

Equalized as no other braking system has ever been equalized—to compensate, not only for difference in traction of each wheel, but for difference in wear of shoes and drums.

Drums are finely machined to ensure absolute uniformity and smoothness of operation. Another example of Rickenbacker thoroughness and care.

Think of this greatly increased factor of safety—100 per cent more than you have been accustomed to.

Here is a mighty long step towards the solution of the traffic problem.

You can stop in "a car length" at any legal speed—or glide to a velvety pause, in half the distance you are used to.

No, NOT hydraulic—pneumatic—or electric.

Mechanical—positive—simple—sure—a system any child can understand.

4-wheel brakes wear longer because the coefficient of friction per square inch of braking surface is less than half of what it is in two.

Tires wear longer for the same reason. Brake linings, too.

Silent, and uniformly efficient at all times and under all conditions—for all four brakes are of the internal, expanding type—dust-proof, clean, sightly.

By the way—Rickenbacker brake drums are painted a brilliant red, so that you will easily recognize this feature in a Rickenbacker Six.

All four brakes alike—interchangeable!—That's another wonderful advantage.

Of course you recall that the Rickenbacker was the first high-class car that had steel disc wheels as standard. That bit of courage and enterprise started the wood-wheel on the road to obsolescence.

And now—this latest Rickenbacker invention will relegate to the limbo of the forgotten, the old style of brake.

Six equalizers—one in each wheel and one between each pair of brakes to front and rear.

From now on, in the Rickenbacker Six, you will enjoy motoring as you never did before.

Phone, or come in and arrange for your demonstration.

Don't delay. First come must be first shown—and, of course, every progressive motorist in town will want a ride in this sensational Rickenbacker Six—with 4-wheel brakes.

Motor Gateway to Pacific Coast Is Government Issue.

Lincoln Highway Backers Push Claims Before Wallace.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE HENRY C. WALLACE has announced that he expects to reach a decision in connection with the Lincoln highway project in western Utah in the near future. He is considering the reports of government engineers, data presented by the Lincoln Highway association, and the material presented to him at the hearing on the road route held in his office recently.

Perhaps nowhere else in the United States exists a short section of highway of such great importance as the link just west of Salt Lake City. The topography of the mountains, location of the passes and deserts have made Salt Lake City the best gateway to the Pacific coast and put the state of Utah in a position to largely control the immense flow of through traffic heading for a thousand miles of Pacific coast north of the Mexican border.

Whether Utah does or does not build roads, controls the destination of a large volume of transcontinental travel. The lack of any satisfactory road across the great Salt Lake desert, west of Salt Lake City, has for years been the main barrier to the free flow of through traffic.

Nevada has a real interest in the Utah problem. The Lincoln Highway association, which for ten years has been endeavoring to bring into being one open road across the United States, and meeting its only real opposition in Utah, has had much to say on the subject.

Utah's refusal to designate the Lincoln highway between Salt Lake City and the Nevada line as a portion of its federal aid system and announced intention of abandoning the Lincoln highway in western Utah resulted in the recent hearing held in Washington, D. C., before the secretary.

The position of the association was that the Lincoln highway is the road of first importance west of Salt Lake City, for the same reason that was responsible for its original location in 1913. Speakers pointed out the limited funds available for highway construction in Utah and Nevada and the need of a road west of Salt Lake City which provides a link common to two important through routes leading into both San Francisco and Los Angeles, which were shown to be the objectives of nearly all westbound traffic reaching Salt Lake City. The association pointed out that the Lincoln highway between Salt Lake City and Ely, Nev., provides, in a road 213 miles in length, a link common to both roads from Salt Lake City into either northern or southern California. Speakers added that it is much more important that this road be first opened than any road which runs only from Salt Lake City into northern California. Such a road, they said, would force all southern California bound traffic down through the length of Utah on a road fifty-six miles longer than the Lincoln highway to Ely and the Midland trail to Los Angeles, and through 400 miles of the Mohave desert during the hottest months of the year.

The association declared it would be impossible for Nevada to commence the construction of any other road from Ely to Salt Lake City than the Lincoln highway, and showed that this line from Salt Lake City to Ely could be opened for through travel at a saving of $900,000 to Nevada. The association also contended that construction of the Lincoln highway would conserve government funds and would open a route into both northern and southern California years quicker than any other possible location.

ATOP HIS WATER WAGON

Jess Willard, whose comeback against Floyd Johnson brought him back into the center of the pugilistic spotlight, turned his hand at hero stuff in the recent Oklahoma floods. The picture was taken after the giant had driven his car to the bottoms, waded into the swirling flood, and rescued a number of women and children from drowning.

MOUNTAIN FOR SALE.

The owner of Two Buttes mountain in Colorado, a woman residing in Rocky Ford, has offered the Baca county stately buttes, elevation 4,716 feet, for sale. The mountain was acquired through homesteading and in the early days was used by Indians to signal with beacon fires.

NEWS OF THE NEW STANDARD EQUIPMENT.

VISIBLE depreciation of automobiles will be cut to a minimum only when manufacturers adopt seat covering as standard equipment, according to President Johnson of the Central Auto Painting and Trimming company. He predicts that the next step in improved equipment will treat the cushions of new cars in this way as they leave the factory. The newest covers serve to protect the clothing of car users and to prevent the usual accumulation of dust in any car on tour. They are being adopted by scores of Chicago drivers for summer use.

FUEL ECONOMY.

Important developments in the new field of fuel chemistry are forecast by the plan of Carl G. Fisher, president of the Indianapolis Speedway, to revise racing rules in order to place a premium on fuel economy as well as engine speed and power. Initial steps in this direction were made during the last 500 mile race by the Mercedes and Bugatti entries. Both teams used "Lubac," the new petroleum derivative refined by the Lubac corporation of Chicago, in the big race, and reported that it increased their fuel efficiency. Preparations are now being made to place the new product on the market.

VALVE-IN-HEAD Buick

A Buick Closed Car

Built for Summer Driving

The Buick Six Cylinder Touring Sedan is particularly popular because it combines perfectly the many advantages of the open touring model with the luxury and convenience of a fine closed car.

The wide windows provide touring car airiness; yet in case of a summer shower or dust storm, a turn of the hand instantly protects the occupants without obstructing their vision.

Buick traditional performance, power, dependability and riding comfort are worthily typified in this Touring Sedan.

City Commission to Fix Blame for Motor Accidents

Joins National Movement to Unify Auto Laws.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

WHAT causes automobile accidents in Chicago, and what spots in the city breed this growing peril to society?

The hard hitting Chicago safety commission, appointed by Mayor William E. Dever in his determined drive to check avoidable accidents, proposes to answer both of these primary questions before it frames the general city program for the improved direction and control of all traffic. It intends through the cooperation of Chief Collins, Chief Justice Olson, Coroner Wolf, and other authorities, to fix the proper degree of responsibility for accidents on each branch of the local transportation field and then work out curative measures along practical lines.

"Automobile accidents can and will be reduced to an absolute minimum in Chicago now that the city administration and every official in power is actively interested in the fight," said Harry Bell, secretary of the newly formed city commission, in outlining the first plans, "but the commission realizes that it must go to the bottom of things in order to bring quick and practical results. Capt. John Martin and Sol Mayer of the police department, both members of the commission, have insisted that an official analysis be made of the cause of accidents.

"Every city agency has opened its records for this purpose and a huge wall map is being made to picture the situation. When it is completed the public will learn officially what degree of responsibility rests with the pedestrian, the passenger car driver, the truck, street car, railroad train, and the child in the street. All are responsible for accidents, but each contends that the other fellow is the one to regulate.

"We know generally that the jay walker causes a percentage of deaths, that the reckless driver, the speeder and the drunken driver is responsible for a percentage and that parents are responsible for a percentage when they allow children to play in the streets or go into danger unguarded. The city can stop all but the unavoidable minimum of accidents when it has these facts at hand."

At last week's meeting of the commission presidents of the three park boards pledged their cooperation in making all Chicago traffic signals uniform. It was pointed out that, in the west park system, red lights are being flashed as the signal for traffic to proceed, and green lights as the stop signal. This plan, safety men pointed out, is directly opposite to that recognized as the standard warning in Chicago or elsewhere and is confusing to allied local traffic. It is planned to standardize direction and warning signs in the city as one of the first steps in the new drive.

In this angle, the commission is directly in line with the biggest national movement attempted since the automobile appeared.

Cook county has already checked into the unification field through the organization of highway superintendents in the northern group of counties. They are working toward a standard set of weight laws to govern trucks operating over all county roads.

The state has entered through joining the middle west motor vehicle conference. This body hopes to have blanket laws governing all motor travel in thirteen states surrounding Illinois. Its committees are already working out uniform lighting laws, speed, license, weight, and police regulations to govern the whole territory and dovetail into the unified regulations adopted in eastern states.

The army, through its motor transport division, is submitting its plan to unify motor, railroad, and waterway movements to civic and commercial bodies throughout the country.

The national good roads congress is working out a unified standard for highway direction and warning signs to be submitted to all state legislatures for joint action.

Backers of the huge movement promise that the automobile driver will eventually, be able to travel from Maine to California under one set of driving rules.

RESEARCH SHOWS THAT TAXI METERS TICKED IN ANCIENT ROME

THE taxicab is now said to be the descendant of a metered chariot. It goes back to the days of gladiators, and of the grandeur that was Rome, according to recent research revelations.

The Romans knew the taxicab even before the time of Julius Caesar. How far beyond that it goes has not yet been found. But Vitruvius, described as the man who dedicated a classic volume on architecture to the Emperor Augustus, called the taxicab of those days, "an invention of some utility, one of the most ingenious things that we derive from the ancients."

This taxicab, with a meter like a sanded hour glass, is now resurrected by Phil Hale, literary and art critic of the Boston Herald. He describes it as having been operated "by some contrivance by which a pebble was dropped into a bowl under the carriage for every 1,000 paces traveled. At the end of the journey the driver counted the stones and thus arrived at the fare to be paid."

Michigan Pike Welcomes Flood of Auto Tourists

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—As a result of inquiries from touring bureaus, motor clubs and motorists in all sections of the middle west as to condition of the West Michigan pike, this state's famous 400 mile road from the state line to Mackinaw, H. J. Gray, secretary-manager of the Michigan Tourist and Rest association, personally drove the entire length of the highway, returning with the information that there are two poor miles in the 400 mile tour.

Action has been taken with state officials to correct the condition immediately. The two miles in question are on the detour going north from Hart, but are well marked and passable.

Gray reported that from the state line to Spring lake there is but one detour, that at Benton Harbor over macadam, this entire stretch being concrete or macadam. From Spring lake motorists leave "M 11," taking concrete and good gravel through Fruitport, returning to "M 11" just south of Muskegon. Four miles of concrete are being constructed between Spring lake and the point mentioned. This new work connects up with concrete which runs to four miles north of Muskegon, where three miles more of cement is being constructed, to avoid which a well marked, reasonably good road detour has been provided. From that point there are thirty-one miles of concrete north to Hart, followed by the three mile detour with its two poor miles. Macadam road takes the motorist eight miles farther, to within a mile of Pentwater, beyond which is good gravel and cement for thirty-nine miles to within one-half mile of Manistee, the latter stretch being under construction with a side road in good condition.

Leaving Manistee there are six miles of excellent gravel detour. Then "M 11" is good gravel to Benzonia. From Benzonia motorists will take a good gravel road to the right through Homestead and Bendon, returning to "M 11" two miles north of Bendon, thus avoiding gravel construction near Honor. Then follows good gravel and concrete for seventy-one miles to a point just south of Charlevoix, whence the motorist takes a perfect gravel and macadam road into Charlevoix, avoiding concrete construction work. Twenty-five miles of concrete follow on "M 11" to a point three miles beyond Petoskey, and from there to a point three miles south of Mackinaw City "M 11" is good gravel or macadam for a stretch of thirty miles.

Michigan authorities have each detour from "M 11" well marked for visiting motorists, and already thousands of cars from outside states are enjoying this famous road.

Highest Speeds in History to Mark Kansas City Tilt

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 30.—With fourteen of the fastest racing automobiles that engineering science can devise and an equal number of star drivers waiting for the starter's flag on next Wednesday afternoon, all that remains to be accomplished for the 250 mile national championship race here are a few finishing touches on some of the cars.

That the race is destined to smash all existing speedway records for the distance is indicated by the tremendous speeds obtained by some of the drivers in their practice spins around the smooth mile and a quarter board track. Last week Jerry Wonderlich at the wheel of his tiny racer astounded spectators by running 118.6 miles an hour. Yet that almost unbelievable speed does not satisfy, and Jerry, like the other drivers, is working to get 120 miles per hour out of his mount.

Milton, winner of last year's opening race here and the 1923 victor at Indianapolis; Hartz, Cooper, and others have demonstrated speed of 115 miles an hour and better. The veteran De Palma, whose predictions are authoritative, has declared that he will be surprised if 120 miles an hour is not attained by some of the entrants before race day.

Every condition points to high speeds. Virtually all of the cars are in almost perfect running order. The high banked track has been carefully gone over and all bumps eliminated, so that it is lightning fast. Speedway officials, race drivers, and other authorities are unanimous in their predictions that the winner of the race will average for the 250 miles more than 110 miles an hour.

AUTOMOBILES HAND UNCLE SAM ELEVEN YEAR LEASE ON LIFE

ELEVEN years have been added to the average life of the American citizen by the general adoption of the automobile as a means of individual transportation.

In 1903, when only 10,659 cars were produced, an American might hope to live an average of 37.64 years.

In 1913, or ten years later when 461,500 automobiles were built, his life expectancy was 41.01 years.

In 1922, when 2,287,000 automobiles were built, his life expectancy had increased to 48.66 years.

Sunshine, freedom from worry, the open air, and the exhilaration of the open road has accomplished this in twenty years' time, according to Edward S. Jordan.

These figures were revealed after an investigation by three prominent physicians in Louisville in an exhibit at the National Health exposition held recently.

STUTZ SIX

For Economical Travel

The economy of the Stutz Six encompasses far more than merely its phenomenal frugality in the use of fuel and its exceptional saving of oil and tires.

It projects itself so noticeably into every department of operation and maintenance that the Stutz Six is proclaimed by all who know it as the most economical traveler among finer cars.

The element of time is a big factor in reckoning economy. The Stutz Six squanders none of it in costly coddling and tinkering so necessary to most cars. Neither is time wasted in conditioning the Stutz Six when new. Every car is ready for maximum performance when delivered to the owner, due to its unusual factory testing.

Even in the usual necessary lubrication a big saving is effected. The oil pressure system employed is not only the most efficient available but makes the task of oiling the car far quicker, cheaper and cleaner.

Since the Stutz Six can maintain sustained high speeds indefinitely without strain or hazard, it will cover with less fatigue distances so much greater than are customary that daily touring mileages are increased immeasurably.

Designed for present-day traffic, the Stutz Six eliminates much of the aggravation and waste of time in parking. It will slip easily into a hole that other cars of more unwieldy size and less adaptable turning radius can not take.

Withal, the price of the Stutz Six occasions an important saving over the cost of any comparable car. Every investigation has confirmed it as America's lowest-priced quality Six—the most prudently priced class car.

Considering everything—purchase price, upkeep and maintenance—the Stutz Six is beyond question the most economical investment in the quality field. And with the increasing number rapidly replacing other well-known makes of cars the more positive becomes this conviction.

Dollar Harvest Stored Against Auto Rainy Day

Record Market Gives Motor Maker Safety in Future.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., June 30.—[Special.]—Today marked the completion of the first half of the year of the automobile industry. The period was the most progressive and prosperous six months in the automobile history. Indications of six months ago that pointed to a season of success were more than realized, as a glimpse of the final balance sheets will show.

In the early weeks of the present year prominent forecasters predicted a year of great prosperity, and that the first six months would set a new production and sale mark. Not a manufacturer believed otherwise. Pessimists joined the ranks of optimists, but, strange to say, they all undershot the mark. Looking back to the six months of business they express astonishment over the tremendous volume of passenger cars and trucks that have been absorbed.

Opinions voiced by several recognized authorities in executive lines indicate that, while trade during the last half of the year will fall short of the business for the first six months, it will set new marks as opposed to the corresponding period of 1922. July and August are sure to show a slight seasonal easing up, while September will show a pickup. To substantiate predictions that business will continue good, manufacturers say that the farm market is just opening. Crops are good and there is no reason for further delay by farmers who have held back awaiting the result of their crops. The significance of this condition may be appreciated when it is pointed out that at least half the total sales of automobiles are made in farming districts.

The south has started to buy its proper quota in relation to the remainder of the country. California continues to buy and beg for more. That state shows a better all season market than any other state, and it is a problem how to satisfy dealers' demands.

Within the next few weeks price reductions are anticipated by half a dozen manufacturers on all of their models. This will tend to keep the output up to a high figure, together with looked for announcements of several new models. At present the production is running abreast of demand and manufacturers are keeping their decks clear for any new developments they may have in the new model line.

Indications are that the industry will consume about 15 per cent less steel during the second six months than it did the first half. This is an excellent barometer. Manufacturers are not ordering further ahead than is necessary and are pursuing a "hand to mouth" policy.

Ford continues its record breaking pace with no immediate signs of an easing up. The high weekly mark now stands at 40,275 cars and trucks—a wonderful achievement. This broke the record for the best previous week by twenty-nine cars. The daily record is 6,817. Along automobile row one hears the talk that when the daily average of Ford cars nears the 7,000 mark there will be a substantial cut in prices. This, however, is emphatically denied by Ford authorities. It is also said that the concern will probably not reach the high mark of 7,000 cars and trucks a day.

At no time in its history has the automotive industry had more real cash than at the present time. Two companies are loaning money through local banks, and several are carrying their own drafts against cars shipped. A banker who is in the position to know says that not one automobile concern in Michigan is borrowing money. Here are some accurate figures:

Hudson Motor Car company has the tidy balance of $13,000,000, with no money borrowed; Packard, $4,500,000 in banks, and $7,500,000 in United States securities, with no bank or other loans. It has approximately $30,000,000 quick assets, against $3,000,000 current liabilities; Dodge Bros. was said to have had a balance of over $15,000,000 less than a year ago and has earned a similar amount since that time; Maxwell has recovered from its financial troubles and entirely cut off its floating debt, and has $3,500,000 cash.

The Hupp Motor company has $3,755,000 cash and no borrowed money; Paige-Detroit, $4,000,000 cash assets despite $1,500,000 outlay in a new plant which will soon be in active operation with a 500 cars a day capacity. General Motors cash balance of around the $50,000,000 mark with no bank loans.

The answer to this vast amount of cash by the various concerns would seem to be huge dividends. This will be true in a few cases, but it is the opinion of several leading executives that now is the time to build for the future. In fact, directors of one of the large companies are talking of a special reserve fund, and a sum equal to one dollar a share may be laid aside this year. Most of the leading companies are now comfortably equipped and ready for any emergency that they may be called upon to meet.

Motor Body Votes Against Stop Law at Steam Tracks

ALTHOUGH the number of people killed in grade crossing accidents has been reduced from 1,969 in 1917 to 1,259 in 1922, despite the great increase in the number of automobiles, officials of the American Automobile association still believe that one of the cardinal principles of safety to the motorist is the exercise of due caution at grade crossings.

"The ideal situation, of course," said M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman of the A. A. A., "will be the entire elimination of the grade crossing. The expense of such an undertaking, however, prohibits its being carried out at any time in the near future, and until this ideal condition can be reached it behooves every motorist to exercise the utmost care at these crossings.

"The American Automobile association is on record as opposing any law designed to force the motorist to come to a full stop before crossing a railroad track at a grade crossing. We feel that there is nothing in this law to expedite traffic and that it only works additional hardship on the motorist.

"In Virginia, where this law is in effect, it has proven a fruitful source of revenue for fee grabbing magistrates and constables and at one particular crossing has enabled footpads to hold up a number of motorists.

"Safety campaigns conducted by the A. A. A., the American Railway association, and other organizations have succeeded in reducing the number of deaths and accidents considerably, but there is still room for improvement and we believe that 1,259 people are too many to meet death at grade crossings in one year's time."

Statistics furnished by the interstate commerce commission show that in 1917 there were 1,969 people killed and 4,764 injured, a total of 6,733 killed and injured; in 1918 there were 1,852 people killed and 4,683 injured, a total of 6,535 killed and injured at grade crossings; in 1919 1,784 were killed and 4,616 injured, a total of 6,400 killed and injured; in 1920 accidents again showed an increase, there being 1,791 killed and 5,077 injured, a total of 6,868 for this year; in 1921 a sharp reduction was made, there being 1,262 killed and 4,025 injured, a total of 5,887 killed and injured; in 1922 the death list dropped slightly, but the injured list increased, there being 1,259 killed and 4,493 injured, a total of 5,752 killed and injured.

The Auto Upkeep

The statistician has taken his pencil in hand and discovered that there are now in use in the United States approximately 12,000,000 motor vehicles, exclusive of motorcycles. To run these vehicles in 1923 required 5,350,000,000 gallons of gasoline. To produce this staggering amount of fuel, refineries filled a 10,000 gallon tank car every minute.

At the retail price of fuel this is equivalent to an annual expenditure of $10 for every man, woman, and child in the country.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Marion North, 600 Garfield avenue, Rockford, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

What have you found to be a good length drive for one day?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue bridge.

The Answers.

William E. Davis, 222 East Huron street, salesman—Well, I have made several trips around these parts. For a long, steady drive, along the north shore to Milwaukee and return—that's far enough for one day. That would be about 175 miles. I frequently take that trip, taking father, mother, and wife along.

Jack Fisher, 2062 North Clark street, bellhop—It's this way. I was brought up in an orphanage. I saved my money and bought a car. It's about worn out. I am going to work here until I can buy a new car, then go on to New York, and return to Frisco by way of New Orleans. I always drive as far as I can whether on side trips or touring.

Orson A. Hyde, 9 West Ohio street, musician — My auto driving experience has been around Salt Lake City. I have been here only a month. Out there in ten minutes you can be driving up one of the large cañons that lead to Yellowstone National park, and in a few more minutes you can be catching the finest game fish in the world. I like a drive of about 200 miles.

D. C. McGill, Washington, D. C., traveling auditor—One hundred and twenty-five miles a day for one man is plenty, for the simple reason that over 125 miles for one man is a strain on his nerves and very tiresome. I have driven as high as 225 miles, but not for the fun of it. I have driven all through the eastern states, and I find good roads everywhere.

G. W. Borcherding, Woodhaven, N. Y., traveling auditor—Well, my idea of a good day's drive is 100 miles. This allows starting at a reasonable hour in the morning, gives two hours for lunch, and you can be out of the machine and putting up at a farmhouse or a hotel before dusk. With a good night's rest you are ready for another day's run.

Emergency Kit.

A first aid kit containing antiseptics, dressings, and instructions for the care of the injured should be carried by every motorist and camper. Many times a life can be saved by one of these first aid kits.

Good Roads and Friendly Spirit Found in Canada

Chicago Tax Investigators Enthuse About Dominion.

BY W. B. SWINDELL.

OTTAWA, Ont.—(Special Correspondence.)—The automobile roads of eastern Canada are a delightful surprise. This is written at the end of a day when we made about 300 miles in eleven hours. There were rough spots extending for a mile or two, but, as a general thing, the roads were so smooth that I found it possible to read to Archibald Harris, the Chicago accountant, with whom I am touring, the information we had gathered on the Canadian sales tax, which we are investigating for the motors' associations of Illinois and Indiana.

Mr. Harris was advised to enter Canada at Port Huron, 60 miles north of Detroit. He was told the roads were better in the States. Our friends recommended that we stay on the U. S. roads as long as possible. Everybody who knew we were going to Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and perhaps Halifax strongly urged us to take the United States roads from Detroit to Buffalo and to cross into Canada at Niagara Falls—anything, almost, to avoid the Canadian routes. However we were set on finding out as much as possible about conditions in the Dominion and determined to enter from Detroit at Windsor, regardless of roads.

Except for stretches of one or two miles, we have found the highways to be exceptionally good. All the way from Windsor to Ottawa there is nothing even remotely comparing with the back-breaking torture of the road from Gary to Michigan City.

From Windsor to London, Ontario, the roads are mostly gravel. But they are good and we had little difficulty in finding our way. They are mostly "Provincial highways," which, translated into United States, means trunk lines.

From London to Hamilton, Ont., the roads are even better. The route, too, is far more beautiful. Approaching Hamilton the country becomes hilly and there are glimpses of the lake against a background of picturesque, rolling country. Occasional detours cut our mileage a trifle, but we followed THE TRIBUNE map and the Blue Book and lost no time in finding our way. There was pavement some of the way, but the gravel roads, where they are in even fair shape, offer such smooth riding that we have come almost to prefer them.

From Hamilton to Toronto the route seems increasingly attractive. More hills, more rolling country with the road winding along the lake all the way. Virtually the entire distance between Hamilton and Toronto is paved.

The road from Toronto to Ottawa is really superb. Our daily average was 27 miles an hour. The speed limit in the open country over all the route described seems to be twenty-five miles an hour. But we are told by a great many autoists that there is no objection to motorists going forty in the open country if they are careful about their driving and go slowly through the villages and cities.

The road is especially smooth from Toronto to Kingston. Between Kingston and Prescott is the thousand island route. It runs along the historic St. Lawrence. There are some rather steep hills for a country not actually mountainous, but we had such smooth roads that we took everything "on high."

Tourists who contemplate visiting Canada by auto will find one thing which may add a great deal to their enjoyment. Canadians seem eager to help the visitor all they can. In no less than a dozen cases they have gone far out of their way to tell us we were going the wrong way or that we should find a better road by this or that route. The police with their perky looking hats, straps under their noses, are courteous. The first thing we heard in Canada from a Canadian was an officer's reply to our question as to whether we might park in front of a certain building in Windsor.

"Sure thing," he told us. "Right up there. But you cawn't stye there more than an hour or so, y'know."

A feature of traveling in Canada which will probably surprise most motorists is the way they measure gasoline. They charge several cents more but give what they call "imperial" gallons. These gallons are larger than ours. A little over four "imperials" equal five of ours.

FAIR MOTORIST GETS CREDIT FOR CHANGE IN AUTOMOBILE STYLE

TOURING cars, roadsters and sport cars will be back numbers as soon as facilities for the production of the closed body becomes equal to the gigantic task of satisfying the demand for it, according to members of the Automobile Body Builders' association at the annual convention in Detroit.

Manufacturers would like to supply 75 per cent of their production with closed bodies, the body makers announced, but the best they are now able to do is 35 per cent. It was pointed out that body plants are not equipped to turn out more than this quantity of "closed jobs."

The demand for closed cars has turned the attention of manufacturers from chassis and engines to bodies for the buyer has placed his stamp of approval on the closed car. Here, again, the women have been responsible for the change in vogue from the open type. They like the closed car for its convenience and beauty. The man may pay the bill, but it's the woman who dictates size, shape, color, and style.

SUMMER SNOWSHOEING.

Winter sports on July 4 is the innovation prepared for tourists by the Denver-Rocky Mountain Ski club at St. Mary's glacier, twelve miles out of Idaho Springs, Colo.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

HOT weather driving discomforts are completely eliminated in the new model Chandler, according to Thomas J. Hay, who is basing a major part of his seasonal sales promotion on this phase of the "Pike's Peak" model. The features include a cool motor; hot exhaust pipes carried forward and down, away from the floor boards; improved cowl ventilator to deflect the sweep of cool air down through the cowl, and windshield refinements which insure perfect circulation about both seats in the car. Easier steering and elimination of practically all gear shifting are added features to the protection against hot weather.

Starting road driving feats about Chicago are promised as a result of the contract entered into last week between "Cannonball" Baker and the Cole Motor company. The famous road pilot has signed up with Cole for thirty weeks' steady work in shattering all existing road records with the Cole eight cylinder, eighty horsepower motor. He has already cut 30 per cent from existing elapsed time between Indianapolis and Cincinnati, and has set up a new record between Chicago and St. Louis. Baker's Chicago headquarters are in the Cole Chicago Company's building on Michigan avenue.

The latest addition to the popular Wills Sainte Claire line appeared on Chicago boulevards last week. It is called the "sports phaeton," and differs from the standard open car through the addition of many unusual refinements and conveniences.

Four wheel brakes, the year's feature in automotive equipment advance, have been adopted by the Rickenbacker six, according to factory announcement. The new brakes are built as an integral part of "Rick's chassis design and are so regulated that they in no way interfere with the steering functions of the front wheels.

The new Elgin, to be manufactured in Indianapolis, will not make its debut until September, according to announcement made last week by J. H. McDuffee, president and general manager of the reorganized corporation.

Triangle Motors, 2239 Michigan avenue, have been appointed distributors for the Winton six in the Chicago territory, it is announced by C. Roy Clough, sales manager of the Cleveland company.

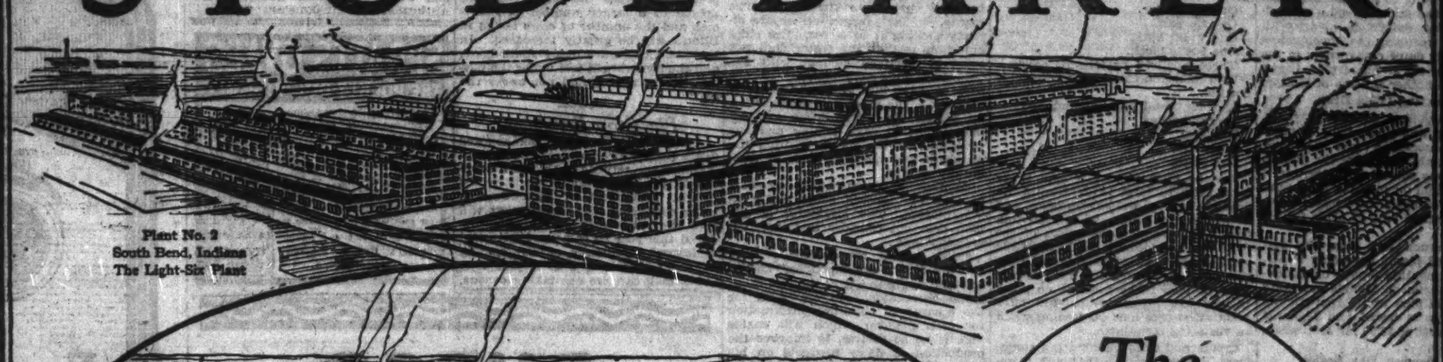
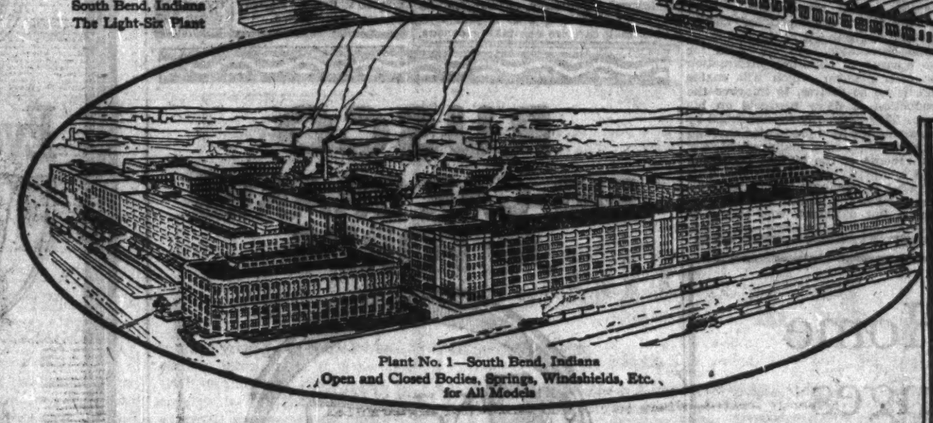
STUDEBAKER



Plant No. 2
South Bend, Indiana
The Light-Six Plant



Plant No. 1—South Bend, Indiana
Open and Closed Bodies, Springs, Windshields, Etc., for All Models

(Plants 3, 4, and 5, Detroit, where the Big-Six, the Special-Six and Service Parts are made, are not shown in this illustration)

Vast Resources Make Possible High Value at Low Price in Studebaker Light-Six

Studebaker's vast resources are utilized to manufacture (not assemble) the Light-Six complete in the newest and most modern large automobile plants in the world.

The Corporation's resources, consisting of $85,000,000 of actual net assets, including $45,000,000 of plants, make it possible for Studebaker to offer a six-cylinder car, at less than $1,000, that is emphatically superior in design, construction, performance, comfort and dependability, to any car within hundreds of dollars of its price.

By complete manufacture, Studebaker not only guards the quality of each part, but saves the middlemen's profits with the result that no other make of car ever built, by anyone, at any price, represents so great a dollar-for-dollar value as the Light-Six.

Evidence of its mechanical superiority is found in its practical freedom from vibration. This is accomplished by the perfect balance of the motor. Perfect balance is obtained largely through the complete machining of all surfaces of the crankshaft and connecting rods. This requires 61 precision operations. It is a costly practice, necessitating a large investment in plant equipment, but is a very important one to the owner.

This method is followed exclusively by Studebaker on cars at this price. In fact, there are very few other cars which have this feature, and their selling prices are from three to ten times as great as that of the Light-Six.

The advanced design of the Light-Six represents an engineering achievement. Its production is an achievement in the application of precision methods to large scale manufacture. And the pricing of the Touring Car (or Roadster) at $975 is an achievement in value-giving without parallel in the automobile industry.

The finest tribute that can be paid any product is increased patronage year after year. Only a product of merit can keep on growing—as Studebaker has grown. Merit is the best sales-maker in the world.

It is significant, therefore, that the sale of more than 80,000 Studebaker cars during the first six months of this year broke all records.

Buyers are justified in expecting more for their money in a Studebaker than in any other car. After 71 years of service, the name Studebaker enjoys confidence and respect more than ever.

The Studebaker Light-Six Automobile was designed by Studebaker engineers and is manufactured complete in the NEW STUDEBAKER PLANTS AT SOUTH BEND, INDIANA which are notable in design, size and equipment for efficient and economical manufacture.

The South Bend Plants contain 4,875,000 square feet of floor space.

They employ 12,000 persons.

They cost $33,250,000.

The South Bend Forge Plant cost $4,000,000, which alone is more than the total assets of many automobile companies.

And then there are:

The machine shops which cost $7,000,000.

The stamping plant which cost $4,000,000.

The new foundries which will cost over $2,000,000.

The power plants which cost $2,500,000.

The assembly and stock plants which cost $5,000,000, as well as closed and open body plants, spring shops, etc.

Studebaker plants, in cost and size, are the second largest of the world's automobile plants.

Studebaker is the second strongest financially of the automobile manufacturers of the world.

These facts show why it is possible for Studebaker to produce the Light-Six—a truly remarkable car—and sell it for less than a thousand dollars.

In actual car value per dollar of price the Light-Six is in a class by itself. No prospective buyer of an automobile should decide on anything until he has seen and driven this car.

It is backed by a corporation with $85,000,000 of actual net assets and a 71-year reputation for honest product and fair dealing.

FARM AND GARDEN

Cow Testing Cost Cut in Two Under New Illinois Plan

By Frank Ridgway.

CUTTING the cost of testing in two and making it possible for every dairyman in Illinois to find out what his cows produce are made possible under the new state plan worked out by C. S. Rhodes of the University of Illinois.

Two years ago Mr. Rhodes outlined his project for the purpose of establishing a method of testing and record keeping that would more nearly meet conditions as they exist in Illinois. He has traveled from one end of the state to the other, working on the practical dairyman's problems as he came in contact with them from time to time, and learning what the rank and file of farmers thought of the old standard type of cow testing.

Do Work Themselves.

The new plan varies from the standard in that farmers take the sample, weigh the milk and feed, and send the records and samples to the county farm bureau office once a month. Under the old system the tester goes to the farm.

Dairymen in Boone county are trying this new plan, and like it. Despite the fact that farmers in this county had more than 16,000 cows and heifers over two years old, J. C. Kline, farm adviser, was unable to find enough dairymen willing to join the organization under the standard plan of testing. Leading dairymen, along with the adviser, realizing the hopelessness of organizing dairy cow owners in the county under the standard plan, began to look for another scheme of testing.

Operating Costs Drop.

On the first day of this year Mr. Rhodes' idea was presented. Immediately an association was organized with 112 members who set the plan to work. It was in full swing within a short time, and during May 1,063 cows and 55 can samples were tested, costing each member only 85 cents for his entire herd.

That is much less than the cost under the old plan. According to Mr. Rhodes the monthly figures on the average association in Illinois operating under the old plan would approximate 350 to 400 cows tested and 35 herds tested at a cost of $3.50 for each member.

Each Member Has Scales.

In explaining how the test operates the originator says each member has a pair of scales and a sample dipper. He is furnished with milk and barn sheets, sample tubes, and special pasteboard boxes in which he sends the samples parcel post to the county farm bureau office on a certain day each month. He also weighs the milk and feed on a certain date each month, and sends a record of the weights along with the samples.

The testing is done at the county farm bureau office. The equipment used in testing cost the Boone county association approximately $250, and included the following articles:

One 24 bottle electric tester.
One patent mixer.
One thermometer.
Twenty-four test bottles.
Six pipettes.
Two acid measures.
One hundred twenty-five sample dippers.
One waste jar.
One tin pan.
One water bath.
One bottle block.
Three hundred pasteboard boxes.
Two thousand three hundred sample bottles.
Two thousand five hundred corks.
Cream bottles.
Brushes.
Computer.
Gas plate.

Instead of employing a man to go from farm to farm to do testing, he does his work at the bureau office, and keeps the herd books. The ration each dairyman uses and the prices of the feeds are recorded on the back of the barn sheets and with this information and the production records the tester is able to keep a line on what rations are being given, and offer practical suggestions on feeding when he visits the farm later.

Cream and skim milk testing equipment is available, so that any member wanting to check up on his cream test or his milk separator may have that service. Where whole milk is sold, a composite can sample is taken and sent in once a month so that the dairymen may have a check on the factory test.

"The cost of the work will vary according to the number of herds in the association," explained Mr. Rhodes. "I have estimated that from $15 to $20 a year per member will finance most associations operating under this plan. Under the old plan the members are paying from $36 to $50 a year. At the time the associations are organized, detailed instructions are given on taking samples, weighing the milk and feed, and sending in the records. In addition complete instructions are printed and a copy given to each member."

Objections Easily Met.

It is quite natural that farmers who have become accustomed to the old plan would view this system skepticsally until they have studied its true merits. In fact, farmer critics are already picking it to pieces. The chief objection is that the tester does not come in personal contact with the dairyman. This argument, Mr. Rhodes says, is being met by the associations now under the process of organization by having the tester spend approximately twelve days testing and the remainder of the month visiting the members and meeting them in community groups.

Another objection raised by some is that the records could easily be manipulated. The originator of the plan does not consider this objection a serious one.

"Cow testing associations of any sort are service organizations," he reasons, in trying to get at the real facts. "The associations are organized for the purpose of obtaining information for each member which will enable him, if he so desires, to improve the production of dairy products on his farm. This is usually accomplished by increasing the herd production through better feeding, care, management, etc. The records of the highest producing cows and herds are not published. This will tend to eliminate any extreme desire to make the largest records. Perhaps a few dairymen who belong to associations for publicity's sake would object to this feature. However, we should try to reach more of the dairymen who need information on the producing ability of their cows, on breeding and feeding."

The criticism that farmers will not send in their samples regularly is answered by the practical test of the plan in Boone county, where they have been sending them in regularly since Jan. 1, the day the association started.

If there are any disadvantages to the new plan they seem to be offset by the advantages. The cost of testing is a big factor with the average dairy farmer who is trying to make his farm and herd pay. Under the new plan the cost is down where every dairyman can afford it.

Many on Waiting List.

Boone county dairymen declared the cost under the old system was too high and only seventeen of them joined the old type association when an attempt was made to organize in that county, while 112 signed up under the new plan. Today many are on the waiting list ready to sign up as soon as another association can be formed. Dairymen who have been members of both kinds of associations find they get as good results under the new as they did under the old plan at one-half or one-third the expense.

"Those who have closely observed the results obtained by cow testing association work realize its great value as a means of improving the dairy herd," says Mr. Rhodes. "We need more testing. In Illinois we have from one to four associations operating in counties where there are from 1,800 to 47,000 dairy cows. In other words, the surface has only been scratched. Undoubtedly we will profit by more experience with the Illinois plan. At present it seems the lower cost will appeal to a larger number of dairymen and the number of cows tested in Illinois will be greatly increased. In this state there are many small herds and the owners will test under the new plan where they would not under the old."

GARDEN NOTES

Weeds in the garden or on the lawn are more easily killed at this time of the year than later. Cultivating and hoeing to get rid of the weeds not only will save moisture and plant food but kills the weeds before they have a chance to ripen the seed and add to the problems of the following season.

Spraying to kill leaf hoppers on potatoes is more important this year than usual. They are thick in most potato patches and cause hopperburn. Hopperburn should be evident on the vines by this time, for the adult small green insects appear usually about the first of June and the young crop of pests are out doing their work by the last of this month. With late potatoes it means that they will have a chance to do their destructive work before the tubers form.

Bordeaux mixture will protect potato plants from leafhoppers. A small amount of the mixture can be made by dissolving one-fourth of a pound of blue vitroll or copper sulphate in about two and a half gallons of water. Then add the milk of lime from a quarter of a pound of slaked lime. Spray both top and bottom of the potato plant leaves.

Cucumber beetles are running wild in truck patches and gardens throughout this section wherever growers have failed to protect their crops. Dusting or spraying with arsenate of lead will get them. Dust when the dew is on. A small quantity can be made by using a quarter of a pound of arsenate of lead to two and a half to three pounds of powdered lime.

Midsummer Farmer Bulletins.

Farmers and gardeners who have been ordering bulletins and circulars from the government during the last year, as the list is published from time to time, have no doubt accumulated several dozens by now. This material, which is sent free by writing to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., will be of greater value if filed according to subjects.

The list of both circulars and bulletins of particular interest during midsummer are listed below:

Farmers bulletin 707: The Commercial Grading, Packing, and Shipping of Cantaloupes; 766: The Common Cabbage Worm; 825: Pit Silos; 842: Methods of Protection Against Lightning; 850: How to Make Cottage Cheese on the Farm; 871: Fresh Fruits and Vegetables as Conservers of Other Staple Foods; 900: Homemade Fruit Butters; 943: Haymaking; 959: The Spotted Garden Slug; 984: Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables; 1007: The Control of the Onion Thrips; 1113: Culling for Eggs and Market; 1115: Selection and Preparation of Fowls for Exhibition; 1145: Handling and Transportation of Cantaloupes; 1211: Home Canning Fruits and Vegetables; 1217: The Green Bug or Spring Grain Aphis; 1225: The Potato Leafhopper and Its Control; 1246: The Peach Borer: How to Prevent or Lessen Its Ravages; 1258: Webworms Injurious to Cereal and Forage Crops and Their Control; 1266: Preparation of Peaches for Market; 1290: The Bulk Handling of Grain; 1310: The Corn Earworm; Department circular 98: The Installation of Dust Collecting Fans on Thrashing Machines for Prevention of Explosions and Fires and Grain Cleaning; 217: Anthracnose of Muskmelons; 274.

Pig Crop Estimates.

America's pig crop has been counted again by the government, and a tabulation of the returns of the third semi-annual pig crop estimate made by the federal department of agriculture is being completed. The final report will give the number of spring pigs produced this year as compared with last spring, and forecasts of the coming fall crop compared with a year ago. Rural mail carriers are taking census.

Dairymen's Jottings

Missourians are circulating the slogan "A Cow for Every Sow." That might be a good one for dairymen in all parts of the corn belt and the dairy districts hanging on the fringe. This is an idea that is especially good for the dairy farmers who sell cream and have no market for their skim milk, which is so valuable as a feed for hogs.

There is much to be known about ice cream and butter, and some things that even up to date dairymen do not always know. Booklets, telling about the value of these two products of the dairy, are being prepared by the National Dairy council, 910 South Michigan avenue, Chicago.

Pure bred dairy cattle breeders should keep official records on every cow in their herds. These records to a beginner may not seem valuable, but later they will be worth many more dollars that it will cost to get them. Once a pail of milk is used or sent to the market without being weighed the chance for including that milk in any accurate record of a cow's production is gone. The records are not only valuable in singling out the cows that are failing to produce enough to pay their feed bill but they are of exceptional value when it comes time to sell surplus animals, animals that are offsprings of the cows on which records are kept. Bulls with known records back of them are the kind alert dairymen are looking for today.

Beautify Your Home By Simple Changes

Every home owner, in city, suburb or country, who is interested in the beauty of his home site, in its comfort, or in its greater market value, will find the pages of this magazine full of practical, valuable suggestions for simple changes and improvements, most of which he can make himself at very little expense. Just for illustration, what would it be worth to you today to have—

A Velvety Lawn Free From Dandelions

You can easily get rid of all the dandelions in your lawn or yard by a method that is easy to apply—it is as simple as A. B. C. Just how to accomplish this was told in an early spring number of Fruit, Garden and Home. We mention this to illustrate how helpful, practical, and common sense the articles we publish are. This article alone would have been worth perhaps $100 to you. See "Special Offer" below explaining how you can get a reprint of this article.

A Useful and Attractive Back-yard Fence

Ofttimes an unsightly fence will spoil the whole effect of a very pretty garden. A well designed fence can be made to add greatly to the attractiveness of the home grounds. Here is a wonderful opportunity to combine beauty and utility.

Fruit, Garden and Home is publishing a series of articles giving the latest ideas and most practical suggestions for building a useful and attractive back yard fence. The back yard fence article in the July number is, we think, more than worth the price of a year's subscription. How to get a reprint of the two back yard fence articles already run is explained in "Special Offer" below.

Ornamental Hedges Beautify Front Yards

You'll agree that a nice hedge will greatly improve the appearance of nine out of ten homes. W. T. Cowperthwaite, a leading landscape architect of the northwest, will tell you in the July number of Fruit, Garden and Home just how to pick and plant a hedge that will live and thrive in any climate. Some wonderful pictures will be published with this article. You will find described five different kinds of hedges, each one of which is ornamental and attractive.

Big Special Offer

We will give to all who send us $1 in payment of a 3-year subscription, in answer to this advertisement, a free copy of our booklet entitled "Bulb Gardening," together with a reprint of our special articles on "How to Eradicate the Dandelion," "Planning the Back Yard Fence," and "Perfect Privacy With Lattice Fences."

Why Eat Petsai?

Why should your family eat asparagus, lettuce, onions, radishes, chard, petsai, peas, beans, etc? There are definite reasons why certain vegetables should constitute a certain part of the family diet. Why guess at this vital matter? Very interesting and really valuable facts will be given in an article entitled "Science Supports the Gospel of Greens," by Dr. W. A. Orton in the July number.

Start Your Subscription With Beautiful July Number

You will find dozens of interesting articles and suggestions in July Fruit, Garden and Home about the growing and care of flowers and shrubbery, vegtables, care of the lawn, building plans, interior and exterior home decoration, etc.

Send your subscription now, while you have the matter in mind. The coupon at right is for your convenience.

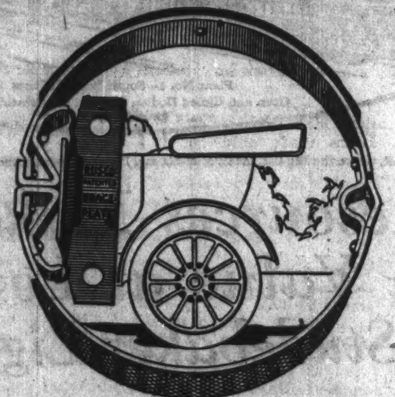
RUSCO BIG-CAR BRAKES for FORDS

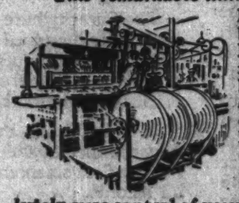


NOTE the patented "Rusco" Brace Plate. This is found only on "Rusco" Emergency Brakes. It's this plate that "does the trick".

Makes "big" brakes possible at last

THE "Rusco" patented brace-plate, an exclusive "Rusco" feature, makes possible for the first time the successful use on Ford cars of the steel-expanding type of emergency brakes. It bolts on the rear radius rod without any punching or drilling. The plate places the full braking power at your command. Without the plate the power would be but half as great. It gives the band a complete grip all 'round the drum. It prevents buckling under the cams. It's a life-saver!

This remarkable lining insures the brakes



NOT a fibre of cheap asbestos in "Rusco" Brake Lining. It is solidly woven in the strongest looms ever built. It is compressed into a solid, square edged mineral-metal fabric so that it has the right "co-efficient of friction" and all the other braking attributes that will put you in absolutely sure control of your car. There is a difference in asbestos just as in cloth. Don't buy shoddy lining.

All "Rusco" Products at your dealer's

"RUSCO" Brakes at $2.50 a pair with the patented plate and with "Rusco" Lining are easy to install. And while you are about it, ask for further information—about the other "Rusco" Products. It is a guaranteed line.

Every Oakland 6-44 Owner drives a Winner

When an Oakland 6-44 won both sweepstakes and class cups in the recent Los Angeles to Camp Curry Economy Run—for the second consecutive time—it demonstrated, beyond any question of doubt, that every Oakland owner drives the most economical motor car it is possible to build! And, in defeating cars of all classes—both smaller and larger cars—Oakland convincingly demonstrated its superior mechanical performance and economy. This economy plus Oakland's "known mileage" is a combination obtainable in no other car. Remember—Oaklands won both these contests—and every Oakland 6-44 owner drives their mate!

LAKE BLUFF TO MAKE ITSELF A 'TOWN BEAUTIFUL'

Plans New 'Loop' Similar to Lake Forest's.

BY AL CHASE.

Lake Bluff, farthest north of Chicago's north shore strictly residential suburbs, has at last awakened to the fact that with a little doiling up in the matter of new streets, parks, playgrounds, beaches, etc., and with a little thought about its future growth, it can become one of the most attractive towns in the middle west. Some enthusiastic residents even declare it can become a second Lake Forest.

EARLE REYNOLDS, [Arthur Photo.]

Affect Lake Bluff, which residents have long admitted has immense possibilities in the way of development, is now going to take advantage of these possibilities and put some zip into the old town.

C. C. Bodenhausen Is Chairman.

A Lake Bluff Village Planning commission has been formed. C. C. Bodenhausen is chairman. The other members are: Philip D. Armour, Earle H. Reynolds, Horace Wright Cook, A. W. Jenkinson, W. M. C. Foster, L. F. Knoor, H. L. Hall, Mrs. H. C. Angster, Mrs. H. D. Robinson, O. R. Henkel, R. W. King, president of the village, and William Witt, commissioner of public works.

Jacob L. Crane, Jr., city planning engineer, who zoned Highland Park, Rockford, Glen Ellyn and numerous other cities and towns, is now at work on a comprehensive village plan. Instead of zoning Lake Bluff first, the village plan will be adopted. Immediately a zoning ordinance, fitting in with the numerous changes in streets and parks, will be passed.

To Save Its "Front Yard."

Lake Bluff has about three miles of property along both sides of the railroad lines which can be saved for park purposes if action is taken at once. Instead of having to spend large sums to regain property later on as certain other suburbs have had to do, Lake Bluff will at once save for all time its "front yard."

The village plan will provide for curving roads in all street extensions and new subdivisions. This is a point overlooked by several towns which recently have been zoned, but which have failed to take advantage of the law providing for a village plan commission. As a result, subdivisions have been laid out with the old fashioned checkerboard plan and opportunities to beautify the town lost.

Lake Bluff already has a strip of lake frontage half a mile long, extending from the Stanley Field estate to Crab Tree farm. This will be developed and enlarged and a public swimming beach established. The village water system is to be enlarged and its sewage system improved.

Will Beautify Town's "Loop."

The most striking improvement contemplated in the entire rejuvenation of Lake Bluff is the proposed rebuilding of the business section along the artistic, attractive, and financially successful lines adopted in Lake Forest. Buildings will be grouped so that the architectural effect will be that of the High street of an old English town. Lake Forest's venture into beautifying its business center was found to be a highly successful one. Every business man wished to have his store in the attractive buildings and was willing to pay higher rentals.

Wonder why more towns don't wake up to the cash value of having an attractive business center? Glencoe, of course, leads the entire north shore with an architectural commission which sees that no monstrosities are put up in its business section. This was made public months ago but to date we haven't heard of any Chicago suburbs following suit.

Plan for Street Widening.

Lake Bluff's village plan commission already has secured easements along the new right of way of Sheridan road, so that later when that thoroughfare must be widened, it won't work hardship on owners.

At present, according to Mr. Crane, Lake Bluff is the only north shore residential suburb which has good, vacant land along the lake and near the station. And as already mentioned, it's the only one where the railroad frontage is not ruined, so far as beauty is concerned, by the encroachment of business.

Oak Park's First Business "Skyscraper"

Above is Oak Park's first four story store and office building, the new $250,000 structure to be erected at the southwest corner of Marion and Lake streets, from plans by Architects Koenigsberg & Weisfeld. Samuel Koenigsberg, a Chicago attorney, is owner, and Duff & Owen of Oak Park are renting agents. The site is 71x100. The building will have two elevators and marble lobbies and corridors and will have a terra cotta exterior. It will be completed for May, 1924, occupancy. In order to forestall a flock of "Beg Your Pardons," we add that the new building is not Oak Park's tallest building.

NAVY HEAD KIN TO BUILD MOTOR PLANT IN CICERO

Site Purchased North of Hawthorne Track.

Cicero, home of the Western Electric and other big industries is to have another large manufacturing plant. A 200x355 site at the southeast corner of 52d avenue and West 33d street has been purchased from Hruby Brothers by the recently formed Maximum Power Motors Inc. Architect Joseph J. Novy has drawn plans for the first unit to be 100x600, one and two stories, which will represent an investment of $200,000.

The site is just south of the Illinois Central right of way and extends south to the northern boundary of the Hawthorne race track. Upon completion of the first unit a second will be erected at a cost of approximately $150,000. The contract for the construction of the first unit has been let to Hruby Brothers.

Garvin Denby, brother of the Secretary of the Navy, is president of the Maximum Power Motors, Inc., which succeeds to the busines of the Universal Gas Electric company of Lawrence, Kansas. L. A. Fosse, formerly of the administrative staff of the credit department of Armour & Co., is vice-president. J. H. Edward, president of the Kansas Life Insurance company, is treasurer. W. R. Hostetter is secretary.

The new corporation will manufacture a gas-electric six wheel truck and motor bus having a four wheel drive. This form of drive differs from the standard drive now employed, according to an official of the company, in that electric power is developed by a generator driven by the gas engine and with an electrical motor attached to each drive wheel. Great flexibility is claimed for this type.

The second unit of the new plant, to be 80x600, is to be built in the fall and will be used for the manufacture of railroad locomotive engines equipped with the same drive.

Plans Five Story Business Block on South Michigan

A four or five story business building, 100x100, is planned by N. K. Arnoff for the vacant at 3830-38 South Michigan avenue. He bought the site from the Philadelphia Storage Battery company for a reported $27,500. He will use several floors for his bookbinding business and rent the balance. J. J. Harrington & Co. negotiated the deal.

OAK PARK CORNER SOLD TWICE.

The two story store and flat property at the southwest corner of Austin and Chicago avenues, Oak Park, was sold by the E. A. Cummings estate to John C. Lindop for $100,000. It was later resold to Charles Opper.

New Subdivisions

Michael Schiavone, president of the recently organized Lake Towns Realty company, has bought a tract of 24½ acres at the intersection of the County Line road and east of the Northwestern and the interurban railroads at Braeside station, South Highland Park, for a reported $200,000. The seller was George L. Schein of Schein & Beckwith. Perry Ulrich was broker.

The property is laid out with winding streets, no lots being less than sixty-five feet in width. The subdivision will be called North Wood Manor and will be sold subject to building and building line restrictions. Cement walks and other improvements will be installed. It is intersected by a ravine and runs to within a block of Sheridan road.

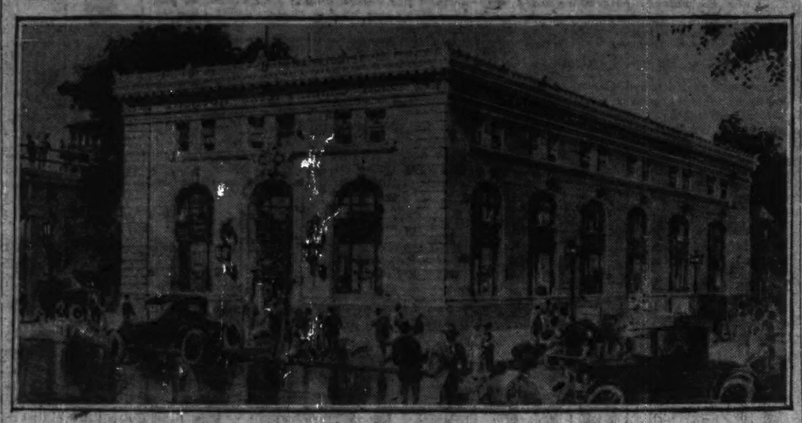
East Side Manor subdivision, comprising six blocks of twenty-six lots each and two blocks of twenty-nine lots each, has been placed in trust with the Calumet National bank by Oscar Wolff and Signa Wolff. Peter Foote is handling the selling.

Brokers' Notes

George E. Klotter has purchased the interest of Philip Edelberg in the firm of Edelberg & Klotter, 2345 Devon avenue, and will continue the business under his name, specializing in Devon and Western avenue property.

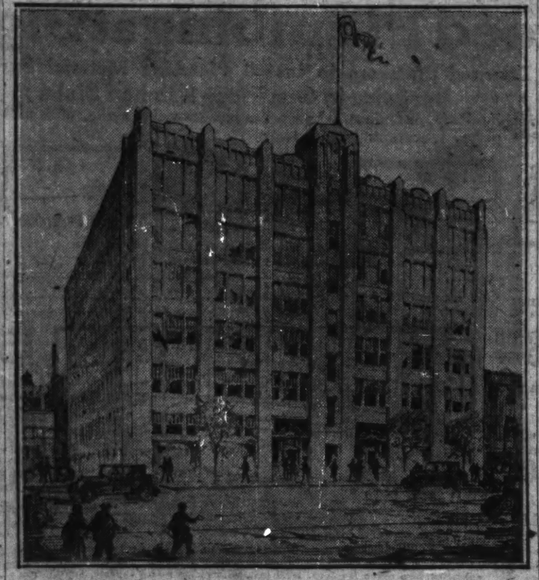
Olander & Dranower announce opening new offices at 4951 Sheridan road.

Evanston Trust & Savings Bank Building



Architect W. Gibbons Uffendell has designed the new home of the Evanston Trust and Savings bank, to be at the northwest corner of Main street and Chicago avenue. It will be of terra cotta and cost $175,000. There will be a bank floor, a mezzanine, and the upper floor will be rented for offices. The president is John Westreicher, a retired grocer, one of the pioneers in that line in the South Evanston district. The bank site fronts 82 feet on Chicago and 73 on Main, back to the alley which separates it from the "L" structure.

West Jackson Boulevard Improvement



Above is the $300,000 six story plant of the Curtis Leger Fixture company and the National X-Ray Reflector company, now under construction at 1119 West Jackson boulevard from plans by the companies' engineers, as it will look when completed. It will comprise a two story addition on top of the present building and a six story annex, 96x180, on one side, adding 110 per cent more space than is available now. The total area covered is 106x180. The offices and salesrooms will be on the top floor. The other floors will be used for manufacturing. Augustus D. Curtis, president of the two companies, is a pioneer in the neighborhood where he is building, in the matter of having display windows. He has been a heavy investor in real estate along North La Salle street. The companies of which he is head have offices now at Jackson and Franklin.

Start on 150 Car Garage in Rear of Emerman Building

Work started Friday on a 150 car garage, 79x190, in the space back of the Emerman building, Lawrence and Sheridan, which has been rented by the owner, H. Emerman, to Louis W. Skobel and Max Dunn for ten years from Aug. 1 at a term rental of $132,000. Davis D. Meredith is architect. His plans call for a room for chauffeurs, with showers, lockers and other comforts and conveniences. Edelson & Tannenbaum were attorneys for the lessees; Mitchell Grossman for the lessor.

IRON COMPANY BUYS PLANT.

The Chicago Tube and Iron company has bought the factory property at 2531 West 48th street, it has occupied for the last two years, from the Robert Glendinning estate for an indicated $147,000. An undisclosed incumbrance also was assumed by the buyer.

HALL OF RECORDS PLAN IS DELAYED BY SMALL VETO

Haas Raps Governor for His Action.

Because Gov. Small was afraid that if recorders in counties other than Cook were given a half holiday on Saturday, farmers would be handicapped, he vetoed a bill last week which had provided for a few hours' rest for certain county officials. With the same veto he killed three important provisions affecting Cook county, included in the same bill. According to County Recorder Joseph F. Haas, these provisions would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for Cook county and in addition would have helped to speed up the work of the office, as well as be a great convenience to the public.

"First and foremost was the provision allowing the recorder to use photography when practicable in recording instruments in his office. This would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for the county," said Mr. Haas.

"The second provision was for the separation of bills of sale and chattel mortgages from other instruments, and allowing a separate window for the reception of those documents to be opened and giving them separate document numbers. This would have cut the congestion at the filing window in half and saved many hours of waiting for the public.

"The third provision looked into the future and would have allowed the establishment of a hall of records in Cook county."

According to a statement made by County Commissioner Charles S. Peterson, Mr. Haas undoubtedly will go ahead and install the photographic system despite the veto.

Lease New Playhouse at Kedzie-63d for 10 Years

Samuel Meyers, brother-in-law of A. J. Balaban of Balaban & Katz, and Joseph Stern, brother-in-law of Samuel Katz of the same movie firm, have leased the 1,200 seat theater in the building now under construction at the southeast corner of 63d and Kedzie, from Fitzpatrick and McElroy, for ten years at a term rental said to be $141,000. Halvorsen & Co. were brokers. Henry L. Newhouse is architect of the building.

FEMININE BONIFACE PAYS $300,000 FOR BLACK BELT "DRAKE"

The two six story Vincennes hotel and apartment buildings, at the southeast corner of Vincennes and 36th, formerly occupied by white people and more recently considered the leading hostelry of Chicago's colored folk, has been sold by the Vincennes Hotel company to Mrs. Elizabeth Barnett for a reported $300,000, subject to $190,000. Mrs. Barnett has made an unusual success as boniface. She has been operating the Vincennes for about four years and built it up until it is one of the best paying properties of its kind in the country. Every room is said to be occupied, with a long waiting list for apartments, and it is sometimes called "The Drake of the Black Belt." Walter J. Prendergast and Leverett F. Cox of K. R. Beak & Co. represented all parties. This is the second time within a year that this property has been sold by the same brokers.

MRS. ELIZABETH BARNETT.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In yesterday's real estate department it was incorrectly stated that Nels B. Johnson sold the Tudor building at 4200 Ellis, and the Kenwood at 6615 Kenwood avenue. Mr. Johnson was the buyer.

CHICAGOANS TO GIVE LOS ANGELES A BELT RAILROAD

A group of Chicagoans, the men back of the Union Stockyards, the Central Manufacturing district and the Chicago Junction railway, has organized the Los Angeles Junction Railway company, capitalized at $1,000,000. This new belt line road will serve the industries of the Los Angeles Union Stockyards and the new Los Angeles Central Manufacturing district and connect with all trunk line carriers entering the city. Both of these projects were inaugurated and are managed by Chicagoans.

The officers of the Los Angeles Junction Railway company are: J. A. Spoor, chairman of the board; Richard Fitzgerald, president; H. E. Poconto, vice-president; J. A. Naughton, vice-president and general manager; F. L. S. Harman, secretary and treasurer. All but Mr. McNaughton and Mr. Harman are located in Chicago.

PLANS GLEN VIEW SUBDIVISION.

Paul C. Loeber has bought twenty-five acres in the town of Glen View, two blocks from the St. Paul station, on the Glen View road, and will subdivide it into acre and half acre lots for high class residences. It is close to the North Shore Golf club. The seller was Benjamin F. McNaughton.

HENRY SAAL PLANS $600,000 FACTORY FOR RAVENSWOOD

Henry G. Saal, who started in business in Chicago twenty-one years ago with a capital of $70 and is now the millionaire head of the Saal Manufacturing company, with five Chicago factories, has bought 254,000 square feet in Ravenswood for approximately $200,000 and will erect a $600,000 three story plant for his business.

He bought the site, which is bounded by Argyle, Ainslie, Lincoln street and the Northwestern railroad, from Frederick W. Croll, trustee for Lester and Philip D. Armour and Lolita Armour Mitchell; through Dale S. Johnson & Co., only brokers in the deal. The Saal company makes phonograph motors, talking machines, radio equipment, and a lubricating system for autos.

PLANS $75,000 KENILWORTH HOUSE.

Edward F. Hamm has bought from the Alexian Brothers the vacant in Kenilworth north of Kenilworth avenue, running from Sheridan road to the lake, with a frontage of 105 feet, for $45,000, and will build a $75,000 residence. C. F. Vogel and Frederic L. Goff were attorneys.

START $700,000 ADDITION TO STEWART-WARNER

The Stewart Warner Speedometer corporation has started work on the last unit of its big Diversey parkway plant, a six story structure, 218x142, to cost $700,000. L. G. Hallberg & Co. are architects. It is at the southeast corner of George and Lincoln streets. The Stewart Warner plant, when this section is completed, will occupy what amounts to two city blocks. Wolfram street, which formerly cut across the property, has been closed by the city.

Plan $300,000 Building at Roosevelt and Komensky

Sol K. Graff, real estate loan manager of the Crawford State Savings bank, has acquired several parcels of real estate in the vicinity of Roosevelt and Crawford. Among them is the vacant 149x181 at the southeast corner of Roosevelt and Komensky, where a big theater for the Aschers was at one time contemplated. Mr. Graff will erect a $300,000 building, to contain six stores and thirty-six apartments. Folts & Brand are architects. One store already has been leased to the F. W. Woolworth company for fifteen years at a term rental of $64,000.

WHEAT SWINGS TO HIGHER LEVEL; CORN IS LOWER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Black rust in spring wheat in North Dakota and in Saskatchewan had considerable influence on the market, and while there was a brief period of weakness early, the undertone was strong with a substantial class of buying, and the finish was within a fraction of the top, with net gains of 1⅝@1½c. Liquidation was on in corn early, with December at a new low for the season. Strength in wheat led to short covering and a rally. Final trades were ¼c lower to ¼c higher, the former on corn. Oats were unchanged to ¾c lower, and rye ¼@¼c lower.

All deliveries of wheat, December corn, and September and December oats sold at a new low for the season the last week, general liquidation being on at that. But wheat received excellent support from exporters and commission houses, and at the finish prices were unchanged to 1½c lower as compared with the previous week. Corn showed the most weakness and finished ⅝@¾c lower, with July leading, while oats were ⅜@1½c lower, and rye off ⅛@1½c for the week.

Black Rust Affects Wheat.

Traders paid more attention to crop news from the northwest than for some time past. The black rust reports in South Dakota were confirmed by the government, and the annual rain belt in the rust and the harvester in on as which will secure the bulk of the crop. Further conditions will be closely watched from now on. Weekly forecast are generally fair with normal temperatures.

Reports with eastern and foreign connections were good buyers of futures early and took the surplus off the market at times when the local element around the rust reports prices advanced sharply, the closing strength being due to the Saskatchewan rust claims. Export demand at the seaboard was generally slow, with the foreign exchange situation a factor. Country offerings were only fair.

Large Sell July Corn.

General liquidation was on in corn early, but the selling finally ran its course, and short covering on the strength in wheat, combined with heavy buying of December by a local house, which sits sold July, helped to make the corn in the deferred deliveries. Rounds were attracted little attention. Reports from the interior indicated that there was more old corn back than expected, and the decline brought in numerous offerings, although in the main they were held above the market.

Trade in oats was light, and the market, in the main, was influenced by the action of corn, with scattered liquidation as in the July, which led the decline.

Rye failed to reflect the strength in wheat to any great extent. It is expected that fairly liberal deliveries will be made on July contracts Monday. The three northwestern markets had fifty cars.

Provisions Show Gain.

Provision packers were fair buyers of September lard, but toward the last there was general liquidation in July, with a reaction, the finish being 5@7½c higher, while ribs were 7½c higher. As compared with a week ago, lard was off 23½c and short ribs 17½c. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregate 1,235,000, against 2,322,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

For the third today the wheat market is largely a weather and export proposition. Black rust is found in the northwest as it has been for years, and the extent of injury to the crop is dependent upon weather conditions from now on. Good weather is also needed for harvesting and threshing of winter wheat. The short interest has been cut down the last few days. Good buying is needed to keep prices advancing.

Deliveries on July contracts on Monday are expected to be light of wheat and oats. Corn deliveries are estimated at 500,000 bu or more, and rye 200,000 bu.

"Europe outside of Great Britain has no money with which to buy food supplies on a large scale, and will buy from day to day," said M. F. Rosenbaum of the J. Rosenbaum Grain corporation, who is back from a third trip to Europe within a year. "This daily buying will keep a steady line of wheat going to them. There has been no speculative buying except by France and Italy, who have bought contracts extending to next February. Indications are that Russia will have some grain to export and it should not be overlooked. We are expecting a good year from a cash handler's standpoint as grains will be carried largely in the west and good carrying charges will be paid."

"There has been some damage to quality of wheat, wheat and oats by recent extremely hot weather," said a grain man from Decatur, Ill. "On June 24 temperatures were 106, the highest known in June. Corn has been forced along and is fairly good. Industries have paid an average of 70c at loading stations in central Illinois for corn. The run of corn after next week will be light and continue so the rest of the season. The Staley plant at Decatur will shut down shortly for ten days to make repairs. It is operating at less capacity of late as the starch trade as well as glucose business is slow."

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of wheat at the seaboard in all positions were estimated at 500,000 bu, with 100,000 bu rye. Paris cables reported weather in France improving.

Chicago handlers sold 55,000 bu wheat, 100,000 bu corn, and 60,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, while a local house bought back 55,000 bu hard winter sold to Montreal exporters recently.

Offerings of cash corn were fair and sold at unchanged prices as compared with the July. No. 2 mixed was 1½@2c over, No. 3 2¼@3c over, and white at 1¾@2c over the future. Receipts, 115 cars. Outside markets unchanged to 1½c lower.

Cash oats basis was easier as compared with the July, with No. 2 white 2¼@2¾c over and No. 3 white 1¼@1½c over the future. Receipts, 80 cars.

J. BULL'S LAUGH ON U. S. QUICKLY FINDS SILENCE

BY SCRUTATOR.

While British M. P.'s and Fleet street oracles have been hectoring your Uncle Samuel about Ellis island, and rum ships, while rum runners from British ports have been making monkeys out of dry enforcers, as if in special spite of William Jennings Bryan, John Bull has been having troubles of the same kind in various corners of his assorted empire. Perhaps a little mention of these flare ups will contribute to cousinly amity—at any rate they tend to prove again that blood is thicker than water.

Americans are quite used to strictures from Europeans, who deride our race consciousness. But the North European always develops it when he becomes a colonial. Right now the dream of a "commonwealth of nations" and schemes for imperial trade preferences within the British empire are butting into the same thing that British bishops and Manchester "liberals" roast us for.

Britain's African colonies are excluding their fellow subjects from India. British Columbia refuses to give Hindus the right to vote, in spite of pleas from eastern Canada not to tear the fabric of empire and trade.

Australia is not only excluding everybody with a pigmented skin, but fails to enthuse over plans to swell her population with British unemployed. The "solidarity of the proletariat" is a frequent phrase from the soap box, but neither the Australian Labor party nor the Australian Reds include Japanese in this brotherhood, and now they kick on their cobkney cousins.

The Australian Worker of Sidney, which dotes on Moscow—at a safe distance—denounces the efforts of empire enthusiasts to plant 100,000 British workmen per year in the commonwealth. The immigration scheme is denounced as a plan of British capitalists to undermine Australia's state socialism with cheap labor. Declaring that British imperialism is losing out elsewhere, the Worker asserts that the "money bags" in London look to Australia to recoup their position. "The lands of the Anzacs are splendid spheres for the operation of experienced thieves," says the Worker.

It appears that Australia also has her "armed springers." Answering the arguments of the immigrationists to the effect that Australia needs population for defense against Japan, the Worker exclaims: "They know that Australia is able to protect herself and that no enemy in the world could make an effective landing here." Sounds familiar, doesn't it? If Australia could land 350,000 effectively in France it is hard to see why somebody couldn't land rather effectively in Australia. It reminds us of home, too, to note that the armed springers of Australia are the same who didn't do much springing in the late unpleasantness.

Although far away, Australia is not immune from American pinkism. Commenting on the electoral success of a Red candidate in Queensland colony, the Worker notes that the telegrams of congratulation included one from a "prominent New York financier, now residing in London."

But John's troubles that tickle us most are in his rubber domains. If we have rum runners, thanks to Volstead, Brother Bull has developed a fine breed of rubber runners around Singapore, thanks to his rubber export restrictions. When John restricted us in Boston tea party days we also turned out some good smugglers and smuggling and patriotism were sometimes closely intertwined prior to 1776. Smugglers made excellent privateers a little later on. The news from Malaysia now has a familiar ring. "Officials are puzzled" at the large deliveries of rubber made in foreign ports. "Reports of extensive smuggling operations have been received." The usual "strong measures" are to be taken and "more rigid restrictions are to be imposed." Everybody with a stock of rubber on hand must make a full report and receive coupons for every pound. None can move without the coupons. And so it goes.

So far this year the average price of rubber paid by American importers is far below the quotations reached by the market after the imposition of the restrictions, which shows that there has been a lot of smuggling or that much of the product was rushed out before the law went into effect.

No one can look over John Bull's trouble kit without developing that fellow feeling that makes us wondrous kind. Lowell's little essay on "Condescension in Foreigners" is still a good book for both nations to read. It's full of good advice for both, and strange to say some of the things that applied to us when he wrote it, should be taken to heart by Europeans today.

Florida Realty Corporation

First Mortgage Real Estate Twenty Year 7% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

To be Dated July 1st, 1923. Due July 1st, 1943.

Principal and interest payable July 1st and January 1st at the office of the First Savings and Trust Company of Tampa, Florida, or at the office of correspondent in New York and Chicago, without deduction of normal Federal income tax not in excess of 2%. Callable at option of Board of Directors by lots as follows: July 1, 1928, $200,000.00 at $105.00 and accrued interest, and annually thereafter on the first day of July in lots of not less than $50,000.00, with a reduction of one-fourth of 1% of the premium for each year; provided, however, that in no case shall the Bonds be redeemed at less than $101.00 and accrued interest. Coupon Bonds in denominations of $500.00 and $1,000.00, registerable as to principal, and interchangeable.

Annual Cumulative Sinking Fund, commencing July 1, 1924, is to be 4% of the issue for the first five years, and 5% thereafter.

First Savings & Trust Company, Tampa, Florida, Trustee

A letter from Mr. Vance W. Helm, President of the Corporation, copies of which will be furnished upon request, has been summarized by him as follows:

The Company: The Florida Realty Corporation was incorporated under the laws of the State of Florida for the purpose of acquiring title to a tract of land 60 x 105 feet, situated on Franklin street, in the heart of the commercial and banking district of Tampa, Florida, and for the purpose of constructing thereon an office building, twenty-five stories in height, plans for which have been perfected. Construction of the building to be begun at an early date. This issue will be a closed first mortgage on building and land. Architect and contractors estimate completion of the structure within one year.

Demand: Demand for office space in Tampa has exceeded all available accommodations. From the waiting lists in the three office buildings now here it appears that there are approximately four hundred applicants. The Guaranty Title Building, to be constructed from the proceeds of this issue, will be twenty-five stories in height. Competent real estate experts in Tampa predict that before the completion of the building its entire available space will have been rented.

Values: Real Estate values on Franklin Street, Tampa, have increased more than 100% in the last five years and it is predicted that there will be an additional increase of at least 40% within the next five years. Roger W. Babson and B. C. Forbes each recently predicted Tampa destined to become the Metropolis of Florida. Its growth is steady and substantial. Tampa is the seventh port in the United States in volume of custom receipts. More than $4,000 per front foot was recently asked for the property adjoining the site of the Guaranty Title Building. The last directory census shows the population of Tampa to be approximately 100,000.

Sinking Fund: Under the provisions of the Trust Agreement, 4% of the amount of this issue shall be set aside each year for five years, from July 1st, 1924, and thereafter 5% of the amount of the issue as a sinking fund to retire the issue at maturity, or on call on thirty days' notice in writing from the Company. First year's interest charges included in cost of construction.

Earnings: At the prevailing rate determined upon per square foot of rental space the annual income of the Company from the building should approximate $300,000.00, nearly three times interest requirements, and over 1½ times combined interest and sinking fund requirements. These estimates are made from a present reutal rate per square foot of space lower than we believe will prevail within the near future.

Surety: The Trust Deed stipulates that pending the expenditure of the building proceeds from the sale of the Bonds as authorized under the Trust Agreement, the funds shall be kept intact at interest, and that funds paid under the terms of the contract with the building contractors shall be only on the approval of the Architect, the Trustee and the Officers of the Company. Completion of the building is to be guaranteed by Surety Bond.

Price $100.00 and Interest to Yield 7%

We offer and recommend this issue of Bonds if, as and when issued and received by us. All legal details in connection with the issue will be passed upon by Messrs. Whitaker, Himes & Whitaker, Counsel for the Trustees, by Messrs. Jackson & Dupree, for the Florida Realty Corporation, and by B. A. Gregory, Esq., for the Bankers. It is expected that temporary Bonds will be ready for delivery shortly after July 1st, 1923.

Checks may be made payable to the First Savings & Trust Company of Tampa, Trustee.

HUDSON TOWERS
First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds

This well secured issue of $1,650,000 is being offered to yield the attractive interest rate of 6½%. As the bonds have already been placed on sale, we advise writing at once for early reservations of your preferred maturities.

Strong Security The bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on land, owned in fee simple, at 72nd Street and West End Avenue, New York City, and the twenty-two story Hudson Towers to be erected thereon.

Choice Location This corner property is one of the most easily accessible points in the city. The Broadway subway, the Elevated, the Broadway surface, the Fifth Avenue motorbus lines are all within two blocks of this site. Riverside Drive is but one block to the west.

Substantial Building The building will be of high class construction, fireproof throughout, of white pressed brick, faced with cut stone, and will be very handsomely designed. The lower floors will be devoted to a hotel, and the upper floors will be used as a modern and well equipped hospital.

Estimated Earnings The net annual income is conservatively estimated by the owner, after deducting liberally for operating expenses, taxes and vacancies, at over five times the largest annual interest charge on the entire bond issue.

Summary The ingenious combination of a hotel and hospital meets a long existing demand, for members of the family can thus find accommodations convenient to those who are being cared for in the hospital. The idea is not new as it has been worked out successfully in a number of cities and is growing more popular with both the public and physicians.

FINANCIAL NOTES

With the government's fiscal year ended today, it is estimated by bankers that the country's total of imports of raw materials for the 1923 period has reached if not passed the $1,000,000,000 mark, a gain of 10 per cent over the preceding year and practically equal to the record for the year 1920, when imports were particularly high in terms of dollars. On the basis of pertonnage reckoning, this country's total of imports of raw materials and of materials partly manufactured and sent here for the finishing touches amounted during the fiscal year just ended to 58 per cent of the total exports, as against 50 per cent last year and 41 per cent in 1921.

There was no abatement to the downward trend in stock market prices during the first hour of trading yesterday. Selling was on a fairly active scale for a Saturday session, and many new low records for the year were established in the more active issues. United States Steel common broke 1 point by a fair sized fraction, but rallied before the close to 99¼. This drop in it affected the entire market and substantial losses were recorded in all sections of the list, including the rails, equipments, motors, independent steels, and miscellaneous issues.

Transfer of the Michigan United railways has been purchased at Jackson, Mich., yesterday by the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust company of New York City for $5,000,000 at a mortgage sale. The bank and trust company purchases for the bondholders and were represented by William MacAlister of New York City. The bonded indebtedness of the company is $12,500,000, and the sale calls for a reorganization of the company by the purchasers.

Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending June 27, 1923, by 140 banks in 34 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district total $1,121,696,000, a decrease of 5.6 per cent, compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 230 banks in 31 clearing houses in the seventh federal reserve district for the week ending June 27, 1923, amounted to $1,184,000,000, an increase of 20.3 per cent, compared with the corresponding week of last year.

Joseph W. Browne of Milwaukee has submitted an offer of $5 a share for 800,000 shares of the Willys-Overland company stock held by Francis G. Caffey as receiver for the bankrupt corporation, it was learned yesterday. The new offer will be considered by Federal Judge Knox tomorrow in connection with an offer of $3,000,000 for the entire stock of 733,866 shares of the corporation held by the receivers, made recently by the committee representing the Willys bondholders' creditors. Both were opposed, it is understood, by Toledo interests representing stockholders of the bankrupt corporation, who recently obtained a temporary order in the federal court in Toledo restraining the receivers from disposing of the stocks.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

(Copyright: 1923: Fairchild News Service.)

NEW YORK.—A plan proposed to chain list stores to postpone the cutting of prices on straw hats until Aug. 1 seems to have little chance of going through. One large chain refuses to join in the movement, and others take the view of "all or none." Price slashing may start any day now.

BERLIN.—American and British firms have placed numerous orders for knitting and other textile machinery with Schubert & Salzer, textile machinery manufacturers, according to a statement made at the annual meeting of the company, which has declared a 200 per cent dividend.

SHANGHAI.—The new season's silk crop is expected to be about 20 per cent better than last season's. It is estimated there would be 90,000 bales available for export, as against 75,000 bales for the season just closed.

LONDON.—Free delivery of merchandise to retailers, beginning July 1, is decided upon by members of the Wholesale Textile association. The plan will be tried out for six months to see if retailers pass on cheaper costs to consumers.

NEW YORK.—Earrings, necklaces, and bracelets in matching sets are reported to be in strong demand in the costume jewelry market. Fall lines from Paris, now being shown, include beads of novel shapes and varied colorings.

PARIS.—Several features stand out in the advanced collections of Paris furriers indicating styles for the coming season. Straight silhouette, shorter length, large collars and cuffs are noticed. Light furs are being used as trimmings for dark furs.

Of this $19,998,581 consisted of dividend income, most of which was received from the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company. RAILROAD NOTES

A proposal by the Union Stock Yards and Transit company of Chicago to increase by $1 per car its present charge for unloading double deck cars of live stock was held up by the interstate commerce commission. New schedules incorporating the increase were to have gone into effect July 1, but the commission ordered them suspended until Oct. 29, pending investigation.

A preliminary income account of the Baltimore and Ohio for the first six months of 1923, with June results estimated, discloses remarkable gains as compared with the similar period of 1922. As drawn up it shows a balance of $6,858,350 available for dividends on the common stock, but this was after allowance for a full year's dividend on the preferred stock and the full year's appropriation of $3,500,000 for capital expenditures required under the terms of the loan of July 1, 1919. The surplus after interest charges for the six months was $12,758,350. Deducting only a half year's dividend requirement on the preferred stock, the balance amounts to $11,558,350, equivalent to $7.50 a share on the $151,945,428 common stock, or at an annual rate of $15.20 a share.

The board of directors of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroad elected J. R. Kraus and C. E. Tuttle members of the executive committee to fill the vacancies made by the retirement of Haley Fiske and W. H. Coverdale.

Insull Interests May Buy Ontario Ore Property

Ottawa, Ont., June 30.—(Special.)—Chicago capitalists, representing the Insull interests and headed by Martin Insull, are investigating iron ore property near Mile Sixty, where it is said they may spend $300,000 in proving of the ore deposits, with the idea of going ahead with extensive developments, if that is warranted. Accompanying the party was J. A. McPhail, vice president of the Great Lakes Power company, and W. C. Franz, president of the Algoma Steel corporation. The party also will inspect Montreal river falls ore properties. Exploration work on the iron claims has been going on for some months, and it is understood that to findings have been promising.

WARD SALES FOR JUNE MAKE NEW HIGH RECORD

Improvement in the financial condition of the farmers throughout the country is reflected in the sales report of Montgomery Ward & Co. for the month of June, which shows sales to have totaled $11,612,994, the highest record of any month in the history of the company. The sales for June, 1923, were $8,656,442, and for June, 1921, $6,903,143. Last month's sales show an increase of 34.16 per cent over the same period a year ago and 70.51 per cent over the month of June, 1921. June, 1923, sales are an increase of 54.62 per cent over the average month of June for the last five years.

Sales for the first six months of 1923 total $64,427,920, an increase of $22,536,549, or 54.15 per cent, over the same period of 1922. This is also an increase of $27,286,629 over the first six months of 1921. The sales for the last six months of this year are not expected to show such a large percentage of increase because of the heavy sales during the same period of 1922.

Burns Bros. Merger Is Stopped by Court Order

New York, June 30.—The sequel to Friday's announcement that the plans for the recapitalization of Burns Brothers and the National Coal company had been abandoned came yesterday with the citing of officials of the Burns Brothers Coal company to show cause why they should not be restrained from executing the proposed merger of the two concerns. The petitioner for a restraining order, C. R. Runyon, who owns 1,105 shares of preferred stock of the Burns Brothers company, alleges that the proposed merger is an attempt to place control of the company in the hands of the common stockholders.

FOLLOWING the conservative policy of this progressive Bank, the Directors increased the Surplus from $3,500,000 to $5,000,000 on June 30, 1923. The Capital is $2,500,000 and the increased Surplus [all earned] is now twice the amount of the Capital Stock.

Depositors' interests are always paramount. This action of our Directors further increases the margin of safety in protecting all funds entrusted to our care.

7% First Mortgage Gold Bonds

Park View Manor Building Corporation

Dated June 1, 1923 — Due Semi-annually 1926-1938

Interest payable December 1 and June 1 at the office of Jacob Kulp & Co., Inc., 33 South La Salle Street, Chicago. Coupon bonds in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000 with privilege of registration as to principal. Federal Normal Income Tax up to 4% paid, insofar as may be lawful, by the borrower, Park View Manor Building Corporation. $500 and $1000 denomination bonds in all maturities, and $100 denominations in the final maturity, June 1, 1938.

Security: These bonds will be secured by absolute closed first mortgage on land fronting 250 feet on South Shore Drive and 179 feet on 69th Street, Chicago, and on three story and English basement modern apartment building containing 39 apartments.

Location: The South Shore Drive extends from the southeast corner of Jackson Park at 67th Street, south to 71st Street, where the entrance to the South Shore Country Club is situated. Between the Drive and Lake Michigan there is only the golf course of this club. The Park View Manor Building, located at the center of these beautifully maintained grounds, has an unobstructed view of the lake to the east and for a wide angle to the north and south.

The Park View Manor Building will be but a block and a half from Jackson Park, known far and wide as one of the most beautiful parks in the country.

Transportation facilities are excellent. Two blocks from the building is the 71st Street station of the Illinois Central Railroad offering quick access to the downtown loop. There is a crosstown car line on 67th Street connecting with all north and south surface lines.

From the north end of the building to 68th Street there is a public park, and another park extends west from the building. The south end of the building fronts on 69th Street, and all four sides of the building are therefore permanently protected and desirable.

Building: The exterior of the building is designed after the style of the Italian villas in Tuscany, and will be built of specially made cream-grey pressed brick with terra cotta ornamentation and green tile roof line. The building will contain 39 apartments: 6 of seven rooms, 21 of six rooms and 12 of five rooms.

The living and dining rooms of each apartment face directly east overlooking the golf course and Lake Michigan. The end of each living room is designed with a curved sun parlor effect, and a large artistic mantel will be built in each living room. Each bedroom will have at least two windows, and there will be a bath for every bedroom, finished in white procelain tile walls and tile floors, with the latest style of built-in plumbing fixtures.

All the living, dining and bedrooms are of more than usually generous proportions, the living rooms averaging 14 x 26 feet, dining rooms 13 x 20 feet and bedrooms 12 x 16 feet. The decoration of these master rooms of each apartment will include canvas panelled walls with ornamental plaster cornices.

For the convenience of tenants there will be a lounging room, a playroom for children, and a gymnasium.

Designs and plans have been prepared by Alfred S. Alschuler, Architect, who will also supervise the construction of the building.

Valuation and Income: The value of the property, when completed, has been conservatively estimated at $800,000, which is $250,000 more than the amount of the bond issue, and semi-annual serial maturities beginning in 1925 will reduce the amount of the final maturity in 1938 to $225,000 or less than 29% of the value of the property. Thus the margin of safety is steadily increased each year.

The annual income from the property has been conservatively estimated at approximately $120,000, which is more than three times the greatest annual interest charges on this bond issue.

Trustee: The Chicago Title & Trust Co. is the trustee, and will issue its title guarantee policy in the full amount of the loan. Insurance will be carried payable to the trustee for the benefit of the bondholders. Provision has been made for the owners to deposit monthly with Jacob Kulp & Co. funds to provide for interest coupons and serially maturing bonds as they fall due; as well as for taxes, insurance and maintenance.

The New York Times.

New York, June 30.—[Special.]—Interest in today's market was fairly divided between the continuing and unchecked fall in stocks, the weakness in French, Italian and German exchange (offset by recovery in sterling) and a decline in cotton which with the price ¾ cent a pound below that of a week ago. In the stock market there was no sign of the change of front which often comes at the end of a week in which prices have moved in one direction. The pressure of sales was continuous, with most stock closing at or near the day's lowest figures.

There was no visible indication of repurchases by professional operators for the decline; a fact which gave some color to the belief that much of the last week's selling has come from speculative "longs" which a few months ago had been driving up prices on the theory of a so-called "inflation boom," but which had grown late and overstayed their market. That such ill-judged professional speculation for the rise existed there has been any doubt. It might account partly for the recent appearance of "long selling," and it would naturally have been accompanied by similar sales of outside followers whose "margins" were exhausted by the last week's sharp decline.

Insofar as this explains the weakness of the last two days, it would indicate what Wall street calls a "cleaning up" process which, once fairly started, has to run its course.

Marks at New Low.

The bond market, as a whole, was distinctly steadier than the day before, though with much irregularity in the foreign loans. Sterling exchange advanced a full cent from Friday's closing; a movement which attracted interest, particularly because a much further decline would almost certainly have caused before long a rise in the London money market and a higher Bank of England rate. The franc went to the lowest of the week, however, and the lira and the mark to the lowest of the year. At 5¾ on thousandths the dollar today commanded 126,200 marks; at the so-called "stabilized price" of only three months ago, it brought 20,000—a measure of a monumental blunder in finance.

Today's Reichsbank statement left no other explanation of the mark's rapid depreciation necessary. It showed the institution's discounts, almost wholly through loans to the German government, to have increased nearly two and a half trillion marks in the third week of June, the paper circulation rising more than two trillions. Outstanding paper currency crossed 17 trillions; it has doubled in seven weeks and has exceeded more than ten times over since the beginning of the year. But these comparisons grow tiresome.

Today's decline in cotton to the low price of the week—more than 3 cents a pound below the high prices reached in March—shows that the market lays more store on belief in consumers' replenishments than on expectations of the crop. Nevertheless, Monday's first government estimate on the new crop's yield will throw highly interesting light on the situation.

New York Loans Increase.

An increase of $134,979,000 in loans of the New York clearing house banks is disclosed in the weekly statement of actual condition. This affords some explanation of the 6 per cent call money rate which has prevailed in Wall street for a good part of the week. Surplus reserves, nevertheless, show an increase of $4,536,370, the excess over legal requirements now standing at $12,395,120. An increase of about $66,000,000 in deposits is disclosed. Government deposits are off about $9,600,000.

The Two Penalties of Extraordinary Value

Why REO Sales in Chicago have increased ONLY TWICE as much as the average for all cars

A famous merchant once said: "The higher you put your price the more highly will people think of your goods. High prices emphasize value; low ones make many overlook it."

His statement applies to automobiles just as much as it does to gowns and hats. The low price at which the extraordinary values of the Reo are offered, actually limits sales.

Although those sales in Chicago are 111% greater this year than last—as against an increase of only 47% for all cars combined—they would be still greater if more car buyers judged the Reo by its high value rather than by its modest price.

The penalty of long life

The second handicap of superior value is that it endows the car that has it with exceptionally long life. In consequence, there are an unusual number of eight and ten year old Reos on the streets and roads.

Naturally, the great number of these old veterans makes them conspicuous. The longevity of the Reo is so much a matter of comment that it obscures other Reo values.

But there is a rapidly growing class of observant people, with discriminating eyes for things of beauty, who have discovered for themselves in the last three or four years the delightful lines and the quiet beauty of the new Reos.

Among these the Touring Reo has quickened the increase in Reo sales that began in Chicago with the First Phaeton Reo.

Rushing pick-up—dual control

Chicago's traffic conditions make exceptional demands on motors.

The Reo giant intake ports provide a smooth, rushing pick-up, yet permit throttling down to a turtle's crawl—both heart's desires of the driver in the loop and on the boulevards.

More important to many is the Reo dual control, an exclusive Reo feature which eliminates the brake lever by controlling the service brake with the clutch pedal.

It saves the precious split-second consumed by taking the foot off the throttle, favors brake linings and provides a swift but velvet-smooth stop.

Have you seen them?

Have you ever inspected the Reo double-framed chassis, with its inner frame mounting of power units insuring long life and driving smoothness?

Have you seen the Reo 13 plate clutch? the Reo dual control? the metal-framed curtains and other conveniences?

If you haven't, come in and see them. There are good reasons for the 111% increase in Reo sales as against the 47% average increase for all cars.

Illustrating the Power of Financial Freedom ~ the Touring Reo

How $1485 are helped to unusual achievement

Those who will judge the Touring Reo entirely by its price will most certainly underestimate it.

By taking $1485 as the sole index of its comfort and worth, they assume that the costs of one automobile manufacturer can be no lower than those of another.

A well-filled and independent treasury, however, makes possible exceptional economies for the Reo Motor Car Company.

Its financial freedom means, among other things, that there is no overhead charge for interest on bonds and preferred stock to increase manufacturing costs.

On the contrary, there is an overhead income from interest on the company's cash surplus.

In addition, because of the company's ability to pay cash at all times, materials and equipment are bought at bottom prices and every possible penny of discount is taken.

Nor is there any overhead tax on Reo manufacture to pay salaries to absentee owners. Every Reo director is the active managing head of a company department.

Because of this resident management and the company's stability, 80% of its employees have been with it for many years.

In consequence, the expense of labor turnover is at a minimum, an advantage fully reflected in manufacturing efficiency.

These fundamental facts of management and finance have as powerful an influence on the integrity and worth of Reo cars as have our most significant engineering and manufacturing achievements.

Those to whom these facts are unknown will probably underestimate the Reo, "sight unseen," because they class it with some other car sold at a smaller price.

We have been told that perhaps the easy way of properly expressing Reo superiority would be to increase prices by $500.

The testimony of Reo owners, however, will suffice to make this superiority plain.

And there are the cars themselves.

How to Distinguish Mourning from All-Black Fashion Combinations

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—How am I to succeed in looking as if I am not mourning is a pertinent inquiry at this season.

Or how, if I am in mourning, am I to make the fact appear, in such a preponderantly all black or all white time as this?

To the first inquiry I should answer that you need not worry. So many of the fashionable women seen about town now look at a glance as if they had gone suddenly into mourning, with their black crepe frocks unrelieved by color contrast, and their hats veiled in black chiffon, that the inquiry ceases to interest itself. You simply know it is the style of the minute.

Then, too, there is this answer. A touch of color will almost always be found somewhere about the gown, if you search for it.

It is not in dress or hat, then in the crepe cape in some color or other pastel shade. If the cape contains the black note, its collar will offer a yellow or gray fur note, say summer ermine, or moufflon.

Other Views of Drawings.

Or the walking stick will have a colored top, and there will be earrings to tone with that shade.

This being so decidedly a white season in the country and for evening wear, the question of white or summer mourning need not take on a special cast. If a few particularities are observed, the routine of clothes served out to everybody will do for the one in mourning, too.

Besides all black, black and white for daytime town wear seems the only rival to the printed crepe or foulard dress of other tones. So half mourning is accomplished, though, strictly speaking, black and white is not mourning at all, according to the dictum of the most exclusive mourning wear shop in town. Black and white can be worn by anybody, and true mourning cannot. Its distinctive note, besides addition of mourning crepe, is absence of contrast, even that luster. All sheen of fabrics and accessories must be avoided. Finishes must be dull. The only jewelry strictly right with mourning is pearls. This mourning wear house offers fabricated pearls of a gun metal cast.

And so—a rhinestone ornament on a dull chiffon draped black or white turban, or a sparkling steel buckle to a suede shoe, however one toned the rest of the costume, gives the cue at once that the wearer is in all white or all black because of style, not because of mourning.

Heavily indented crepe is mourning's own, of course, whether white or black. Only a little of this should be used on a costume. Profusion of mourning crepe is not in the best of taste. Makers of mourning wear like flat crepe and georgette in white or black because of the dull finish.

The black frocks so much seen about town at this hour make much of shining surfaces as trimming. So do the all white costumes affected for formal and semi-formal occasions—silver under white organdie, for example, and silvered lace. All white crepe, both beaded and plain, has been conspicuous at the June theaters, and all black gowns of lace, chiffon, and other transparent goods. The hat, of maline often, shares the gown's absence of color, contrast being offered in the jewelry worn, or the corsage bouquet, the shoes and stockings, and the wrap, or its fur or feather finish. Speaking of feathers, white willow plumes for wrap finishes are in evidence.

While the sable, fox, or other fur neckpiece is still seen as the sole finish to a street frock, the more fashionable employment of fur with the summer costume is as part of the wrap worn with the costume, and that for dressy occasions usually a cape.

I have assembled today three frocks, a cape costume, and a coat equally usable for the individual who wishes to wear white mourning, and with slight changes, if desired, for the one who simply wishes to fall in with the white and white and black preferences of this summer.

Flat crepe is used for the first and third frocks shown, in both of which the plaited vogue is manifest, and the liking for cape and deep bertha finishes, as well as tiered skirts.

The knife plaited cape of the first dress at the left has no communication with the front. When the wearer turns around and shows her unrelieved bodice front, you would guess her back to be equally plain, and that is fashion's little surprise. Many dress capes are only fleeting suggestions.

Bands of white filet lace top each of the three flounces of the other flat crepe, No. 3 in the picture. Two of the flounces serve on the skirt and the other does its share as cape and bertha. Artistic economy is also served by making one of the lace bands do duty as girdle and the other as neck finish. The drooping hat of white crepe is scarfed appropriately in very thin white georgette.

Since grapes have gone largely out of the cuisine—the fermented kind, at any rate—they have come abundantly into the couture. We find them in white velvet serving to trim the white organdie frock presented second from the right in the drawing. A lattice work of white organdie composed the banding set in the rather full gathered skirt and in the fichu held at the lowered waist line by the grapes. The choker collar of white pearls is the right touch in bead styles this summer. The single white flower on the white felt hat is supported on one side by more white velvet grapes.

To wear with these frocks I offer a side tied straight line coat of dull white moire in the most accepted style. Its collar and huge cuffs are trimmed with white ermine bands, as sketched in the second figure at the left. The flat Japanese parasol carries dull brocaded roses.

Other Views of Drawings.

The white sports costume illustrated at the right is of white silk with black banding. The mourning house arbiter would declare it out of the running as symbolizing mourning, nevertheless many women wishing to lighten mourning do adopt the black and white combination. The skirt of this sport costume shows clustered plaits and a black banding of dull silk, and the blouse part is an adaptation of the familiar monogrammed, slip banded type with accent of black banding.

The all white half crepe cut in circular fashion and rather longer in back than in front, as worn with this costume, is enormously popular, being made up in silk and knitted material, and also in broadcloth. Widest play of contrast and design seems to be permitted on sports shoes—that is, in distinction to the simplicity of the rest of the sport costume. So the white canvas shoes with vamps in black and white check worn with this costume do not seem at all excessive.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

The Potters' first step out of well-accustomed American paths into the troubled maze of foreign entanglements brings them into the various consulates of New York city for their vises. . . . a vise is French for "Look, here's a large" . . . and it costs you either five or ten dollars, according upon the countries which you intend to honor with your presence. . . . Let us accompany the Potters on their quest for vises, and perhaps we will begin to understand what this fellow Borah is talking about . . . and we may even agree with the gentleman who stood up in congress and allowed as how the two best friends of the United States are the Atlantic ocean and the Pacific.

SCENE I.

"We must go to Italy," said Ma Potter. "It's the land of song and sunshine. It says so here in the folder" . . .

PA (pulling up to the window with the real Roman zip):
Where's the Consul? I want a vise.

(Crowd of native Italians drowsing on benches look up wearily for a moment and then drop off again.)

MA (to Pa, peering through little barred window):
There's a fellow over there in the corner.

PA: Hey, there!

(Fellow over in the corner looks up with mute protest in his large, languorous eyes . . . what's all this rush about? . . . Rome wasn't built in a day, and, anyway, it's been waiting for the Potters for a couple of thousand years, and a couple hours more shouldn't make much difference.)

MA: Do you suppose that's the Consul?

PA (rapping on window, authoritatively):
Hey, you . . . I want a vise.

(Sight of the sons of Italy who are preparing to leave for the old country in their sleep and mutter musically . . . the fellow in the corner creeps over to the window and takes Pa's and Mamie's passports and lays them on a nearby table with a couple of bushels of other documents, which evidently have been accumulating there for some time . . . he then disappears with a certain air of relief . . . the Potters wait . . . the Potters wait some more . . . room fills gradually . . . how calm and restful it all is . . . the only clashing note in this peaceful place is the Potters, pacing up and down—the nervous impatience of the new world skeetering around like a water-bug on the vast, unruffled calm of old world indifference.)

PA (after what seems hours):
Here he comes.

(Sure enough, he does, with a huge armload of papers, from which he begins to read Italian names and numbers in a loud voice . . . the room springs to life . . . Pa and Ma are suddenly engulfed by a seething mob of gesticulations and sharp cries . . . waving hands . . . stabbing elbows . . . flashing eyes . . . the Potters extricate themselves with great difficulty and retreat to a safe distance in the rear . . . an industrious stir behind the impassive bars . . . clerks slip in and out apologetically . . . suddenly high above the uproar is heard a sound which is strangely familiar.)

VOICE:
Meester Puttero . . . Meester Puttero.

MA (clutching Pa's elbow):
Listen; isn't that us?

PA (a bit dazed by it all):
Huh? Is it?

MA: Sure, that's us. Go and see.

PA (finally reaching window):
Were you paging me?

CLERK (with charming brevity):
Twenty dollar.

PA (digging—he might as well get used to it):
Ooh, ten dollars apiece! Why, that's all we paid for real American passports!

MA (decidedly):
I think it's an outrage! Why don't you complain to the authorities?

(Or, if that doesn't help, Pa might write a letter to the newspapers.)

PA (forking out and pocketing passports with that hopeless feeling):
C'mon, let's go . . . we've got to get some more of them. Might as well get it over with.

(The room is cleared magically of all their old friends and a new crowd drowses happily on the benches . . . Pa, turning to speak bitter words to the clerk, finds he is once more in his quiet corner, dreaming dreams of sunny Italy . . . the Potters withdraw noisily from this alien scene of tranquility, and an old world peace broods once more in this new world catacomb.)

SCENE II.

Of course, the Potters must see dash of London, which means another visé, so Pa and Ma grab a small but costly taxi and tear down to 44 Whitehall, only to be met at the consulate office with the unenthusiastic information that there is nothing doing after 3:30 p. m. "I suppose they have to have their tea," said Pa, disgustedly. But why disgustedly, and why not tea? It is much pleasanter to be having tea and toast than putting a lot of comical visés on a lot of comical passports for a lot of comical tourists who are going to spend most of their time abroad wishing they were back home . . . but tomorrow is another day, and now it is tomorrow, and here are the Potters again . . . how time flies.

PA (who, with Ma, is viewing the crowded room and long queue with dismay):
Gosh, we'll never get our vise here.

The Potters finish their packing.

MA (decidedly):
If you think I'm going to stand around here all day you're badly mistaken. I'm going back to the hotel. Mamie and I have a lot of shopping to do before we sail . . . we've got a lot of things to buy.

PA (plaintively):
Now, don't go nuts buying things. You can get everything cheaper over in Europe.

(Can you? We shall see.)

PA (who, after several hours' waiting, has finally brought up his impatient part of the queue to the clerk, who receives him with well-bred reserve):
Well, here we are. (With an attempt at gayety.) Tell the Consul to put his John Hancock on these, will you?

CLERK (to whom such undue familiarity is most distressing):
Sir?

PA (humbled, and rightly so):
A couple of vises, please.

CLERK (fingering passports gingerly):
Which of these ladies is Miss Potter?

PA: She's not here. I'm her father. I'll get her vise for her.

CLERK (with official finality):
Miss Potter must apply in person for her vise.

(Brushes bewildered Pa aside . . . proceeds to do business with next man in line . . . crowd swallows up Pa, who vainly tries to recapture Clerk's attention . . . finally succeeds in getting visé for his own passport, but Mamie has to come back the next day and get her own . . . twenty American dollars shake hands across the sea . . . well, well, such is life . . . international life, that is . . . they are called our foreign relations, perhaps, because they are always touching us . . .)

"Tell the consul to put his John Hancock on these."

SCENE III.

Pa gets two German visés . . . twenty dollars.

SCENE IV.

Pa gets two Austrian visés . . . twenty dollars.

SCENE V.

Pa gets two Hungarian visés . . . twenty dollars.

SCENE VI.

Pa doesn't have to get two visés for Belgium . . . saves twenty dollars.

SCENE VII.

Pa doesn't have to get two visés for Switzerland . . . saves twenty more dollars.

SCENE VIII.

Ma and Mamie do their last minute shopping in New York . . . Pa loses forty dollars saved in Belgian and Swiss visés . . .

SCENE IX.

And then some. (A considerable sum.)

SCENE X.

The Potters finish their packing and paste various colored labels on their trunks and bags and attach numerous tags thereto.

SCENE XI.

The Potters spend a restless night. They sail tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock on the good ship Erratic. Bon voyage, Pa and Ma, and Mamie, and Bill . . . and you, too, Baby Potter.

EPILOGUE.

(Extract from Notice Concerning Use of Passports, issued by department of state.)

FRANCE—Persons arriving in France without first obtaining a French visa will be deported immediately.

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

HOPE NEVER DIES.

DEAREST HEIDI: I call you mine because you are mine and mine only in the wonderful dream I have hidden way down deep in my heart, where no one may see it or suspect. Even you have never guessed, though I can hardly understand now how I kept it out of my eyes, and you will never know, as you will never see this letter.

Six long years have passed by since I last saw that wonderful smile that made me think of the glorious, dazzling sunshine on a blue and gold firstborn day, and those dear black curly locks, as dark as the deep shadows on a bright moonlight night, but even though it is so long ago, I have only to close my eyes and I can see you again, just as you were in those carefree, happy school days.

If our prayers are really answered, as I am sure they are, you are still as happy as in those golden days, for true happiness, the only thing in life that really counts, is what I have asked for you. For your happiness I would gladly give my own, even though you should know nothing of it.

The philosophers say love is never wasted, but returns to the giver and makes his life sweeter, but sometimes I realize how truly hopeless it is to keep on loving you this way, but then when the next beautiful sunny day comes along I forget all this and find myself still hoping that some day I may find you again and you will love me in the same way that I love you—which is unto eternity. Yours forever,

JOAN.

Wonderful Adventures of the Dog Club

THE GRAVEL-PITTERS RESCUE A FLOOD VICTIM.

BY RAYMOND KELLY.

"LIE down, Ginger," growled Wolf. "You make me nervous, walking up and down the cave like that. What's the matter with you?"

"It's that terrible noise of the river," said Ginger. "It sounds as though it wanted to climb over the bank and drown everybody it could catch."

"That's just what it does want to do," remarked Granger. "When a little river gets to thinking that it's the Mississippi, and spreads itself out a mile wide, it does lots of mischief. It's worse than a puppy playing he's a grown dog and tearing everything up to show how big he is."

"What was that?" cried Toodles, as all the dogs jumped to their feet. "I thought I heard barking. Yes; there it goes again. That dog is in trouble, and his voice seems to come from right out in the river. Let's go and see," and he dashed up the path that led out of the gravel-pit as fast as he could go, with all the other dogs right after him. All of them, that is, except Carlo, who was a Saint Bernard, and therefore too big and dignified to run, unless it was absolutely necessary. So Carlo followed at a walk.

But even Carlo hurried when he caught sight of a house floating down stream and turning slowly around and around as it went. It wasn't a very big house and it was half under water, while a little dog was running back and forth on the roof, and barking for help. You couldn't blame him much for being frightened, either, for that house might hit a snag any minute, and then, of course, it would go to pieces.

When the little fellow on the roof saw the Gravel-pit pups lined up along the shore watching him, he sat up and begged with his paws.

"Please take me off of here," he begged. "I'm so afraid."

"Say, fellows; I can't stand this. I'm going to swim out and get that poor tyke." It was Brownie Bass, the water spaniel, who spoke, and he was the best swimmer of them all. But Carlo, who had been sitting quietly through all the noise, reached out one of his great paws and laid it on Brownie's shoulder.

"You'd never make it in that current," said Carlo, "and, besides there is a better way. Will one of you pups please step over and gnaw off that rope that is tied to the post over there?" Carlo had hardly finished before Ginger's sharp, white, little teeth were at work on the rope, and in a half minute the fox terrier had cut it through and was dragging it over to lay at Carlo's feet.

"Now, Wiggler," said Carlo to the little monkey, whom all the Gravel-pitters had come to call, "you and I will save that poor pup without so much as dampening our paws. Come on. Let's go."

"Very good, sir," answered Wiggler, coiling up the rope and jumping to Carlo's shoulder, while all the dogs stood with open mouths, wondering what Carlo had in mind. As I have told you, Carlo didn't like to hurry, but he could do so when it was necessary, and Wiggler had need of all his circus training to help him keep his seat, as Carlo galloped down the river bank to the big railroad bridge, and then trotted carefully out across the ties above the yellow river.

"We've got to work fast now," said Carlo to Wiggler. "That house will be here in a minute. Tie that rope to my collar and climb down on it. The house will stick against the bridge a few seconds, anyhow, before it breaks up or slips under. That will give you time to tie the rope around that fellow and to climb up here again."

"Right you are," answered Wiggler with his very best bow. Then he tied the rope to Carlo's collar with a bowline knot as nicely as any Boy Scout could have done, and threw the other end over the side of the bridge.

And so it was that, while all the dogs barked, and the people cheered, and even the whistles blew, Carlo and Wiggler saved the life of Chico, the Mexican hairless terrier.

"It's nothing at all, nothing at all," Carlo said when they all praised him. "Saving lives is a family habit with all us Saint Bernards. Besides, I couldn't have done it without Wiggler's help. Let's all go over to the gravel-pit cave."

Bright Sayings of the Children

Jimmy was spending a few hours on grandma's front porch.

The ice cream cone wagon went past, but no notice was taken of it, much to Jimmy's disappointment.

Finally after an interval it went down the street again, and when Jimmy was quite convinced that no move was being made he sighed audibly and said, "It seems a shame to keep that poor horse walking around and no one getting a speck of good from it."

The little girl next door came over the other day and showed me a new doll her Aunt Mary had brought to her from the city. She informed me she had three aunts.

I told her she was a fortunate little girl, as I didn't have any aunts. She said her Aunt Mary could be my aunt.

Next day I heard her telling another little girl that she had two aunts.

I said, "Kathryn, you have three aunts."

Whereupon she remared, "Don't you 'member I dave you my Aunt Mary yesterday?"

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

Hey, Kids! How'd You Like to See Babe Ruth With Us?

By Sally Joy Brown.

BOYS, here a big, new treat THE TRIBUNE has had me plan for you!

Do you like baseball games? Would you like to see our White Sox lick the famous New York Yankees on Friday, July 13? Maybe Babe Ruth will knock out a home run, with the bases full, just to help make the game more thrilling! Wouldn't you like to see all that—and see it all for nothing?

Well, that's the good news I have for you today. Mr. Comiskey, president of the White Sox team, and the members of the Chicago Motor club have planned with me to give a big party at the baseball game on Friday, July 13, for 100 Chicago boys who live in the south half of the city. If you live south of Madison street, and want to go hard enough, you can be one of them; if you live north of Madison street, don't be disappointed—we'll have good news for the north side boys soon. Mr. Comiskey will give the tickets for good seats, and the Chicago Motor club will have automobiles to take you to and from the game.

All you have to do is write me a letter, telling me why you want to go, and why it will be a treat to you. Next Wednesday I'll take the letters we have received, and from them I'll select the 100 boys who like baseball best and who have the fewest chances to go; then I will invite these 100 boys—and if you don't get much chance to see baseball games, and tell me why in your letter, you have a good chance to be among the 100 lucky ones!

Remember, the party is free, and there'll be automobiles to take you. All you have to do is prove by your letter that you will enjoy the game, and you will probably be invited. Isn't that as easy as it can be?

The names of the winners will be announced next Sunday, and at that time we'll tell all about the arrangements for bringing the lucky boys to and from the game. Also we'll send each of the winners a card showing that he has been invited and giving him full directions. In order to be sure that I reach you in case you win, give your full name, your street address, and how we can reach you by telephone, if you or some neighbor has one. Then tell us why it will be a big treat for you to go—and probably you'll be there when the umpire calls "Play Ball!" So get busy on your letters, boys, and mail them to me by Tuesday night, so I'll have them by Wednesday morning, when I pick the lucky hundred!

Fond of Knitting.

"Living in northern Wisconsin country, I have much unoccupied time and lonely hours. Being fondly fond of knitting, I am making knitted rugs and portieres of silk garments, dresses, blouses, etc. I am running short of wool, and wonder if some of your readers would forward me something for same. Of course, I'll gladly refund postage and my sincere thanks to any one kind enough to furnish discarded and worn out silk garments.

We can supply the pieces to R. R. B.

Clothing Suitable to Wear.

"I am wondering if there is some one who would help a young woman who has no income and is in a training school for nurses. This is her second year, and she is given a vacation each year, but she needs badly. She has no dresses to wear. Possibly there is some one who has a suit, dresses, and blouses to give to her. I have been helping her and will pay for the vacation, which is about all I can afford to do.

L. O."

Say all you like about being practical—the something-to-wear problem is a wrench in the heart of many a blithely smiling boy or girl. You know how much your own adolescent yearnings meant to you. Now—come across—for this girl who has a chance of having a good time if——? It's up to you!

We'll All Take a Look.

"You were kind last winter in helping me to get a baby cart for a woman in straitened circumstances, and I am appealing to you again to see if we cannot get some sort of a gas stove or three burner gas plate for her. She had nothing but a kitchen range on which to cook, and now that the weather is getting so warm she ought to have a gas stove, but she hasn't the money. Perhaps some reader has one put away in a storeroom and would be glad to have some one make use of it. I'll be glad to call if one is offered.

O. L. H."

Bless your heart, we were glad to be of service! Not a doubt in the world but that in some storeroom—or some place readier to hand—there is just exactly the sort of cooking apparatus our friend needs. We'll all take a look and report.

Asks Advice About Touring.

"I wonder if any of your readers could give me advice regarding an automobile tour to Los Angeles, Cal. Five of us expect to make the trip in October and would appreciate hearing of the experiences of other tourists as to best roads, equipment, car, etc.

"G. H."

We'll ask and see!

Anything and Everything.

"There is a family living across the way from us, consisting of father, mother, and seven children: six girls, 18, 15, 14, 10, 12, and 9, and boy, 5. The father has been sick. The two eldest girls are working, but make hardly enough money for living and rent. This family is in great need of clothing, especially for the children who go to school. I wonder if there are any kind readers who have old clothing which they no longer want.

"MRS. T. F."

Anything! Everything! Come to the rescue, even if doing so means a little personal sacrifice. Perhaps you could use those thing so carefully put away a little longer, but think how these people need them now. You'll never be sorry, remembering you have cast your bread on the waters in such a cause as this.

MY MOST EMBARASSED MOMENT

Wanted to Know.

I was riding home one rainy evening on a crowded elevated train. I had a wet umbrella in one hand which I was endeavoring to keep away from my clothing.

All at once the man standing next to me exclaimed loudly, "What's the idea?"

Looking down I discovered that the end of my umbrella was resting inside one of his oxfords.—F. I.

Only Too Late.

One afternoon I bought a tube of blue oil paint. After having purchased a few other things I got into my car, putting the tube of paint on the seat.

On the way to my home I passed one of my friends and gave her a lift.

Only too late I discovered she was sitting on the tube of paint, and much to my embarrassment, after reminding her, I found that the tube had leaked out all over her beautiful white skirt.

H. T. M.

Devotee of Democracy.

I was entertaining dignified and distinguished guests at dinner.

As my regular waitress was ill she sent another girl in her place. I was dubious of her ability, but she assured me she knew all about waiting.

After dinner was announced and we were seated she appeared in the dining room holding the water pitcher, and asked loudly, with a friendly grin, "Well, will you all have water?"

H. S.

Heard Every Word.

Mother and I were in the garden, I at one end and she at the other. We were both stooping over pulling weeds when a neighbor happened along.

She had not gone far, just out of hearing distance, when I said: "I don't see how she gets anything done for she is always on the go or running around all the time."

Mother replied, "She doesn't. She lets her work go for about a week and then hires it done or makes that husband of hers do it. He is about the laziest human I ever saw."

I looked up to see her husband walking by, listening to every word we were saying.

G. B.

Her Treat.

I boarded the train with 20 cents jingling in my pockets, thanking my lucky stars that I would be home in an hour's ride, when whom should I see on the train but an old girl school chum of mine. In the course of her conversation I learned that she also was getting off at the next stop and that no one was going to be there to meet her. Thus it would fall my lot to show her around—and on 20 cents.

Also she told me she was going to get her shoes shined before surprising her folks, and suggested that I accompany her. She said she had a ticket that had only four punches in it and that we should use the other two—it was to be her treat.

I reluctantly consented and tried not to think of my lonesome 20 cents while I enjoyed her conversation as our shoes were being shined. When she handed the cashier the ticket my hopes fell; the ownership of the firm had changed hands and the shine ticket was good no more.

Knew arguing was of no avail so I asked for the ticket and gave the boy my 20 cents. He tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Shines 15 cents apiece boss." My companion, noticing my embarrassment said nothing but paid the other dime. I never will forget that shine and her treat. G. P.

Alkali in Soap Bad for Washing Hair

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces.

You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily.

The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

How to Be Happy Though Married

By Doris Blake

Poor Housekeeping Does Much to Keep the Divorce Judges Busy.

What is tabulated in the answers to the Rockefeller questionnaire, among the reasons for domestic unhappiness, "poor housekeeping"; and, if this were not convincing enough evidence, one need but inquire of any divorce judge as to frequent reasons for divorce to find the answer in the woman's inefficiency in handling her part of the matrimonial job.

The special rôle of husband calls for ability to provide the household with means of subsistence upon the scale which the wife is reasonably entitled to expect and which he has led her to expect. In its relation to happiness or unhappiness of married life this is vitally important. Only one thing, in fact, equals it in importance, and that is that the material and the practical side of the wife's rôle be developed to the point of providing the home the husband is reasonably entitled to expect and which she has led him to expect.

Many Wives Fail in Rôle.

It were trite, in view of the steadily increasing numbers of delicatessen shops and their indubitable prosperity, to comment on this phase of shirking and cheating in the wife rôle.

But one may draw the conclusion therefrom that there is a very high percentage of wives today who are not housekeepers in the sense of the fifty-fifty arrangement of money earning and judicious money spending which vitally influences the happiness or unhappiness of the home.

The husband is trained for his rôle. But, unfortunately, preparation for wifehood does not seem to include evidence that the girl is capable of upholding her share of the bargain in home management. There is not one other vocation in existence into which a woman may walk unprepared and expect to be treated with consideration, much less share the profits thereof, except marriage. Yet, there is no business for which woman is more naturally qualified her which so deeply concerns society and the nation than the business of efficient home making.

The "home" bespeaks elements that an abode does not. The home is the atmosphere pervading and impregnating the home. And from the home emanates an influence felt by a nation, society and the world. The home is the basic unit of the nation and as the home is, so the nation will be!

As one judge puts it: "The fact remains that in a crisis, the power of our laws, the uplifting force of our churches, and the enlightening influence of our schools, will operate in exactly the degree of efficiency to which we have developed the average home."

With most people the sweetest memories of their lives are of home. No song so touches the heartstrings as those seasoned ones of home and mother. The "fond recollections," however, center not around the cold potato salad grabbed off the counter of the corner delicatessen.

Not Hard "Job" to Fill.

Efficient housekeeping signifies a "job," with returns in happiness no other job may even compare with, for which woman is more naturally qualified her which so deeply concerns society and the nation than the business of efficient home making.

My observation is that the average woman who sidesteps with this excuse is not to be found among the women who make a study of foods and food values in relation to the health of the individual or individuals under her roof. Nor is she, as a rule, the woman who is engrossed in saving the home from dullness, monotony, narrowness and ugliness. Nor is she vitally concerned in thrift and economy, by which means she may eventually escape from the narrower confines into a bigger and better place to reign over. More often than not she is more concerned with spending than saving.

Permanency Spirit Lacking.

"If the home goes wrong for any reason other than a money famine or some incurable vice of the husband's, the fault is the wife's fault," says one psychologist. "The wife must always be thinking creatively of the home as a social organism. She is and forever will be the active center of it. The home will take its color and tone from her."

The trouble with so many marriages is in theoretically hanging the sign over the door: "Where do we go from here?" Not taking the job of home making seriously, nor thinking of it in terms of permanency.

I read an article recently in a trade journal in which figures compiled by the National Real Estate exchange show that during the last fiscal year but one-fifth of 10 per cent of all divorces granted were to persons who owned their own homes; had established a standing in the community. The other 89.5 per cent were renters.

The newly married couples who begin immediately to practice thrift with the idea of acquiring homes of their own in the near future have a good chance of making a success of matrimony. The responsibility of establishing the habit of thrift in nine cases out of ten rests upon the wife. If she is willing to be economical, it is a pretty safe guess that the husband will cooperate in the saving habit.

It is the only way in the world a young couple may learn the value of money—this making definite plans and fixing a definite policy as to the distribution of funds in the home. It not only contributes to economy and thrift but it develops a general thoughtfulness and steadfastness of character. It contributes an orderly mind. The shiftless planning of a household and the careless expenditure of money denotes weakness and develops a loose, disorderly, unsystematic mind.

Efficiency Gains Reliance.

Thrift does not mean niggardliness nor smallness. It simply means good judgment in buying and well regulated systematic spending. The best method of saving is the budget system, with a definite amount for expenditure and a definite amount for a bank deposit.

A wife who practices this system—who looks upon her rôle as a business job—develops a phase of character which makes her more companionable to her husband. He relies on her intelligence and judgment in more important business affairs.

A man does not put reliance on a butterfly creature nor upon a woman who shows inefficiency in the running of her home in moments of importance in his life.

Being an efficient wife is a full time job. But I repeat there is no other vocation on earth for women that carries as happy an endowment policy if the premiums are kept up vitilantly.

PICNICS.

THIS greatest picnic day of the year is at hand—the glorious Fourth! Thousands of people who never eat out of doors on any other day in the year take their boiled eggs, sandwiches, potato salad, and oranges into the open on that day.

After recently studying some of the fascinating equipment for outings, to be seen in the shops, and after practicing just a bit on devising picnic getups, I was ready to formulate a rule for the picnic kit which I do not believe I have ever seen in print, although I have read no end of articles on what to take to the picnic, and what to take it in. This rule does not apply when there is anecdote parking space in an automobile, but only where that space is small. The rule is this: Follow the idea of the skyscraper, for which the ground space is small compared with the holding capacity of the structure. This would exclude the basket with a space consuming handle. When any container must share the floor space with the feet, it is well-indeed motor or other vehicle, the taller it is and the smaller its other dimensions, the better. Therefore the suit case form of container is one of the best.

The most fascinating thing I have seen was not nearly as long as an ordinary suit case, but was of about the same dimensions otherwise. When opened it presented five tin boxes running the full length, the two on each side being related to the bottom one, which was twice their width, like steps above it. Either end of the four that were of the same size would contain a quart thermos bottle. This traveling closet was a charming thing opened, and as compact as a Pullman berth, while making it possible to vary the supplies taken in it much more than in some of the other kits which have a set place for each and every thing. In other words, it was more adaptable, and could easily be made to hold enough food for a meal for ten people, with a little canned heat stove for the heating or cooking, while some containers twice its size would hardly hold enough for four.

Light Weight Coolers.

There are wonderful containers made for keeping foods, hot or cold, but they are heavy. The bottle of cold water—it may be an inexpensive thermos bottle—should be considered indispensable, and with that weight and perhaps that of hot coffee to carry we need to leave the other things as light as we can get them, especially if the picnic party must walk to a good spot to dine. Therefore, I decided to try a common paper shopping bag as a cooler. In preparation, on the day before the picnic, I put into the kitchen ice box some wax paper, a half pound of washed Irish moss, and a cloth bag containing two teaspoons of washed and trimmed rushlike, and the separated and washed leaves of a small head of lettuce. This bag formed the best part of this improvised cooler, since the evaporation from it would not only keep the well chilled contents cool for hours, but also keep in the same condition anything put next it, as was some butter simply wrapped in waxed paper. Some butter carried in a box, which started cool, was soft in four hours, while that in with the chilled foods was firm after twelve hours, although part of the cool materials had been taken out. Some collection of chilled things might be put into some more convenient container than this open bag. The best sort of container could be of light weight. A box of cake or top being the cool air.

The Picnic Menu.

Since this picnic, for which I did the catering, was to be fifty miles away from home, preparation was made for two meals for three people, with one hot dish at each, but the supplies proved ample for four, and light of weight, while not primitive. First there was plain cooked and buttered macaroni in a hermetically sealed aluminum kettle, ready to be prepared in two fashions—once with a meat sauce, and once with cheese. A light weight handleless aluminum frying pan was used for preparing the first dish, over canned heat set in the tall canvas packing pail. The meat sauce was in a pint jar—full—and was heated up in about ten minutes, with half the macaroni and served on blanched lettuce leaves, which with the seasoning were quite edible. The sweet and crisp radishes made an excellent accompaniment, and there were two kinds of home made bread, plain and fruited, to supplement the dish to meet the emergencies of out of door appetites.

then individual filled sponge cakes each twisted up in a white paper napkin, and fruit and coffee.

Delays and an accident brought us home for the second meal, eaten at 9 o'clock by electric light, after ten minutes of preparation, and the pleasant thing about it was that it seemed as though it had been prepared for the house, because much of this traveled food had been in separate containers and carefully packed. Often much picnic food is wasted because it gets unnecessarily mussed and so is repulsive.

Over the macaroni in the kettle, in which it had been originally cooked and buttered, and after it was gently heated, was cut thin strips of cheese, the kettle then covered, and when this melted it was stirred in and the dish was ready to serve with radishes, cold meats, including ham, bread, and but-

Solid Silver Regains Favor as Distinctive Decoration

By Anita de Cenzi.

Anita de Cenzi will be glad to advise readers of this paper on home furnishings or home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Cenzi, The Tribune. Correspondence cannot be attempted, otherwise service for unlimited copy.

On every side are signs that the pendulum of public favor in regard to decorative notes in furnishings is swinging back, as it is inevitably bound to do, to solid silver. Even since Roman days solid silver has been a symbol of high standards of living.

Occasionally its incomparable quality is apparently drowned by a flood of colorful novelties in glassware, potteries, and metals other than silver, but eventually it regains its proper place, mounting to the greatest height of desirability. Glass, china, and similarly fragile decorative ware have their artistic value it is true, but silver, being imperishable, adds to the qualities of the others and proves to be far more serviceable. Creations out of it have survived centuries of use. These facts make it quite natural that modern home owners and decorators have begun to pay more attention to silverware.

Custom Fitting Your Table.

Perhaps the room in which silver is most quickly noticed is the dining room. The ideals of correctness of detail have communicated themselves to home owners, with the result that women have become unusually particular in regard to their dinner tables. Prescribing no fastnesses, they strive to attain and maintain correctness. Undoubtedly they realize that while table effects are largely dependent for their freshness upon the cutlery, and for their color upon the china, their atmosphere of character and distinction is derived from the silverware. Leaders in the modern decorative movement have pronounced it "the correct thing" for the table.

Encouraged by the recognition of silver table service, silversmiths have turned their art also to vases, bowls, dressing silver, and creations of widely varying descriptions and utilities, so that the use of silver has not been confined to dining rooms. Decorators have introduced these pieces into foyers, living rooms, boudoirs, and other rooms. They afford delightful contrasts with furniture and draperies, and are appropriate to arrangements in any room in the entire house.

Set in one corner of an oak paneled library there is a huge, old fashioned secretary desk. The writing implements, with a picture frame and cigarette box of graceful, gleaming silver, brighten the darkness occasioned by the expanses of heavy oak. A ledge on the desk is especially intended for silver, with inkpot orange candles. To one side of the desk there is a small table with a jet black vase, which is usually filled with bright colored flowers. Just at present it repeats the color note of the candles, being filled with glorious butterfly weed.

Even in Man's Study.

Conveniently arranged in a man's study, are a comfortable overstuffed chair, upholstered in jade green satin damask, and a small, drop leaf table. The table placed beside the chair, supports a jade green lustreware lamp base, with a silk shade matching the amber colored high lights, a pair of book ends for two or three favorite books, and such personal effects as a decorative silver desk and cigar holder. Chosen from old English hunting prints are the pictures which hang in pairs, one above the other, in various places about the room.

Typical of the period of Louis Seize is a console table set in the foyer of an exquisitely furnished home. In completing the console grouping, a pair of solid silver candlesticks, gracefully proportioned, and perfect in every detail were chosen to carry out a feeling of richness and individuality. A French flower basket of silver, and a delicate piece of tapestry were added, in accomplishing a thoroughly pleasing ensemble.

Beckoning a more modest, but equally attractive home, is the arrangement in another foyer. There is a pair of antique little brown mahogany chairs. The dull blue upholstery of their seats and backs is secured with closely-set brass studs. A diminutive, kidney shaped console table, placed between these chairs, holds an odd flower bowl, a box, and a bon bon dish, all of solid silver. These pieces are highly decorative, in addition to being useful, due to their inimitable color note and grace of line.

Hallway Arrangements.

It is often difficult to attain a satisfactory arrangement of hallways on account of the limited space. In a narrow hall, terminating in double French doors leading to the living room, a pleasing effect of individuality has been secured. Nine inch squares of alternating black and ecru tile cover the floor, and there is no rug. The walls are natural colored sand plaster and the woodwork is painted French gray. There is a quaint little semi-circular console table with a glass top on which a silver card tray and a pair of squat candlesticks, with large sized mottled green and blue candles, are placed. These low, thick candlesticks of silver find great popularity. Above the table hangs an old Italian bas-relief polychromed in dull antique colors.

Solid silver desk sets are extremely decorative and are sure to add a note of distinction to any desk, from the delicate writing table type to the more massive secretary desks. A graceful Louis Quinze writing table in an attractive boudoir is fitted with a solid silver desk set in a fine striped design, with an oval space for a monogram. It consists of a letter holder, inkwell, stamp box, paper cutter, tray, and accents for the large old blue blotter pad. A silver basket at one corner is kept filled with flowers. To accommodate writing paper and other necessities of correspondence there is a commodious drawer. Hanging in a long panel about twenty-four inches wide is a delightful piece of blue and silver brocade. Old blue satin damask upholsters the seat of the accompanying chair.

Dressing Table Appointments.

Specially made to fit between two windows is the dressing table in another bedroom. The stationary dressing shelf has a valance of plaited glazed chintz in a floral pattern. The dominant colors are mauve, green, dull blue, and shades of rose on a pearl gray ground. The top is covered with rose colored rep on which motifs of the chintz have been appliqued in each corner and in the center. There is a plate glass cover for this. All of the dressing table appointments are wrought from solid silver in an unusual colonial design. Electrically equipped silver candlesticks have rose colored silk lamp shades trimmed with silver lace. There is a quaint colonial swinging mirror. Rose silk gauze casement curtains diffuse a cheerful, pleasant light.

Contrasting with a colorful and profusely patterned set of Canton china, is a plain silver coffee service, used in an attractive breakfast room. In addition to the coffee pot, creamer, and sugar bowl, there are small, individual pepper and salt cellars, and a silver flower bowl. The service, of course, is of solid silver, too. Leaded casement curtains of changeable blue and silver silk gauze.

On a console, in a colonial dining room, there is a tea service of simple design, which is as decorative as it is useful. Two chairs, flanking the console, have seats upholstered in mulberry satin damask. Above there is a mirror, with an antique floral painting inserted at each end. The frame is finished in dull silver. A set of silver candlesticks used in conjunction with the tea service is fitted with tapering jade green candles.

Side Wall Arrangements.

Pleasingly balanced is the side wall arrangement illustrated today. The little silver chest contains a series of shallow drawers for the stable silver. The decorative, richly chased, solid silver fruit bowl is flanked by a pair of silver candlesticks. These pieces are all hand wrought. The candles are of the same dull blue as the chair seats. At either side of the colorful round floral painting is a long, narrow mirror. The frames are done in a combination of old blue and dull silver.

How to Prevent Tanning

The Good Old Summer Time Is the Freckled, Burned and Tanned Old Time.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Just about this time each year my mail becomes heavier and heavier with each passing day. When the boy approaches my desk with it, I wonder "What now?" Is it a new figure? Is it a new coiffure? Or is it a new style of nail polish that gives someone? But investigation proves at once that the good old summer time is the freckled, burned, and tanned old time, and I have to set about first telling how to prevent these beauty damaging pests, blemishes and how to correct them if they get beyond the point of prevention.

Now naturally enough when you consider that the skin is treated like a hot house plant the rest of the year and then suddenly exposed mercilessly to the sun's rays for three or four times there is bound to be some trouble. Unless one has the large and dark brown freckle I don't think that it is a fault about which one might lose sleep or anything like that. But I suppose it is easier to be philosophical about freckles on some one else's face than on one's own.

Freckles are due to an increase disproportionate of the pigment forming cells in the skin, and their appearance is caused or exaggerated by exposure to sunlight. Tanning, too, is a similar transformation that is a similar manifestation of stimulation of pigment formation by light. The only difference is that persons who tan have an even distribution to the pigment forming cells in the skin, while in those who freckle the distribution is uneven.

Freckles Hard to Get Rid Of.

Therefore, the prevention of tanning and freckles consists in avoiding sunlight. If you find them really a great deal the prevention is your safest and surest relief from worry. Freckles are difficult to get rid of. The remedies in general use are not magic in effect, are frequently quite unsatisfactory. The frequent rubbing of the pigment spot with lemon juice is an old and popular measure and just about as effective for the light summer freckles as I know of, but it has to be carried to a point of two or three times daily application to make improvement in a short time. Sponging with peroxide solution after the face is washed causes some bleaching. Strong solutions of corrosive sublimate are sometimes embodied in freckle remedies, but as this is one of the most dangerous poisons, only under a physician's direction should it ever be used.

This paste I have found perhaps the most satisfactory of any in treating the stubborn freckles: Carbonate of bismuth, one dram; calomel, one-sixth grain; peroxide of hydrogen, one dram; distilled water, one dram; almond soap. Apply it at night after washing the skin. In addition to the ordinary precautions that are part of dress, a wide brimmed hat, a parasol, a thick coating of heavy, cosmetic powder affords some protection.

One woman I know who used to suffer horribly from sunburn, found relief and prevention in a zinc ointment, with which she rubbed her face and arms before going out.

But for sunburn you will find nothing better than equal parts of linseed oil and limewater. It takes the sting out of the burn almost immediately and is most healing. I recommend it as a preventive as well. Grease the neck and arms and face with it lightly and then dab powder on top of that, and I doubt if the sun will leave any of its favorite coloring upon you at all.

An Effective Bleach.

The lemon juice and the peroxide solution are recommended for bleaching out the tan. The following preparation has no harmful ingredients as a bleach, and is most effective work:

Zinc oxide, 2 drams; boric acid, 1 dram; oil sweet almonds, ½ fluid ounce; anhydrous lanolin, 1½ ounces avoirdupois; glycerin, 2 fluid drams; rosewater, ½ fluid ounce. Mix the lanolin and almond oil in a warm mortar. Add the zinc oxide and boric acid, rubbing together until quite smooth, then incorporate the glycerin and rosewater.

An occasional sun bath is advisable for the hair. After shampooing it, drying it in the sun is most wholesome and healthful. But it is most inadvisable to sit under the secondary blasts with the head unprotected for an hour or more. I have seen hair given this treatment resulting in a total loss of sheen and luster, and taking months of brushing with oil applications to get it back to its former glory.

In one case the color actually was bleached out. If you happen to be among this class of sufferers you are recommended to add to the hair brush a light application of olive oil, sweet almond oil, or liquid vaseline, and then brush vigorously. The oil of the hair which the sun's rays have extracted has to be supplanted this way. If the hair has ever been dyed prevention is absolutely necessary.

Answers to Beauty Queries.

MARY: IF YOUR HAIR IS NOT naturally inclined to curl, trying to retain a marcel in hot water is discouraging. It just has to be done offener. There must be a natural curl in the hair to take the water wave well at all. It's one of the weather discomforts we have to put up with. Be thankful it isn't worse.

PEGGY: BANANAS ARE FATTENing. In fact, I know of no other fruit quite as fattening. Eat grapefruit or an orange for breakfast. One slice of rye or gluten bread, one egg, coddled, boiled or poached, and eliminate cream and sugar from your meals.

HELEN: THE BATHING COSTume has its little irritations. You can't keep them concealed very well, can you? But here are some exercises for reducing ankles. First: Stand with hands on hips, raise right knee vigorously to form right angle with trunk, and at same time stretch the toes downward and backward. Do this movement snappy, so you feel the muscles pull; repeat five times; then raise left leg same way. Follow fast with this movement: Stand with feet together, hands on hips; with left foot firmly planted on the ground swing right foot forward and backward five times; then sideward and back five times. Repeat with other foot. Hold your right hand and arm stretched out straight in front, and try to kick the extended hand with the right foot, raising gradually higher and higher. Repeat with left hand extended. Do these morning and night. The hips and waist too will come in for some good muscular work.

MEN'S FASHIONS

By A. T. Gallon.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address A. T. Gallon, Chicago Tribune, 35 East Wacker drive. Enclosed stamped envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—If you are planning a trip to the horse races and have great expectations as to what you will see in the sartorial way, as well as in the equine, cast aside all ideas you may have in your head about fantastic waistcoats, huge solitaires, and other elaborate articles of dress which the followers of the races are reputed to indulge in and which plain citizens never come in contact with. At least, out in Belmont park, Long Island, this popular idea of a racing enthusiast's costume is not carried out.

The day we went out there the majority of the men looked as though they had been betting consistently on the wrong horse for the last year, while the minority, who were sartorially interesting, were well dressed in the conservative and dignified manner that is most admired in a gentleman.

If you want to be dressed in such a way that the horses will look upon you as a regular member of their following all you need to do is to wear your regular sack suit with an attractive combination of shirt and tie, tilt your hat a little more than usual to one side, fling a field glass case over your shoulder, possibly don white spats, and carry a cane. The final touch you need in order to give the impression of a race track connoisseur is to write down notes busily half the time and cast appraising glances at the horses in the paddock the other half.

The only man we spotted that was dressed any way near like the traditional race tracker was a man waiting for the same special train we were taking. He wore a light gray suit, one button, tight at the waist. His shirt was finely striped in blue and white, with a stiff collar to match. His shoes were a brown suede; he carried a cane, and around his neck was his field glass case.

Although most of the suits were of the always popular dark blue or gray, or light gray, with an adequate following of dark brown, there was plenty of color in the accessories. In fact, all of the color was by no means on the jockies. Bright blue shirts, foulard ties, and plenty of college and regimental stripes kept the landscape free of monotony. Blue shirts, with soft collars, were decidedly among these present. Outside of the plain white, they are the most popular shirts of the season. Possibly because they are becoming to about all complexions, they will harmonize with any suit, and form a background with almost any tie.

THE WELL-DRESSED RACING ENTHUSIAST DOES NOT RUN TO FANCY CLOTHES.

Blue was also the favorite color for neckwear out at Belmont—a good sign it will be a popular number in all circles. Blue with white polka dots, blue and white stripes, blue combined with other colors, or plain blue—all these were to be seen on many of the well dressed men who were watching the horses galloping around the race track.

Many of the best dressed men were among those who watched the races from the grassy enclosure where only those who have been successful in racing or other pursuits sit. In this exclusive spot stiff bosomed shirts, white, or plaited fronts of blue and white horizontal stripes, wing collars, white spats, and expensively attractive cravats were to be seen. This is also where elderly gentlemen, with remarkable crops of whiskers, the kind of gentlemen who probably follow the racing fever over the country, and who must hand over to their tailors a generous per cent of their winnings, judging from the smartness and faultlessness of their attire, take their stand.

There was not one cutaway or top hat in evidence. The derby was a rather frequent sight, but not on the smartest dressers, and it was always the conventional black. Headwear was almost equally divided between straws and felts, with the advantage on the straw side. Fancy hat bands on the straws were numerous, and usually harmonized with the rest of the costume. Panamas came in for a good share, practically all of the full crown type, with brims turned up and down in various ways.

Sport suits were rather scarce, and were with knickers with few exceptions. Not a cap, but a felt hat, cloth hat, or a straw was the accompanying headgear. Also a stick was carried in many cases with knicker suits.

Here are a few of the smart looking outfits we noted as we strolled around near the paddock between races, while owners, friends and admirers watched the process of getting the horses ready for their contest. One gray suit was finished off with a white shirt, cravat of small black and white checks, black oxfords, black silk socks with open work clocks, straw sailor, and stick.

Another man wore a dark blue suit, white spats, a stiff front shirt, with blue and white horizontal stripes, wing collar, and one of those Indian madras bow ties, with pleasingly bright colors. He carried a bamboo stick. A gray and white striped suit on another gentleman was attractively combined with a lavender print shirt with self collar, and a blue and white narrowly striped bow tie.

A light brownish gray suit was combined with a white shirt, red foulard tie, tan oxfords and tan spats, and a bachelor's button in the buttonhole. E. Berry Wall was there with a monocle, field glasses, a standup collar, dark blue bow tie with white polka dots, a brown suit and a gray derby.

Repeat this row, taking up back loop only, until 16 points of leaf have been worked.

Work 44 medium sized leaves, commencing with chain 18, and working 5 points and 22 small leaves, commencing with chain 17 and working 5 points.

Stems—Chain for the length required, and over 10 strands of cotton work a row of single crochet, taking up 2 loops of chain.

Flowers—Over 4 strands of cotton chain ¾ inch long, work 17 single crochet, chain 1, slip stitch into first 2 single crochet, single crochet in next single crochet, 1 double crochet in each of the next 3 single crochet, single crochet in next single crochet, slip stitch in last 3 single crochet, chain 1, turn, repeat from * and work 1 single crochet in each single crochet.

For the centers of flowers, wind thread around a match 5 times, and work a round of 8 single crochet and picot around ring. Sewing position with a needle and thread and work 15 more flowers.

Berries—Work six rounds of bullion stitches, the first 3 rounds with no chains between, next 3 rounds with 1 chain between, and the last round with 2 chains between the stitches.

Thirty-two berries are required for the centerpiece.

Arrange and baste the motifs right side down on a paper pattern 25 inches in diameter, and sew together with needle and thread. Fill in the background encircled by leaves with chains covered with single crochet and picots, and the remainder of the background with chain and bullion loops.

Bullion stitch—Work 2 chains, draw through all the stitches on the thread around needle 10 times, and hook, and fasten with chain stitch.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

VIONNET CHOOSES MUSHROOMS

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—You have lain flat on your stomach in the green grass of an Illinois field in summer, with your legs from the knees down lifted at right angles to the rest of you and your head swinging free in a roaming survey of earth and sky? Of course, it is primarily a small boy position, but little girls are licensed in our not very free country to adopt it, too.

If you have availed yourself of its privileges you know how awfully big and close up to you the grass blades and the clovers and the mushrooms look. Vionnet has a dress which I think must have been designed from this angle. It is composed of a grass green lower skirt, with white from knees up to waist line, and a row of mushrooms bordering the sky line, which, so to speak, ties together earth and heaven, as represented in this dress. It is being quite a sensation. Crepe de chine is the material out of which Vionnet has created her heaven and earth, and the mushrooms are of suede, brown, and green. I think sometimes things in nature look appliqued, so fine is her workmanship, and surely everything of hers, as of Vionnet, is made by hand.

In the present instance the coutouriere has appliqued her mushrooms.

Here is an illustration of one of the yards-long scarves of Cheruit. One of the advantages of owning such a garnishment is that with it you need the merest background of a gown. Of course, I know that most of those simple background robes that serve as setting for pearls and other decorations require the most careful, the most skillful of making. A line going wrong in them stands out starkly, like something deformed.

But with this scarf you can cover up all the amateurishness of your dressmaking. You can alter any line to which you take a distaste. You can even draw attention away from your coiffure, if you have done it in a hurry, by the dramatic draping of your scarf. If you follow the decorations of this one, you can probably call attention away from everything else at the party just by the mere presence of the wrap itself. For whereas we are the part of the country most prolific in furnishing the garnishment for it, we of the corn belt probably use it less than any other nation that is anything like as dressy as we.

The principal motif in the trimming is chicken feathers. This particular scarf is of blue tulle or chiffon, and there are chicken feathers all over it in deeper blue. Of course, as we have noted so often, there is always some hitch in the suggestion, so that the accomplishment of such a model is not as simple as it seems. One cannot step out into the chicken yard and gather up enough feathers for such an offering, on account of there not being any blue chickens, particularly any in sky blue. Some old black roosters get themselves up so shiny that they look blue. But that it not the shade. It is more the old blue—you will have to send your collection from the back yard to the dyer. The feathers are scattered over the foundation, and are relieved every now and then by silver balls. As shown in the collection, the scarf wraps round a simple white satin dress without a belt.

The third showing represents a modern silhouette in oyster white. The material is of satin. The sleeves, I think, are lovely. And I always disliked with a dull intensity the ones that were the forebears of these in the drawing, that had more material in them and were more unwieldy to manage than the dress itself. The ones in this dress pursue the lines dictated by the moment of following the arm tightly to the elbow. They are embroidered in brown threads and lined with brown crepe. The band around the bottom is of brown crepe also. A sash falls to the bottom of the skirt—and below it—which is of the oyster white and lined with brown. Threads like those embroidering the sleeves run around the neck line.

Worth does evening wraps for summer most successfully. This one has a white ostrich feather collar closely clipped and set or studded with long aigrette hairs. The mantle proper, which takes the form of a cape, is of scarlet chiffon, heavily embroidered in beads along the hem. These beads are in black and white and silver. Isn't it strange the things they can think up! Sometimes I say that surely there will never be anything new again. And along comes something like this creation that startles you with its originality, even as it charms you with its grace.

Dress of Green and White Crepe with Embroidery of Mushrooms.

Cheruit Scarf of Blue Tulle Trimmed with Blue Chicken Feathers.

Frock of Oyster White with Sleeve Lining of Brown Crepe.

Evening Wrap of Scarlet Chiffon with an Ostrich Feather Collar.

Patterns by Clotilde

1752—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 5¼ yards of 44 inch material.

1728—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 46 inches bust measure. Size 46 requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material.

1738—Girl's and child's one piece dress. Sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

WHITE organdy, combined with dotted swiss, would make up charmingly by pattern No. 1752. Plain and dotted or figured cotton voile would also be good. The design is attractive for an afternoon dress for warm weather, and is not at all difficult to cut or make.

There is a panel front to the waist and skirt. This would be pretty cut from the plain material, and the rest of the dress could be made of the figured, except the sash, which would look well made of the plain.

There are short kimono sleeves which can be lengthened a little by a short sleeve section that comes in the pattern, and this little section gives an excellent chance for some embroidery in colors.

There is a foundation skirt, with darts marked at the top which will shake it fit properly under the circular ruffles. The lowest ruffle is joined to the lower edge of the skirt, and the top one is sewed to the top edge of the skirt. A line of perforations on the pattern shows just where the middle ruffle is to be attached. Of course, these ruffles must be finished at the bottom before being put on the skirt. A narrow hem stitched on the machine is the best finish.

Before laying the pattern pieces on the materials, measure to see if the lengths of the skirt and waist are the same as your own; if not, mark clearly on the pattern the difference to be made, so it will not be forgotten in laying on the pattern pieces.

The bottom of the lowest ruffle and the front panels are, of course, finished after the skirt is put together, and here it will look well to allow either for a three inch hem, or finish the bottom with a fitted facing that same depth.

If the bottom of each sleeve is embroidered, it will be pretty to use the same design on the sash end.

Making pretty dresses for small girls is about as fascinating a branch of sewing as there is. Pattern No. 1738 is a particularly pretty design. One could use this pattern for several dresses, differing the manner of trimming so they would not seem too similar.

In this changeable climate of ours, it is a sensible thing to have at least one dress that has some warmth in it, and all wool challis seems ideal for the purpose. Such a material could depend for the trimming on the edging being bound with silk taffeta, for instance, using the same for the sashes.

For wash materials dimity, dotted swiss, chambray, or even mercerized cotton poplin would be pretty.

The dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the front is slashed down from the neck to provide an opening.

There is a perforation, showing the length to which the shoulder seams are to be stitched, and the under arm seam is stitched together. The skirt part extends out and is gathered across the top where it extends beyond the under arm seam, and brought back so that the skirt seam will make an unbroken line with the waist seam. A facing should be stitched over the gathered seam on the under side, and then one basted in place and stitched on the right side. The sashes or tie strings will cover these pieces.

A deep hem should always be allowed for in a child's dress—from three to five inches is about right.

Pattern No. 1728 is especially suitable for the full figure and, of course, will be equally becoming to many women who are slender. The waist and skirt parts of the dress are cut separately, and joined. There is a panel set on each side of the front of the skirt, and the collar on the waist extends down the front, so that when the sash is in place the dress has the appearance of having an unbroken long line from top to bottom—an always becoming feature.

For a hot day dress, there is nothing much better than foulard. It comes in beautiful colors, and the black or blue ground with small white dots is as pretty as anything. A dress of this kind could be made with the panels, cuffs, piece across the top of the vest, collar, and sash of taffeta or satin in a plain color, and no other trimming would be needed. Such a dress will be right for many occasions, and not too dressy to wear at home, afternoons.

Dotted swiss, voile, linen, or cotton poplin would make up prettily, and embroidered bands of all widths and colors can be bought for trimming, if one wishes to put that much money into it. If not, one can do one's own embroidering, or use a contrasting color and perhaps material for the trimming scheme.

MARITAL REEFS

Admitting Too'se Failed.

How did my marriage go on the rocks? And why none of at least three I know? It's quite old, old story. Marry in haste and repent at leisure.

I fell with a man I had known superficially. In buying a hat pr a dress we stop to consider, ask ourselves if it will be suitable if it will be durable. I didn't use this caution in selecting a husband. He was young and handsome, and we loved each other. That seemed enough. Too late we had that

My husband had a good income, but he didn't spend it on me. He had a bad temper, which he did not hide from me. My life has been tragic. Dreams don't always turn out that way, but there's a way out, and I'm going to take it. But it's hard to face you friends, and the world, and admit that you've failed, because you don't stop to think. M. B.

Food Highly Important.

The problem of happiness in married life is a grave one. It has been said, "After all, the little things are the stuff of love." Perhaps, at any rate, the little things may well be the food, it seems to me, has great possibilities in the happiness campaign. This realization has been forced upon me by experience and observation. A man enjoys coming home to a well prepared meal, a meal served promptly on the hours. It need not be elaborate or of great variety, though it is well to remember that he cannot live on salads and deserts alone. A well balanced meal leads to health and happiness. Neat and careful serving adds to the attraction. Such a meal must necessarily help him to forget the troubles and the weariness that the day's work incurs. At least, it is a safe bet that it cannot irritate him. And that accomplished is half of being a successful wife.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Doris Blake is a marketing love affair of her own. She will be glad to answer the request of a friend who writes The Tribune. If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

The Daily Tribune.

Blackening Poor Spirit.

Dear Miss Blake: About a year or a half ago I met a young fellow whom I came to like. He cared for me more than I for him. He used to call often. I introduced him to my girl friend and he soon liked her.

Two months ago I went to an affair with this girl and we met him there. He paid more attention to her than to me and had a quarrel. Since then he has always taken her out, and has professed his affections to her. I do not care for him now. But every once in a while I think of him and I do not like to continue going with the other girl. Please advise me.

ANXIOUS.

Now, that isn't the first sign of a good sport. You never did care for him by and you frankly admit now a keen and selfish interest in the other girl's claim on him. I really do not think that is a nice side of you to show or even to admit to yourself.

Plenty of Chances for Him.

Dear Miss Blake: I am 22 years old, of moderate means and live by myself in an apartment. Am not bad looking, but what one would call rather slow with girls. I am tired of being alone and would like to share my life with a girl who, like myself, would like to get married and settle down. The question is, how am I to become acquainted nowadays? I would appreciate a little advice upon this delicate subject. GEORGE.

George, the world is simply full of good girls—just as fine and helpful and self-sacrificing as they have been in any age. But, naturally, you must bestir yourself to find them. You must prove yourself worth winning, too. Instead of adopting the attitude of: "Now I'm ready to get married and I hope some good girl will come across my path," say: "I'm going to get married and I'm going to prove to some good girl that I am the man she is looking for."

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Buttered Macaroni.

Use a two quart aluminum kettle. To one cup and a half of elbow macaroni add two cups of cold water, put over a fire with cover, and when the water boils turn the macaroni low, and cook the cover if necessary to keep the water from boiling out. That water is all needed to swell the macaroni. Cook for about three-fourths of an hour, or until the water is practically absorbed, and the little that is left will be quite cold. Stir in two tablespoons of melted butter to keep the pieces from matting, into a solid loaf, which will be without a seam on the bottom in the case of well cooked macaroni, as well as for seasoning, and salt and pepper to taste.

Meat Loaves for Macaroni.

One half pound round steak, four tablespoons of flour, one onion, one half cup of finely cut celery, one cup and a half cups of water, one-fourth pound mushrooms, prepared separately, and salt, other seasonings to taste. There should be a piece of fat on the steak, perhaps enough to make two or three tablespoons when cut fine. Cut this up and try out, but do not brown, in a frying pan, for a little, but do not take the chips, when seasoned with the other ingredients no one will recognize it as fat, much less as common

Put the beefsteak into rather small pieces, and put it through the meat chopper, using the finest cutter. Put the fat and the onion and stir it around for a few minutes and then the celery, which has been cut part blanched leaves, which should be cut as fine as possible. Add the flour left over and the cold water, and stir constantly until it thickens, which will be in a short time, then turn down and cook gently for nearly an hour.

Add the mushrooms which have been sautéed in butter, and cook about five minutes. A test of good cooking is that the meat shall not be hard, and that people accustomed to eating beef will not know what meat it is. In a glass jar it looks like some sort of a relish, and inquiry was made as to what were the little bright yellow pieces—the cooked celery leaves. The eaters were undecided about what the meat could be, thus seasoned, and when told that it was beef said: "But beef in little pieces like this is anything is usually so hard." Yes, but that means improper cooking or too hot a fire for the cooking.

Preparing Mushrooms.

Wash and wipe mushrooms and peel; slice across in thin slices and then cut these slices across so as to make small pieces. Sauté pieces gently in a little butter until they begin to look watery, and the juice has come out into the pan. Before it can dry up put the whole into the prepared sauce.

Fruit Candy.

When preparing fruits for cake or bread, it is the easiest thing in the world to make a little fruit candy. Suppose you put a half cup each of cleaned and seeded raisins, sterilized and seeded prunes, and of walnut meats through the coarse disk of the food chopper. Use half of this for a small loaf of bread, and put the rest into a measuring cup, packing it down well and then turning out on waxed paper. This makes an excellent sweet sandwich filling or is good plain. Nevertheless, and just the same, it is better when cutting up fruit and nuts for bread and cake, to cut them on a board and in little slices, although this is not so necessary with the prunes, as prepared makes a nice picnic relish. There is considerable difference in the skins of prunes. Some are bright and shining when cooked, and drained from cooking liquid, and others are rather dull. When this is the case melt a little sugar and turn them in it over the fire after using a knife and fork to remove the seeds, and to turn in the cut edges.

"BEST PHOTOPLAYS OF JUNE."

EXIT—THE VAMP.

OUR GANG (A PLEASANT SURPRISE).
TEMPTATION.
THE WESTBOUND LIMITED.
THE LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER.
ONLY THIRTY-EIGHT.
SAWDUST.
SCARS OF JEALOUSY.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD morning!

I have it on the world! Most of the films spoken of this month as "best" were reviewed by Mrs. Cunningham. If you don't agree with her—go and take a shot at her. I'll enjoy it. (She may not, but, being a good sport, she'll pretend to)—so "that," as the invaluable Mr. Keaton has said, "is that."

First, she speaks of "EXIT—THE VAMP." She got tired of the beaten paths and "in a 10 cent theater on Madison street" discovered something like a masterpiece. (SHE thought.) All about a lady giving her husband too large a dose of his inamorata. She said it was a comedy that might have been a tragedy had not the director been on his job. She fairly purred over it. Her principal criticism was that T. Roy Barnes needed a haircut. But O, DID she like Ethel Clayton and the rest of them? She did. Having great respect for her opinion—I opine that "Exit—the Vamp" must have been SOME picture.

—o—

"THE WESTBOUND LIMITED" furnished her with thrills. So far so good. Mentally she dashed from train to train and found the dashing exhilarating. Let her dash. I'M skeert.

—o—

"CIRCUS PALS," the Fox kid comedy, made a hit with her. She declared you could take your own children to see it. If that isn't recommendation—what is?

—o—

Then "THE LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER," with the good and true again triumphant, she thought "above the average" and the cast "uniformly good."

—o—

"THE EXCITERS," with Bebe Daniels, tickled her funny bone. She liked Bebe's clothes and ways and smiles and everything. Thought the film "unusual."

—o—

"ONLY THIRTY-EIGHT" seemed "better as a movie than it was on the stage." That, saith this humble chronicler, stretched like something. (You know, one has to take her word for it—and, BELIEVE ME, it's some relief.)

—o—

"OUR GANG"—NOW I know there was one good picture in the month of June because I happened to see "Our Gang" in "A Pleasant Journey" itself. One has to quit resting and get back on the job SOME TIME, you know.

Perhaps It's More, but the Cake Said "Eighteen"

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mae Busch's birthday party at the Montmartre café led the social parade this week. It really wasn't Mae's 18th birthday, but that is what the cake said that was planned and decorated by Mabel Normand.

Carmel Myers, Paul Bern, June Mathis, Mabel Normand, Corinne Griffith, Julianne Johnstone, Joe Jackson, Walter Morosco, and Goodman Bradley helped to celebrate the event. Miss Busch explained that if it weren't for the thoughtfulness of Mabel Normand there would be a few more candles to tell the story.

MAE BUSCH.

Miss Busch wore an attractive sage green dinner gown with Egyptian jewelry. Scarlet velvet decorated Carmel Myers, while June Mathis afforded a contrast in a straight white beaded evening gown. Mabel Normand chose a summery Boue Soeurs model with a wide black sash of moire. Lovely is the word to describe Corinne Griffith in her Frances gown of black lace and odd black headdress.

Miss Busch, along with Theda Bara, is a "reformed vamp." Will Rogers, however, wishes the vamps wouldn't reform.

"I always go to the Theda Bara pictures," he said at a party this week in his Beverly Hills home. "She's always fightin' for her virtue. And I know one day she's going to lose that fight."

He has another story about George Washington and his friend, Bill Hart. But you can guess that one.

Bill, you know, is coming back into the films through the important gates of Lasky. He will continue in his "durn you, drap that gun" characters that won him fame.

Helen Ferguson gave one of her popular Mah Jongg evenings on the same night as Miss Busch's party. Helen was a charming hostess in a black moire dinner dress. The celebs present were Ralph Graves and his mother, Mrs. Horsbrough, William Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Huntley Gordon, Vola Vale, Laura La Plante, and Al Russell.

Al Russell is the husband of Vola Vale, and Helen Ferguson and Bill Russell are engaged, as all Hollywood knows.

Still They Come—the Millionaire Extras.

Ho-hum! Another millionaire extra man has arrived in Hollywood. They are becoming as numerous as the Follies girls—though not half so decorative. This time it's Mark Benjamin II., who is playing a part in Goldwyn's "The Palace of the King."

The United Studios, more ambitious than Goldwyn, have cabled Boris III., Bulgarian monarch, that he is welcome to a job as technical director. Mr. Leves, president of the United Studios, admitted he would give the king a chance, even if he were a little new to the game. It is understood that Boris knows a lot about the king business, and could probably tell directors just what a monarch eats for breakfast or something of the kind. So far the king has not accepted.

But Jean Acker has accepted royalty, if we can believe recent reports. The first wife of Rodolf, the Valentino, will wed the Marquis Luis de Basan y Sandoval, and thus will a shelkess become a marquess.

Jean will live in Madrid and emote to guitars and look at Hearing Good Opera in Serenest Comfort

By Edward Moore.

IT may be that the interests of art are better served by going to opera in all the splendor of evening dress. But it is certainly a more comfortable procedure to approach a performance in a less formal manner, particularly when that performance happens to classify as of the first rank.

Opera downtown in the winter. Opera at Ravinia in the summer. Take your choice. The latter presents to your kind attention most of the spiritual merits of the winter performances and most of the physical merits of a summer country club. One goes to Ravinia in outing garb, one sits in a pavilion open on three of its four sides to the air of evening, one strolls during the intermissions under trees instead of ceilings, one feels breezes and sees moonlight instead of drafts and glaring lights. And one beholds performances that frequently have as much brilliant excitement in, and generally a better balance than those of the chilly season. As I say, take your choice.

"I really do not know what could make the Ravinia performances better," says Mr. Eckstein. "Here are the best singers from the two great opera houses of the United States. Here is the Chicago Symphony orchestra, one of the great orchestras of the world. Here are conductors who have directed performances whose news has been telegraphed all over the country. Anything better for Ravinia this summer simply could not be had."

Anticipating Pleasant Announcements

Looking ahead at the week's programs, one discovers that Mr. Eckstein's claim has considerable foundation. Prominent in the list is the name of Florence Easton, the most versatile leading soprano to be found anywhere today. Having sung two such widely differentiated rôles in the week just past as Elsa in "Lohengrin" (in German) and the name part of "Madama Butterfly," she will enter this week upon Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana." Elsa again (this time in English), and Marguerite in "Faust." Any one prepared to do as much is invited to present her claims.

The "Lohengrin" announcement is one of the interesting ones of the list, for it shows that not only Miss Easton but every one else in the cast is prepared in two versions, German and the English translation. Morgan Kingston will be the Lohengrin, Marion Telva the Ortrud, Mark Oster the Telramund, Louis D'Angelo the king, and Desiré Defrere the herald. Louis Hasselmans will conduct.

In "Cavalleria Rusticana" Miss Easton will have the company of Armand Tokatyan, whose first operatic appearance will be preceded by a concert appearance the night before; Miss Telva, and Vicente Ballester. In the "Faust" performance the name part will be sung by Giacomo Lauri-Volpi for the first time in his career; Léon Rothier, who gives a fine performance of Mephistopheles, and will do it here; Giuseppe Danise will be the Valentine; Margery Maxwell the Siebel, and Philine Falco the Martha.

There is also another reason to be present at "Cavalleria Rusticana" on Tuesday night, for it will be coupled with Massenet's thrilling, gunpowdery piece, "La Navarraise." Ina Bourskaya will at this time add the rôle of Anita to her

Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" Don Their Summer Garb

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Choosing New York as a summer resort has its advantages. Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies," for one thing, were never quite so good as they are now. And they are one of the city's attractions the humidity does not affect. Monday night a new summer edition was set in action. In it are retained all the best of the features that have kept the beauty show on Broadway for over a year, and to these several have been added that maintain the higher Ziegfeld average.

The girls are all in their summer costumes now, and happy in the change. Will Rogers is no longer present, but Eddie Cantor has replaced him with a new repertoire of wiggly wimmen songs that the crowd likes. This year he is demanding that his favorites shall be "wild, weak, warm, and willing."

The newcomers include a burlesque acrobatic act from abroad in which one courageous comedian flirts grotesquely with electrocution. Ilse Marvenga is a new blonde prima donna from Austria, who sings well. She is in America, she says, because she got tired engaging taxicabs to carry home her salary when she was paid in marks and kronen in Berlin and Vienna.

Chorus Beauties Hail from Near and Far

For the ensemble, as the more expensive press agents call the chorus, Mr. Ziegfeld has taken in twenty-four new beauties from the estimated 2,000 who have applied, gathering them from hither and yon and sorting them for the beauty points they command above and below the chin. It may be interesting to you girls to know where some of them came from.

Well, Helena d'Algy hails from Barcelona, Spain. She is brunette and Spanish, 20 years old, and doesn't speak any English. She doesn't have to. Not in her costumes.

Another is Joan Gardner, late of Seattle. Joan is also 20 and brunette. I wrote you last week of how she was discovered by Ina Claire serving tea in a cooperative tea shop in Seattle, and was engaged by wire on Miss Claire's recommendation.

Kathleen Mahoney comes from Boston, tracing her ancestry back through four generations in Boston and seventeen in Ireland, according to the records. She is blonde and 18, the daughter of Dr. Patrick Mahoney. In 1921 she won a bathing beauty contest at Nantasket Beach and, of course, has just been "dying" to get into the "Follies" ever since.

Pearl Prosser is a Chicago entry. She has had some picture making experience and is with the "Follies" at the suggestion of Fannie Brice. She also won a bathing beauty medal at Atlantic City last summer, and is to represent New York in this year's contest, if she can control her calories.

Lois Wilde was a member of the Metropolitan ballet, is blonde and 16. It was her mother who took her out of the ballet and put her in the Ziegfeld organization.

Vagueness in Plans for Theater Season

By Sheppard Butler.

PLANS for the new season in the theaters begin to make themselves known, somewhat later than usual and in many cases with a note of uncertainty not at all common at the beginning of July.

Thus, a recent bulletin has it that Miss Fay Bainter has at last found a suitable play and that George Middleton is the author, but concerning its title or contents nothing is revealed. Nor does Miss Bainter's new manager, Mr. Belasco, take the public into his confidence as to the prospects for the play's production or the personnel of its cast.

Equally vague are the tidings about Otis Skinner, who has been working on something new in collaboration with Edith Ellis. The piece is as yet unnamed, and no definite arrangements for its footlighting appear to have been made.

From England comes word that James K. Hackett would like to return to this country in the fall, and may do so, but has not altogether made up his mind. London and Paris have been deeply impressed with his Shakespearean productions and have made them a series of brilliant triumphs, the like of which an actor seldom encounters in America. Nevertheless Mr. Hackett thinks of trying his fate here with "Macbeth" and "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and perhaps two new modern plays which he has added recently to his repertoire.

Mme. Eleonora Duse may cross the Atlantic, too. She is now in London, and is reported via cable to have shown last week a willingness to reopen negotiations which were thought long ago to have come to nothing. Similarly, the famous Guitrys are represented as being still in a quandary as to whether or not they will accept the offers made them to come to America.

Greek Tragedy for Blanche Bates.

Miss Blanche Bates, who has been inactive for a season or two, aspires to do something in the classical manner. Her play is "The Golden Fleece," mentioned in this column last Sunday as having been tested on the Pacific coast with the aid of Mr. Henry Miller and his company. It turns out to be a metrical version of the Jason legend, written by Thomas W. Broadhurst, and with a profoundly tragic rôle—that of Medea, the flouted wife of Jason—for Miss Bates. In the trial performances Robert Warwick was the Jason; Mr. Miller appeared as Argos, the blind philosopher, and Miss Laura Hope Crews assumed a small part, that of the high priestess of the temple of Hecate.

Miss Bates may bring this tragedy east if it seems advisable, but Mr. Miller will be otherwise occupied. He has found agreeable employment for himself and Miss Ruth Chatterton in "The Changelings," the play by Lee Wilson Dodd which he offered briefly in Philadelphia in the late spring and then took to San Francisco. The Californians like it, and Mr. Miller hopes the rest of the country will be as kind.

Miss Billie Burke will have a new play, but information concerning it is confined to the observation that it will not be Molnar's "The Swan"—which seems reasonable, in view of the fact that Miss Eva Le Gallienne is preparing to do the Old Reliable Weathers a Storm and Enjoys His Breakfast—By Harris Dickson

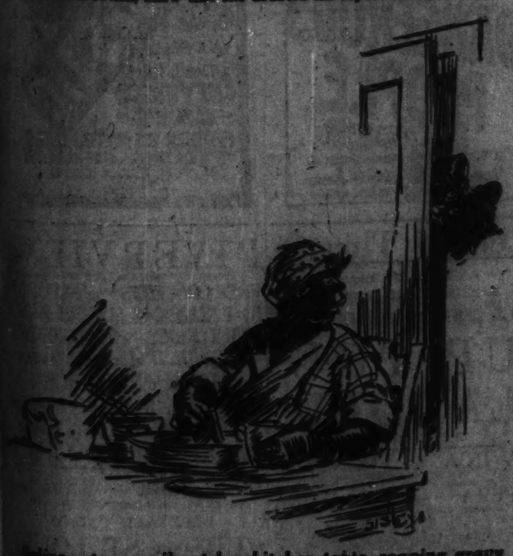
GRIPPING a highly important bundle with his elbow, Old Reliable crept forward to the Spottiswoode kitchen, pausing at discreet intervals, with foot uplifted, to detect the faintest symptoms of alarm. No sound of turbulence warned him from within. He could hear nothing except the clink of knife and fork, which made Zack lick his hungry lips.

"I'm uncherly 'bleeged to git some grub," he muttered, and drove himself onward. Up the rear steps he sneaked, without so much as the studs of a shoe, halted, and listened warily. Then his cautious hand turned the knob, cracked open the door, and his eyes reconnoitered the interior, where Selina sat grumpily at her kitchen table, sopping gravy from a pan. Nobody except Zack could have made such an accurate forecast from one glimpse of the woman's massive back. Necessity, however, had schooled him in the reading of weather signs, and he now observed the indications of Selina's unsubsided resentment. Yet, if gently manipulated, he knew she wasn't liable to blow up again. So Zack reclosed the door, very, very softly, tiptoed backward down the steps, and vanished with his precious bundle.

After a little while Selina began to hear him from afar off, the casual, carefree approach of her lover-husband, whistling as he came. But she didn't rush to the window and toss out garlands of roses. Not much. Selina only sat.

Nearer and nearer drew Zack's merry whistle, rounding a corner of the house. Louder and louder he carolled his blithesome song of the lark. Selina had heard him the first time. Now he was stomping up the steps; now with confident tread he crossed the porch, now he flung open the door—still whistling. Which signified that Zack had buried the hatchet without leaving the handle sticking out; that he was willing to let bygones be bygones, and draw up his chair to the accepted repast. But he saw no chair to draw up. Selina occupied one; and when Selina occupied a chair she didn't leave room for anything else. Zack's whistling grew ragged when he noted that all the other chairs were likewise full, stacked with pans, chinaware, and table linen. So Zack remained standing, held his bundle behind his back and tried to speak most jovially.

"Ugh! Dat she is hot work. Seliny, I done hilled up yo' canteloupes, sho—" he squinted narrowly at his wife's back, and from an imperceptible twitch, knew that she doubted his report on labor done.



Selina sat grumpily at her kitchen table, sopping gravy from a pan.

Worse than this, according to Zack's anxious count, he also saw that every dish which contained eatables was surrounded by Selina's strong left arm, while she gobbled up grub with her right hand. "Look out for squalls," said the weather signs. Selina never a word.

Hungry Zack shifted from one foot to the other, eyed the pile of food in Selina's pan, and sparred for a happier opening.

"Seliny"—he mentioned it offhand—"Seliny, befo' I fergits—Cunnel tole me to hurry downtown on some 'portant business. An' Cunnel say fer you to please fix me a substantial breakfast—right quick."

"Cunnel never said no sech thing," Selina snapped. "He's gone to de plantation."

"Dat's what Cunnel say yistiddy mornin'."

'Huh! You had yo' breakfast yistiddy."

"But Seliny, I done got hongry again."

"What makes you hongry?" she whirled and glared. "Answer me dat. "You's too lazy for yo' victles to taste good. Po' ole fool, can't study nothin' 'cept dat Gran' Lodge peerade. Now listen to me, Zack Foster, next time I sees you gallivantin' round dese streets wid dem wuthless niggers, when you oughter be diggin' taters, I'm goin' to grease yo' head, pin yo' ears back, an' swaller you whole. Hear me?"

"Seliny, ain't I yo' own dear husband?"

"Husbands is as husbands does."

"But, Seliny——"

"Shet up. You needn't keep on talkin' fer grub, cause talk won't do you no mo' good dan mustard plasters on a wooden leg." The wrathful woman looked him up and down, skimpy-built figure so inefficient and apologetic that Selina couldn't help grinning. At which Old Reliable brightened up.

"Dat's all right, Seliny, dat's all right. Jes lend me two bits an' I'll——"

"Two bits! Two bits! Didn't I give you two bits last week, den seed you nigh de Hot Cat Eatin' House, wid yo' hat cocked over yo' left ear, makin' eyes at dar yaller wench what jes' got out o' jail?" Selina bounced up, and Zack ducked just in time to dodge a knockout.

"Hold still, Seliny;" he backed away. "I done 'splained all dat."

"You ain't never 'splained nothin' to me. One day I aims to ketch you wid some o' dem wimmen—an' den—an' den——" She made another swipe which Old Reliable sidestepped and dropped his bundle. It burst. Selina caught a glint of gold lace, and saw a bit of bright red cloth. Then Selina saw red—saw everything red.

In a flash she stooped to snatch up the evidence of infidelity, but Zack beat her to it, and her furious head butted against his.

"Leggo, Zack! Gimme dat! It's some finery you bought for yo' ooman—wid my money. I'll larn you."

With a powerful arm Selina reached around to grab a skillet handle, while Old Reliable clung to her.

"No, tain't, Seliny!" Zack jerked loose, and tore open the bundle, showing a spangled red collar fringed with gold lace, which he draped about his neck. "Look for yo'self, Seliny. Dis is my reegalia which I wears in de peerade."

The astonished woman stayed her hand and stared at the showy collar, a gorgeous thing of red and gold, a sight for gods and men. Zack also looked a sight.

"Ugh! Ain't dat gran'!" Irresistibly attracted, Selina moved forward to adjust Zack's spangled collar, patting it down fore and aft, then stepped back with hands upon her hips to enjoy the glittering effect.

"Zack, whar is dese mads?"

"Dunno. N'Yawleens or Boston, or somewheres in dat neighborhood."

"It fits you fine."

"Fits me. Huh! I reckin so. When dat man made it he sho did mention my name. I'm bound to wear a fust class collar, cause I'm de head leader."

"You? Head leader?" Selina's eyes sparkled.

"Nobody but me. Elder Tabb 'sputes dat he's de head leader. But he ain't. I is."

"I'm boun' to wear a fust class collar, 'cause I'm the head leader."

"Elder Tabb?" Selina repeated scornfully. "Tabb ain't got sense enough to lead a bline duck to de mud puddle."

"Cose not." Zack talked mighty rapid. "I knows you don't like Tabb, so I tole him plain dat next must he couldn't even march in my peerade, when de head leader takes his wife."

"Meanin' me?"

"Sholy."

"Den I marches in de peerade?"

"March? Cose not. De head leader can't 'low his wife to traipse along in de dirt. You's goin' to ride—in de lead hack."

"Next to de band?"

"Smack up against de band!"

"Lawd! Lawd!" Selina threw back her head and laughed. "Ridin' in de lead hack, wid all dem wimmen watchin' me go by! Goin' to have a drum?"

"Uhu! Two drums. Y'understand, Seliny, Dan Porter an' Johnny Blanks couldn't 'gree which one was to beat his drum. So de onliest way to pacify 'em was for every member to beat his own drum. Seliny, please gimme a needle an' thread, I got to mend dem gloves."

"Lemme see?" Selina took the white cotton gloves from Zack and said: "I'll fix 'em—jes' a minute. Wait till I runs up to Miss Betty's room for a needle."

Zack waited, industriously. The moment Selina was gone he settled down in her vacant chair and fell upon the grub, not even turning his head as she re-entered.

"Seliny," he instructed her with a mouth full of waffles, "look an' see ef dem gloves is yo' size. Next must de head leader's wife is de onliest lady which wears silk gloves. An' Seliny—it come mighty nigh slippin' my mind—lemme two bits."

"Now, Zack, don't dat beat de Jews? I ain't got no change, nothin' 'cept dis dollar. Jes' take dat along—an', what kind o' reegalia is I goin' to wear?"

"Did you say reegalia? You jes oughter see what dey's makin' for de head leader's wife—but it's a secret."

"Secret? Here's yo' gloves, Zack, all mended. Wait, honey, wait; dem waffles is gittin cold. Lemme heat 'em up fer you—an' dat sour molasses ain't fit to eat. I'll fetch you a jar o' Miss Betty's peach preserves."

"All right, Seliny, you kin fetch dem preserves ef you's got yo' head set. But I don't crave nothin' to eat. I jes 'lowed to set down an' talk a while, cause you's in de kitchen all by yo'self."

Comedy for Miss Nielsen.

Some degree of certainty attaches itself to the announcement that Mrs. Fiske will appear in the St. John Ervine comedy, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," and there has been no alteration in Basset works of plans to present Lowell Sherman and Miss Katherine Cornell in "Casanova," a play from the Spanish of Lorenzo Angelo; Sidney Blackmer in a dramatization of Rafael Sabatini's "Scaramouche," and Miss Nellie O'Neil in "The White Villa," made by Edith Ellis out of Karen Michaelis' novel, "The Dangerous Age."

For Miss Pauline Frederick, Kate Jordan's "The Next Corner" is mentioned as a likely vehicle, and for Miss Florence Reed there is "The Lullaby," by Edward Knoblock, which Mlle. Alice Delysia probably will act simultaneously in London. And Miss Violet Heming, Miss Estelle Wigwood, and Norman Trevor have been newly engaged for "By the Grace of God," the latest dramatic output of Frederick Lonsdale, whose "Aren't We All?" Cyril Maude has been playing in New York.

Miss Ethel Barrymore may bring Alfred Sutro's "The Laughing Lady" to this city, and Miss Cohan is probably

"And you won?"

"No, I lost."

the stars instead of being one. The news of her engagement came as a surprise. She had told her friends she was tired of plain and fancy running, and wanted only a little white home in Hollywood. The castle in Spain will be more or less of a trial.

Just one more little thing about royalty. Countess Dombska, Pola Negri, is taking an enforced vacation. She was hit over the right eye by a flying stiletto during the filming of "The Spanish Dancer," and cannot work until the bruise is healed.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. has arrived in Hollywood, and is being entertained daily by Doug and Mary. After luncheon there is a good stiff game of tennis, with young Fairbanks giving his famous papa a sound trouncing.

Julian Street, who is to write special stories for young Fairbanks, came with the actor and is living in Hollywood.

Two of Hollywood's most interesting personalities have decided to remain here. They are Ernst Lubitsch and his wife, who was formerly an actress. Mr. Lubitsch has left the Pickford studios and has been signed by Warner Brothers, the "Ringling Brothers of Filmdom."

Mrs. Lubitsch does not like the silken luxury of Hollywood limousines. The continental open car is more to her liking, and she plaintively requested that she be given one—not "the covered wagon."

John Steele, a tenor from Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies," is being shown around Hollywood by Claire Windsor. Claire won't risk another engagement rumor. She smiles sweetly and says nothing. This leads us to believe there may be something to the rumor. A published statement of the bans means that the affair will never culminate, but a denial is as good as a piece of the wedding cake.

The "Nunnery" is to be the name of the latest clubhouse in Hollywood. It will serve as a sort of Lambs club for leading ladies. Eligibility is limited to actresses who have played lead parts for one year or more. Rosemary Deely is the leading figure in the new group building this harem.

the Pfeiffer hotel in Milwaukee. She went back to high school after the war, but, again being obliged to earn her own living, returned to her diviner last fall. The "Sally" company was playing there when the manager, E. D. Price, wired Mr. Ziegfeld that he had found another beauty, and now Evelyn is in the first line.

Dorothy Clarkson was by way of becoming a society debutante in Washington, D. C., after she graduated from the Friends' Select school, but she has a sister with the Follies, Janet Megrew, and wanted to be with sister Megrew is the family name, but Dorothy (they probably call her "Dot," or will) has decided to take her mother's maiden name on the stage.

And Betty Garst was working in a candy store in Philadelphia when she decided that the "Follies" life would be better, if not sweeter. She is used to these awful puns on her recent occupation, but she doesn't mind, being 18 and beautiful. When they are 18 and beautiful they don't think much of anything except getting into the "Follies."

This Doesn't Happen Often.

It is not often that people cheer in the theater and mean it. Occasionally an excited one or two, or a group of friends, will yell an affected "Encore!" at a performer. But the spontaneous cheer from the body of the house is rare. In a dozen years of playgoing in New York I don't remember an audience cheering more than four or five times.

But it does not happen often. All the more honors therefore, to a slip of a dancer named Queenie Smith, who got her first audience cheering last Tuesday night when she danced herself to a great personal success in a new musical comedy called "Helen of Troy, N. Y."

Queenie is as honestly American as the Smith part of her name. Ten years ago, when she was 12, her parents enrolled her as a member of the Metropolitan Opera Ballet school. She was one of twenty or thirty youngsters. But she had not been studying long before Mme. Verbeten, her teacher, saw that she was more talented than the average, and in all human probability took added pains with her instruction. Two years later she was graduated and became a regular member of the ballet at the opera. Another year she was dancing the minor solo parts.

She danced in "Petrushka," "Le Coq d'Or," and "Aida," and could doubtless have become the premiere danseuse of the ballet if she had chosen to do so. But being American, Queenie was ambitious. She took her art seriously, but her salary more seriously. And as she could make more money in musical comedy than she could in the ballet she went in search of a job.

She found one. I think it was four years ago, in a hodge podge affair staged by Eddie Leonard, the vaudevillian. "Holy Boly Eyes," it was called, and Queenie contributed a dancing specialty. She was then acclaimed an excellent dancer, but no great fuss was made over her.

The next season she decided she could play a speaking part, and was given a few lines. She read them giftly, and with a pert comedy sense, but without particular distinction. In "Orange Blossoms" last season she had developed a line of eccentric comedy all her own, that of a saucy flapper who put the comedian in his place and made sport of the hero. This season in a piece called "Cinders" she was still a little more advanced, playing the feminine comedy lead very well indeed.

In all these plays she danced charmingly, sometimes on her toes, sometimes with comedy exaggeration and affectedly, but always with exceptional grace, as a ballet dancer should.

Her Chance Arrives.

Then the other night her great chance arrived quite unexpectedly. In "Helen of Troy, N. Y." she does little, if anything, that she has not done before. But the conditions were perfect. Her part is more sympathetic than any she has had before, for one thing, and then it is a dancing show and her competition is keen.

There is a big dancing number in the second act in which all the specialty dancers of the troupe take part. Some do fancy steps, some are eccentric, and several are acrobatic. Again these little Miss Smith was gifted, and what she did to them by comparison was enough to snatch the favor of the crowd. Under the inspiration of the applause she all but twirled her small blonde head off. She galloped and pirouetted and walked about on her toes inspiringly. She took two or three encores, modestly, and was quite unruffled. But when she had finished the cheering broke forth. And when next she came on the stage to go on with the dramatic portion of the show, the crowd stopped her and cheered again.

It was a great night for Queenie Smith. At 19:15 she was merely a member of the company. At 19:30 she was unmistakably its star. The next day her wise managers signed an eight year contract with her at a salary that advances year by year, and with a starring clause attached that will make her a second Marilynn Miller in popularity if her success doesn't spoil her. And she has just passed her twenty-second birthday anniversary.

Company Is Good One.

There is not a lot to "Helen of Troy, N. Y." except Queenie Smith. It starts out as a music play concerned with the rivalry of collar manufacturers in Troy, the pretty stenographer of one Helen Ford) inventing the semi-soft brand of summer collar and playing the heroine, and the son of a rival manufacturer who helps her sell it being the hero.

Then it was turned over to those bright young men, George Kaufman and Marc Connelly, who have "Dulcy," "Ladies First," and "Merton of the Movies" to their credit, and they spruced it up a lot by giving it a touch of satire and a scattering of bright lines. Also a few slogans, "Your Knock Knows" is one.

The company is a good one. In addition to Miss Smith and Ford, the latter playing the same part daintily, there are Tom Lewis, Charles Lawrence, the A. E. F. comedian; Ray Atwell, Paul Frawley, and Stella Hoban. But Queenie Smith simply grabbed their show and ran away with it.

O, What a Long, Long Tail Our Cat Has Got

Sorry? Laughed myself into almost another long rest over these funny little youngsters.

"SAWDUST"—Gladys Walton in a tale of the circus. Interesting and well done.

It's perfectly wonderful to be as busy as I have been this morning! Yes, sir. In other words—let somebody else do your work and then you tell an admiring party all about how the work was done.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

K. L. O.—Sorry—but there's not a chance.

V. C. D.—Thanks ever so much for the information. I DO think you're nice to go to so much trouble to put me right!

BO—We'd all like to "go back home," I reckon. That's one of the oddities of life—one must take so much out in wanting. But, for heaven's sake, don't worry or regret. Just store your old experiences away in a corner of your mind, be wise in the future, and smile, smile, smile!

DESPAIRER—but NOT "Hopeless."

BETTY: Well, not "too wonderful for words"—perhaps—but pretty. Yes, I like Miss Nilsson very much. No, didn't happen to be in town when the picture you mention was taken. As I am informed, Mr. Lasky's last name is pronounced as "Lass-key." No sir—you're right. Always reading the "fan" mail—your unusually long letter. I'm not glad it's the end of your letter and I DO hope you'll write soon again.

KICK KORNER

Ice Objects—Ob jections.

Dear Miss Tinker: I have seen "Main Street" and would write you a criticism of it—to—

If you want to voice your reviews is a good medium if you haven't read the book and had formed a preconception of it. Those who have read the book and had formed the mental pictures I had formed of the story.

In the first place, Erik Valborg is far too important in the picture version and Dr. Will Kennicott is much more lovable on the screen than in the novel, that one is entirely out of sympathy with Carol for even noticing Erik when she has such a perfect specimen of clean, wholesome manhood to love as Kenny Sims.

In the novel Dr. Kennicott is a stolid, unsympathetic genius dyed-in-the-wool country doctor without one little of romance. In the picture version, he is a real human study. His acting is splendid and yet the picture has destroyed for me Dr. Kennicott. I liked in the novel.

Lester Cuneo—that whiter sports material seemed to me artificial and obviously novelties, merely giving Florence Vidor a chance to don a charming sports costume, and H. Erik was not included in Gopher Prairie society (why should he be king?)

I wish Louise Fazenda's part as Sam Clark had been played up more so that Miss Fitzpatrick had been given a chance to play the part which Lewis created. The married life of Sam and Miles in the story is one of the only sweet, poignant bits in the entire thirds of the plot, while in the picture they are minor comedians.

Omitting the picture was interesting, but I do hope, for the sake of our respected movie directors' attempts to transcribe another well known story to the screen, he will not let the Hollywood addition to make the story "classy" which only is making of a good book something "classy." Sincerely,

WALLY.

Dear Miss Tinker: Read Marguerite's kick on the praise given to such celebrated stars as Rodolf Valentino, and was interested at her commendation of Jack Holt.

I certainly am strong for Marguerite, although I do think "The Sheik" is starting off all prime.

In "Green Street," Ralph Graves is charming. He acts so young and fresh, and he is clean as pure driven snow.

What about Johnnie Walker, Marguerite? Is it because you have never seen him that you don't rave when you see his name? I'm crazy 'bout him, and he has the other actors beat a mile. His face seems to be radiating sunshine and happiness all the time, and his eyes sparkle like rare jewels. I'm glad I have never seen any kicks on our usual kickers on my favorite.

Don't cry he's married. I like married men.

Richard Bartheimess—was there another actor so much loved and [illegible] So young and beautiful. You know him falling over the girls and them. He lets them do all the and they just love it.

I don't see anything vulgar about Charlie Chaplin's pictures, nor Harold Lloyd's either. Where do they get that stuff? People like that should stay from the movies.

I think these are all my favorites. I like them all, the foregoing Our Mary, Doug Fairbanks, Thomas Meighan, Jackie Coogan, Gloria Swanson, Pauline Frederick and Theodore Roberts.

E. E.

A—It will take a heavy load off your mind if you will print this, Miss.

Editor's note: "Loads" being hard to shout in hot weather, consider removed.)

répertoire, and sing it with Mr. Kingston, Mr. Rothier, and several others. The two operas ought to be much worth while.

Mr. Eckstein's announcement of repeat performances of operas with important changes in the casts will have considerable confirmation this week. Tonight Giacomo Lauri-Volpi and Josephine Lucchese will sing the rôles in "Lucia di Lammermoor" that have already been done by Tito Schipa and Graziella Pareto, with Giuseppe Danise and Virgilio Lazzari as connecting links with the former performance. On Wednesday night Mr. Lauri-Volpi will meet with Miss Pareto in "Traviata," Mr. Danise remaining as the elder Germont.

The cast for Friday night looks at this distance to be a flawless one. The opera will be "Rigoletto," and the singers Miss Pareto, Miss Bourskaya, Mr. Ballester, Mr. Schipa, and Mr. Lazzari.

Of concerts there are the same pleasurable anticipations. In the Chicago Symphony orchestra program for tomorrow night the soloists will be Mr. Tokatyan, already mentioned; Thalia Sabanieva, and the cellist, Alfred Wallenstein. An extra concert is billed for the holiday observances Wednesday afternoon, with another cellist, Carl Bruschkne?, as soloist. The fine work of the children's programs will be continued on Thursday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer will introduce the subject of concert music, which will be exemplified by the orchestra. After the intermission there will be a series of American Indian songs in costume by Verna Harris Swen and the Winnetka Camp Fire Girls. And there will be more orches-

SHE DANCES

MISS BILLIE TAYLOR.
[Apeda Photo.]

A second edition of Ernie Young's summer revue will be revealed at the Marigold garden tomorrow night, with Miss Taylor and her husband and dancing partner, Billy (yes; practically the same name) added to the cast. The Taylors, formerly much in evidence in Chicago, have been away for a year. We saw them last in "Molly Darling," at the Palace Music hall last summer.

of Germany, England, and America; Lotte Lehmann and Elisabeth Schumann, both favorites in Vienna; Eleanora de Cisneros, American contralto; Joseph Manowarda, bass, who hails from Hamburg; Karl Ritter, the well known tenor from Stuttgart. Although by no means simultaneous in their engagements, Miss Ivogun, Mr. Lankow, Mr. Maclennan, and Mme. de Cisneros have at one time and another been able to write Chicago Opera after their names.

The following operas are scheduled: "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Das Liebesverbot," "Der Zigeunerbaron," "La Juive," "Der Fliegende Holländer," "Der Evangelimann," "Tannhäuser," "Die Toten Augen," "Der Trompeter von Sackingen," "Die Entführung aus dem Serail," "Don Juan," "Zauberflöte," "Figaro Hochzeit," "Die Meistersinger," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Ring des Nibelungen."

The Carl Rosa Opera company, founded many years ago in this country and an emigrant to England after its first season, is no more. A meeting was held last month, and this resolution was passed: "That it has been proved to the satisfaction of the meeting that the company cannot, by reason of its liabilities, continue its business, and that it is advisable to wind up the same, and accordingly the company be wound up voluntarily."

While waiting for Gustav Holst to take up his duties as conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra, Eugene Goossens and Vladimir Shavitch will come to the Eastman theater of that city to take up rehearsals and first concerts. Altogether, Rochester would seem to be following the good old American custom—one of the few exceptions is the Chicago Symphony—of, when arranging for a new American orchestra, always looking outside of America for a conductor. And the worst musical joke of the week inquires whether the Rochester organization will be an orchestra di camera.

The Musical Courier tells where some of them are spending the summer. Alexander Bloch is at Lake Placid, N. Y.; Lucrezia Bori will divide her time between Barcelona and Italy; Jascha Heifetz, Tamaki Miura, Arthur Rubinstein, and Erna Rubinstein have no more specialized address than Europe; Clara Clemens is in California; Ernest Davis has gone to England; Giuseppe de Luca to Rome; Mildred Dilling to France; Elena Gerhardt is somewhere in Germany; Ernest Knoch in Munich; Nellie and Sara Kouns are in England. Guy Maier has made a temporary separation from his piano partner, Lee Pattison, by going to Paris, while Mr. Pattison remains in Chicago. They will rejoin forces later in the summer. John McCormack continues to rest in England. Claudia Muzio is singing opera in Buenos Aires. Rosa Ralsa and Giacomo Rimini will remain in Italy until fall. Ruth St. Denis is preparing dance material at Peterboro, N. H., while Ted Shawn collects new subjects in Spain. Josef Schwarz has the somewhat comprehensive address of Italy and the orient.

Edward Vito, harpist, will be the soloist at the noonday organ recital of the Chicago theater today. Jesse Crawford, organist, will play numbers by Gordon Balch Nevin, H. Alexander Mathews, Bainbridge Crist, and Franz Schubert.

The third of a series of musicals by the Chicago Yacht Club trio will be given today at the clubhouse of the same name. The organization makes a point of the folk songs of all nations, and the present program will include the melodies of Scotland.

The Chicago Boys' club, "for the underprivileged boy of the crowded city," has opened a music department in three of its branches. It is under the direction of Joseph J. Grill, formerly of the Chicago band and the American Symphony orchestra. It will feature the organization of bands and orchestra. Director Grill sends word that he would like to get in touch with boys who play band instruments and who live in the vicinity of the north, south or west side clubhouses. The general office is at 1725 Orchard street, and the telephone number is Lincoln 6639.

Even for Your Summer Cottage
*you can afford these finer rugs

SUCH beauty at the price seems almost unbelievable. Yet, you can equip your summer cottage throughout with these charming rugs at an amazingly small expense.

There are gay, colorful designs that seem just made for the holiday spirit of the summer home; or, if you prefer, quiet neutral patterns, or plain bordered rugs.

Even the largest sizes cost only about half what you expect to pay. And every rug is finished on both sides, giving two wearing surfaces and double wear.

A remarkable new weaving method makes possible such low prices, and gives Kimlark Rugs, in addition, a number of features that are combined in no other type of floor covering. They are waterproof and washable. Moths do not attack them; they can be rolled up and put away for months without harm. They are smooth, soft and thick underfoot. They lie flat without curling; can be bent or folded without breaking and they wear like iron.

Because of their unusual qualities and exceptional beauty, Kimlark Rugs have become the vogue among women of taste, not alone for summer use, but for year-'round service on every floor in the home.

Be sure to see Kimlark Rugs at your dealer's. You will agree that they offer more beauty and service than any rug of similar type—are, in fact, the finest low-priced floor coverings you have ever known.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

National Reform Association Calls Citizenship Meet

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A CONFERENCE, which the announcements say will have 5,000 delegates, four state governors, and one former governor of a state, three United States senators, several congressmen, judges, ministers, representatives of a dozen different nations, reformers, and business men, will begin today at Winona Lake, Ind., under the auspices of the National Reform association. It is called A Consultative Christian Citizenship conference, and is said to be unique in the history of national gatherings. Over thirty editors of religious papers have accepted invitations to attend, and they are to be tendered a banquet with certain other guests.

The program today will be: At 11 o'clock a sermon by Bishop W. F. Anderson of the Cincinnati area of the Methodist Episcopal church; 3 p. m.: "Christianity in Korean National Life," Dr. Henry Chung, Korean commissioner to the United States, Washington, D. C., author of books on Korea; 6:30: sermon by Bishop W. M. Bell of the United Brethren church, Harrisburg, Pa.; 8 p. m.: "The Moral Accountability of Nations," the Rev. James A. Francis, LL.D., pastor of the First Baptist church, Los Angeles, Cal. William Jennings Bryan will be one of the Fourth of July speakers. Governor's day will be July 5. Bishop F. J. McConnell, Methodist Episcopal church, Pittsburgh; Morris Sheppard, United States senator from Texas; "Billy" Sunday, the evangelist; and Dr. James S. McGaw, general secretary of the National Reform association, will be the speakers next Sunday.

The All-Chicago Methodist camp meeting will begin at Des Plaines, sixteen miles northwest of the city, on Wednesday evening, and will continue in daily session until July 13. Next Friday will be woman's day and Saturday young people's day. It is expected that the opening day, being the Fourth of July, will be devoted to church, group, and family picnics. In the evening following the opening service there will be fireworks. The regular meetings will begin at 9 a. m. on Thursday.

The cornerstone of the Woodlawn-Immanuel English Lutheran church, 64th street and Kenwood avenue, will be laid today at 3:30 o'clock. This church is of interest to the entire body of the United Lutheran Church in America because of its relation to the Lutheran student body of the University of Chicago. The denomination has contributed $30,000 towards the cost of the building, which will exceed $150,000, so that it may serve the students. The architecture corresponds with the university buildings.

Prof. Alonzo A. Stagg is on the advisory church board, as special attention will be given to the gymnasium and social activities. The congregation is now worshiping in the Masonic temple, 64th street and University avenue, and service will be held there today at 11 o'clock. The congregation formerly occupied the church at 43d street and Champlain avenue. This building was sold.

While in the smaller church the Church Athletic association was formed to promote games on Saturdays. This organization spread among Lutheran churches and was finally merged into the present interdenominational city-wide Church Athletic association.

The Lutheran Students' club, which admits men and women, is said to be the largest denominational club at the University of Chicago. The new building will be the church home of the majority of the members of the club.

The sermon at the cornerstone laying will be preached by the Rev. Simon Peter Long, D. D. The pastor, the Rev. C. E. Paulus; the Rev. John F. Seibert, D. D., general secretary of the home Mission and Church Extension society, and others will assist in the ceremony.

Radical changes in the constitution and by-laws of the Chicago Methodist Social union were made at its last annual meeting. The chief changes were the election of a board of fifteen directors as the governing body, the giving of a complimentary membership to every pastor in the active relation, the opening of membership to the entire Rock River conference instead of to the three Chicago districts, as hitherto, and the establishing of a sustaining membership as well as an active membership. The officers elected were: President, P. C. Hiles; vice presidents, Dr. F. G. Bruner; R. G. Kimball, and W. G. Smith; secretary, W. B. Turner; treasurer, R. Clarence Brown. The wording of the object of the union was enlarged by defining its purpose to be spiritual and civic as well as social. The Chicago Methodist Social union has had a continuous history of forty-four years. One of its notable achievements was the inaugurating and carrying through of the plan to secure lay representation in the general conference of the denomination, which was worldwide in its effect.

Camp Houghteling, located on Lake Amy Belle, near Richfield, Wis., will begin tomorrow its fourth annual season under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Episcopal church. The camp will close on Saturday, July 14. Eighty boys will be entertained, divided into chapters of eight each under a leader, and in two equally large groups for competition in honors and awards. Reveille is sounded at 6:15 a. m. and taps at 10 p. m. Boys from 15 to 21 years of age, not more than four from a single parish, are eligible. The boys will leave early tomorrow morning by boat to Milwaukee. The camp is twenty-one miles northwest of Milwaukee.

A conference for church workers of the province of the mid-west of the Episcopal church will begin tomorrow at Racine college, Racine, Wis., and continue to July 13. The conference preacher next Sunday will be the Rt. Rev. Irving P. Johnson. Bishop Johnson will give a week's series of lectures. The chaplain is the Rev. Charles H. Young; dean of men, the Rev. Walter C. Bihler, and dean of young women, Mrs. George Biller. Bishop Hugh L. Burleson of South Dakota will give a week's series of lectures. Normal classes, discussion classes, courses in Christian social service, courses of special interest to young men and women, are all on the program. The Rev. Gerald G. Moore, the Rev. Frank R. Myers, the Rev. M. C. Stone, Mrs. Lawrence Ferguson, Prof. Peter C. Lutkin, the Rev. W. B. Spofford, and Mrs. William S. Bishop are among those in official positions from Chicago. Others will be present from Philadelphia, New York, and from the nearby states.

The property of the South Chicago Christian center at 8504 Buffalo avenue, which has been occupied by the Baptists for some time, has been purchased. The equipment will be improved and the service will be enlarged.

The Warner Corselette

We are having a tremendous demand for these cleverly designed garments, which take the place of corset and brassiere and which hold the figure firmly and support the stockings. For the growing girl we especially recommend several special styles, as just the garment which is needed. They support the bust, keep the figure erect and trim, but in no way interfere with freedom of movement. The style illustrated is excellent for the youthful figure, but corselettes are made in great variety; a style for every figure.

We shall be glad to show you the style you should wear ..... 1.50 to $5

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

JULY 1, 1923.

Society Art Science

SOCIETY

Midsummer Finds Society Active in Civic Welfare

By Mme. X.

MRS. KENNETH SAFFORD PARKER.
[Keshus photo.]

Mrs. Mildred Gapen Bowen of Chicago, daughter of Mrs. Clarke Gapen of Madison, Wis., was married to Kenneth Safford Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Parker of Jonesville, Wis., last night at the residence of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius A. Crowell, 1610 Oak avenue, Evanston. Mr. and Mrs. Parker have left for a trip to the Canadian Rockies and Alaska.

MISS MARIAN ELIZABETH FESLER.
[Moffett photo.]

Announcement was made recently of the engagement of Miss Marian Elisabeth Fesler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas F. Fesler of 3202 Sheridan road, to Homer Lange, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Lange of 445 Melrose avenue. Miss Fesler made her debut last winter.

MISS CORDELIA CARPENTER.
[Raymer Ltd. photo.]

Miss Cordelia Carpenter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter of 2445 Astor street, is to become the bride of Dr. Nathan S. Davis III. of Chicago on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at St. Chrysostom's church. Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the Carpenter residence.

WHILE all the rest of us look to automobiles, old Father Time took to one also, which is why he seems to fly so much faster than used to. Here it is the first of July, the summer is only just beginning to the peak of the year lies before us. We reached it a week ago yesterday, June 21, the summer solstice, when the daylight hours, which had been creeping up to their maximum, arrived at the top of the curve and began to drop down the other side towards the equinox, Sept. 22, after which the nights will be longer than the days.

But there is still some time before the autumn harbinger of winter comes, and in the interval there will be much outdoor sport and indoor recreation, as well as other more serious things achieved. For the social world of which this pillar of polite pitfalls is chronicler is far from being devoted entirely to the pursuit of pleasure. Its members are among the most devoted workers of the various charitable institutions in the city which do so much to alleviate the inevitable misery which is sure to come to the portions of the poor. The time may come when there is so perfect that there will be no more poor, when every man will have an opportunity to secure a modicum of happiness, a good supply of food, and the education which makes for understanding.

Children of Many Lands.

Such steps, one at a time, are taken towards the accomplishment of this desirable state of things. Of these is the Red, White, and Blue club. You have, if you are a reader of the W. G. N., heard of this interesting institution before. It has its home at 1132 Wade street. It has, perhaps, the most fashionable membership in the city, but it is one of the most populous. The club has a membership of at least 400, just about equally divided between the Chicago Woman's and Cyclo and Casino clubs. Its membership, but how different! Whereas the Red, White, and Blue is the bright particular possession of 200 boys and girls of almost every nationality hailing from south-eastern Europe. Its members range in age from tiny toddlers of three or four years to lads and lassies of seventeen summers. No child who comes to the door is ever turned away by the club's hospitable and delightful presiding genius, Mrs. Sophie Eddistadt. Each child receives a smiling welcome and a hearty hand if one is needed. Occupation and entertainment are provided by the club, but the children are allowed to choose their own line of activities. Some choose books, others games, others take advantages of the classes arranged for different studies.

Both boys and girls can learn to cook in the neat little kitchen fitted up in the building, while there are cheerful sewing classes for the girls where they are taught how to make over their outworn frocks or to create new ones from inexpensive materials. Individual liberty is allowed the children as far as possible so as to encourage initiative and mental development, but one thing they all learn to do together, and that is to sing our national anthems. And with what a passion they chant them about out that "our flag was still in unison! It is something to bring tears to the eyes to watch those eager, utterly foreign little faces, eyes shining, teeth gleaming, as their owners fling out that "our flag was still there," or "land of the noble free, of thee I sing."

But why, do I hear you say, all this midsummer gabble about a city charitable enterprise? It is because, before she left Chicago last Tuesday for Santa Barbara, Cal., the Red, White, and Blue club's president, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, signed the papers which completes the purchase of the present house sheltering the enterprise. It is a simple little wooden building on the corner of Wade and some other street. It used to be a saloon. Its present use will wipe out all the probable stains of its previous occupancy. Where the neighborhood "soaks" used to loaf and loll, now hundreds of youngsters are being made into fervent Americans, for that is the fundamental intent of the undertaking. The clubhouse is to be renovated, covered on the outside with plaster, fitted inside with a steam heating plant, and altogether made a suitable temple to young America. It is such a shrine that makes safer the destinies of our country when the time comes to enable at least a part of them to the chorus that now stands as heartily our national hymns.

The money that made possible this purchase was raised at a benefit last winter when Mrs. Coleman and her committee took over the opening night of Elsie Ferguson on Jan. 9 at the Blackstone theater. Over $15,000 was made that evening, which sufficed to pay the running expenses for this year and to make the first payment on the new house.

Revivals That Mean.

Most communities crown summer with sports, and a gay garland it makes. Chicago and its northern environs add to this a crown of music. From the moment when the Ravinia company starts its open air operas and concerts the attention of the musical world all over the country is turned our way, while all the devotees of music within a radius of many miles make Ravinia park their Mecca.

The opening of this season's engagement, a week ago yesterday, was one of the big and red letter nights of this enterprise. Crowds began to come early, and by the time the curtain rose on Verdi's "Traviata" not only was the great pavilion full and the free seats along its outer edges ditto but also all the available standing room at the back was packed, and on the wide lawns were scattered groups of would-be hearers, while in the adjacent groves and in the fields across the tracks a vast concourse of automobiles was parked, a show for any motor enthusiast.

The writer has seen "Traviata" given innumerable times and by a great variety of artists, but never before with such perfection and charm as it was that night. The sorrows and troubles of the unhappy Violetta, as presented by Miss Pareto, became, for the first time, a reality. Schipa made of Alfredo a youthful and spirited lover. When Violetta caressed and mussed his unruly hair it seemed the natural thing to do to her boyish swain. His father, the elder Germont, was a dignified and persuasive personality as interpreted and sung by Danise.

The night was ideal for an open air performance, warm, soft, with a waxing moon and a gardenful of fragrant flowers. The large and extremely good looking audience was enthusiastic, and at the close of the performance instead of hurrying out in search of cars stayed to call out and applaud the artists again and again. It was an auspicious opening and one that would make those present want to go often.

Stroke of Genius.

Louis Eckstein, the presiding genius of Ravinia, who leaves nothing undone to insure the happiness of those who attend performances there, had employed a scientist in mosquito extermination who had saturated the floors, seats, and pillars with an odorless mixture which so discourages the little bussers that it is promised none will be on hand there this summer. Certain it is, there was no need to protect sensitive ankles or to slap at the buzzing air that evening. The mosquitoes had sought other neighborhoods, and there was peace and joy to the brow of music and the possessor of delicate epidermis.

Another arrangement which Mr. Eckstein has made is with the Northwestern road is to have established a special train from and to Chicago for those from the city who want to attend opera at Ravinia. It leaves the Northwestern station on Madison street at 6:40 standard time (7:38 Chicago time), and waits at Ravinia until the opera is over, landing its passengers in town at 11:30, Chicago time. The round trip costs only $1.

Other operas given last week were "Lohengrin," "Boheme," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Carmen," "Madame Butterfly," and "Manon." In addition there were four concerts. Tonight "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Lescheo, Lazzari-Volpi, Lazzari, Paltrinieri, Falco, and Derman, will be repeated. Never was there a more impressive list of artists than that which Mr. Eckstein has gathered together at Ravinia this season. The fact that they come to this little suburb of Chicago is a great tribute to the renown of our summer opera. In the beginning it was not easy to convince the bigger stars that it was to their advantage to spend a season at Ravinia, but of late years the prestige of this open air company has so developed that an engagement in it has become a feather in any artist's cap. It has been suggested that if and when the enterprise becomes thoroughly rooted into our musical and social life, Ravinia park shall become such a musical center that its shady groves will shelter lots of little villas and bungalows to house the artists. It might in time become as ornamental and famous as Hollywood. At present some of the stars live in Highland Park, some in Ravinia, while others have taken summer villas in Glencoe and are keeping house in them. Speed the day when Chicago and music become synonymous terms!

Exhibits from Celebrated Kennels.

Next Friday and Saturday will be great days on the north shore. The third annual Ironfall Pet show opens on Friday afternoon on the grounds of the Joseph Cudahy place in Deerpath avenue, Lake Forest. This is an event which has grown in importance each year. It began when three young—very young—Lake Forest maidens, the Misses Barbara, Kling, Dorothy Ranney, and Betsy Johnstone, went to Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy and said they wanted to give a large horse show and small dog show and had come to the conclusion that the Cudahy place was the one best suited to the project. It turned out that they had four big horses and eight small dogs to show.

The sympathetic Cudahys entered into the scheme heart and soul, and it has each year been one of the summer's high spots in Lake Forest, especially among the youth of the community.

It has also grown in importance as a sporting proposition until this year some real exhibits from celebrated kennels will be included in the "bench show."

Among them will be those beautiful

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

sentence the police dogs from Lawrence Armour's kennels, the finest of their kind in this country. Also some magnificent specimens of that mysterious breed the Chinese chow will be added from the Byfield kennels and Miss Beaver's.

The average chow is an inscrutable animal. You can make a pretty good guess at what a Scotch or Irish terrier or a brindle bull terrier is thinking, but it is not hard to read the mind of a collie, but what is going on in the brain of a Chinese chow is beyond our seeking. Perhaps he or she is thinking of the humiliating fact that originally the chow family was bred to be eaten, hence the name "chow," which is the Chinese for food, and is carrying to make the rest of the world forget it by appearing remote and indifferent. Or perhaps the chow that we know best, John McCutcheon's bloodhound, is merely too proud to notice our existence at all, but certain it is that most of this breed give the onlooker the same impression as that conveyed by the casual Chinaman one meets on the highways in this country of infinite aloofness and profound indifference to any of the things that count with us youthful and enthusiastic occidentals.

Funds Go to Allce Home.

But to return to the pet show: Miss Barbara King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. King, is chairman of the girls' committee. As she cannot be present, owing to the fact that her family has gone east for the summer, the greater part of the work falls on the shoulders of her vice chairman, Miss Betsy Johnston, daughter of Hugh McKinney Johnston. The girls' committee includes seventeen misses, ranging in age from Miss Fleury Leonard, 14 years old, to Miss Helen Eistir, 8 years of age. The boys' committee, consists of twenty-one members, with Watson Armour, Jr., aged 15 years, at the head of the list, and at the other end Morse Ely Jr., who has seen not quite nine years all told. Young Watson Armour is chairman of this committee, with Edson White Jr. vice chairman.

The American Kennel club sanctions the show, which will include 300 dogs, as well as cats—some fine Persian cats are coming from Aurora—birds, guinea pigs, lambs, ponies, donkeys, rabbits, ducks, pigeons, goats, and even a solitary peacock. There will be other attractions as well, among them being a soda water fountain, which all the boys want to man, and various booths at which one can buy articles of many varieties. The money which will be raised by the sale of tickets and other means will be turned over to Alice home, Lake Forest's lovely little hospital. Last year these youngsters netted $3,000 from their pet show. They have high hopes of exceeding this sum this year. Here's wishing them the best harvest they've had yet!

Well Known Figures in Chicago.

Weddings are still the order of the day. Yesterday that of Miss Miles Thorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thorne, to Herman Dunlap Smith, youngest son of Mrs. John Y. Farwell, was solemnized at the residence of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. George R. Thorne, Thornhurst, in Lake Forest, the Robert Thorne's place in Lake Forest being rented for the season to the Robert Lamonts.

Thornhurst used to be the Lake Forest home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson until they sold it to Mrs. Thorne.

Herman Smith is a son of the late Dunlap Smith and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Smith, both well known figures in Chicago society forty years ago. Perry Smith built on the corner of Huron and what was then Pine street and is now North Michigan avenue in the early seventies one of the conspicuous residences of the time. It was a majestic looking, white marble dwelling, oddly shaped with two wings at different angles resembling so as to form what looked like a gigantic frosted cake with a huge slice cut out of it. The Smiths were among the most hospitable people of their time and gave many entertainments in their striking new house. There was in the third story a theater, with rising tiers of seats, where the amateur actors of that time used to give performances. Herman Smith's maternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Flower. Mrs. Flower was one of the most enlightened and progressive women of her time. She devoted her life especially to work for the bettering of the condition of children. She toiled fifteen years to get the Juvenile court established which took the children away from the courts where adults were tried. This gave them a court and judge of their own. She was long a member of the Chicago board of education and while serving there induced the board to build the first technical high school for girls. There had been many for boys up to that time, but none for girls. Through the persuasive eloquence of the late Chester M. Dawes, then a member of the school board, she was the first person in the whole United States to have a school named for her during her life.

The Lucy L. Flower Technical High School for Girls on the south side of the city has ever since its inception been crowded with pupils studying cooking, sewing, dressmaking, stenography, designing, and many other courses which fit women to earn their livelihood. Mrs. Flower also was one of the original founders of the Illinois Training School for Nurses. She was likewise the first woman trustee elected on the board of the state university. In short, she was a pioneer in good works in this part of the world and one whose name deserves to be written high in local annals.

Death of Maj. Eckenfelder.

Many who still remember those stressful days after this country entered the world war in 1917 will recall Maj. Eckenfelder, one of the most striking figures among the English, French, and Italians who came to Chicago to help in the intensive training of our improvised army which this country, in an incredibly short time, prepared to send to Europe to take part in the great struggle. He was in charge of all the officers sent by France to assist our army camps in the middle western states. He himself had served in the front line along the eastern border of France from the beginning of the conflict.

He was an Alsatian of an old and honorable family, and when the Germans annexed Alsace his father felt he could not live under the conquerors and took his wife and children to France. Maj. Eckenfelder, after serving many years in the French cavalry, decided to seek his fortunes in Canada and, with a couple of his countrymen, went to Alberta, where they founded the town of Trochu.

After many adventures and much hardship, Maj. Eckenfelder took up a claim there for a ranch; he married, settled down, had children, and was just entering upon what looked like a measure of prosperity when came August, 1914. A long distance call summoned him to his telephone. It was a message saying that Germany had declared war on France. To his wife, standing by, he gave the news. Her only words were:

"When do you go, dear?"

"Tomorrow," he answered. And he went. When he arrived over there he found there was little active service for cavalry and that there was a dearth of officers in the infantry, the front line troops that from beginning to end bore the brunt of the German attack. He immediately volunteered for this service, and was accepted. Although he was in continuous action, he was never wounded. His health, however, was undermined by the hardships and exposures of this sort of warfare, for he was not a young man when he returned to serve his beloved France.

On account of his bodily ill health, he accepted the post offered him to come to this country to help train our troops. His headquarters were in Chicago, and during the year and a half of his stay here he made many friends. To them it will be a real source of grief to hear that he died on May 1 in Trochu of an illness that was undoubtedly the result of his three years in the trenches. He was a typical Frenchman, with the gay courage which is characteristic of his race. Like the rest of his countrymen, he had no illusions, a fact that enhanced the quality of his gayety and courage.

We Americans are prone to cherish visions and ideals impossible of realization. Not so the French; they are an immensely practical people, and high talk about loving your fellow men, even if they have been hereditary enemies for a thousand years, and of working for the benefit of mankind at large, does not appeal to them in the least. If we get a federation of the world with every nation loving every other, it will not be with much cooperation from France, though neither will it have any opposition. The French from "from Missouri." You must "show them."

"The major," as his friends here used to call him, was a fine soldier and a capital companion, always merry and with a great zest for life. He bore his troubles without a whimper. His promising ranch in Alberta, the fruit of years of great toil, was ruined by the unwise action of some one whom he left in charge and who sold off his stock when prices were lowest, neglecting to replace it with any other sort of cultivation. This was one of the unrecorded cases of disaster which rewarded many a son of France. "The major" gallantly tried to recover something from the wreck, but without much success, I am afraid, and now it is probable that his wife and son and daughter are facing a cold world with not much equipment beyond the inheritance of French gayety and courage to help them get through it. All the sacrifices to patriotism were not made on the battle fields. Many a bitter harvest was reaped later.

This Way to Curl Hair Fine for Outdoor Girl

The Slingerine method of curling the hair is the proper thing (for either bobbed or long hair) before going motoring, boating or golfing, or indulging in any outdoor sport or exercise. It not only gives the hair the most beautiful wavy and curly appearance imaginable, but wind or heat will not take the curl out. The curliness is quickly acquired and lasts much longer than where waving tongs are used. Besides, the hair is bright and lustrous, instead of dull, heated looking. When combed out it is as nice and fluffy as if it had just been shampooed. Just get a bottle of Hall's Slingerine and follow the easy directions, and you will be simply delighted.

ART AND ARTISTS

Japanese Artist Yields His Brush with Gentle Humor

By Inez Cunningham

I WENT to the Art institute intending to write a story about applied art, but the day was hot and anything applied except cold water was intensely fatiguing even in prose. So, as children say, warrating, "first thing I knew" I was wandering past the cool rooms in the new part of the building and I came upon something much more fitting to the season. Something lighter, more piquant, with a distinct flavor of summer about it. In fact, I came upon the humorous department.

You didn't know, did you, that the art institute had a humorous department? Well, it has—any place that shows Japanese paintings has a humorous department—couldn't help but have. For that is the essential—the racial characteristic of Japanese painting.

It is a tolerant sort of humor, comparable only to that precious and gentle quality found in the best French wit—that understanding smile that says "O, yes, yes; I, too, was young—am older now, but I have learned that nature is my little brother."

"Worship," by Henrietta B. Fischbis, won the American fraternity scholarship at the art students' exhibition.

The Japanese artist does with his brush and his color the same thing that Anatole France has done with prose in "Le Livre de Mon Amie." He brings the beauty and the grace of life—its elaboration—its politeness—he gives them their value—a greater one, perhaps, than we are apt to accord them—but he makes them transparent, and beneath we see that exquisite appeal to the unconscious child which sleeps in every human heart.

The Japanese paintings in question are not the best in the world, perhaps, but they have these qualities in a degree, and they hold the imagination and retain the racial memory. They are by a contemporary Japanese, Tsukenchi Seiho, and were loaned by Janeso Kamato.

I will give you a brief catalog of some of them.

1. Bumblebees and Poppies—A lovely design of growing poppies with an important bumblebee flying over. At least, the bee thinks he's important—important to the flowers, important to nature, and important to the artist as a spot of black.

2. Crows and Persimmons—Remarkable for its texture painting. Though it is extremely impressionistic, the crows have feathers—the persimmons they are stealing are luscious, and the leaves have that faint and worn look that leaves have when fruit is ripe.

3. Twilight and Homeward Bound—Just a few black blotches suggesting weariness after a day of toil, the cool of evening, and the sweetness of rest—a picture of a state of mind rather than a landscape.

4. Sparrows on the Wing—The humble creatures of raucous city streets made immortal in their moment of flight.

5. Thinking It Over—Our common ancestor the ape, with apparently our common thought, "What's it all about?"

6. At Peace—Portrait of a lion, giving just the great leonine head and suggesting subtly by its pose that he is suffering from the disease that affects most lions—enlargement of the cranium.

7. Just a Pup—It is as if the artist said: "I will paint your portrait, dear wag, in furs, philosopher of the household, petted and forgotten in turns—forgiving always—like the God of these Christians."

8. Barnyard Fowl—A domestic scene between a rooster and a hen humorously recalling the male attitude in many human families.

9. Fisherman's Haven — Another symphonic blotting of ink suggesting faintly the visitation of dawn.

Art Notes.

While several of the regular teachers of the Art Institute school will remain and teach in the summer school, which opens tomorrow, several of them have arranged to spend their vacations out in the open, painting from nature. Miss Matilda Vanderpoel, head of the Saturday juvenile department, has purchased a log cabin on Gold Hill, Colo., and will leave within a few days to take possession. Miss Van Puppelendam, instructor of painting, will tour the southwest in her car, which she has fitted up as a traveling studio. F. DeForrest Schook and Frederick Poole are at Bailey's Harbor, Mich., giving instruction to the twenty-five government ex-service men who are fitting themselves for the various fields of art. J. Wellington Reynolds, instructor in painting, is at Castle Park, Mich. Leopold Seyffert, instructor in portraiture, has gone to join his family in Switzerland, and Hormann Rosse, head of the design department, will spend the summer in New York City. Karl Buehr, instructor in the head and life classes, left this week for his summer studio in Wyoming, N. Y. Dean Ensign left yesterday for his summer painting camp in Massachusetts.

James Harvey Dulin, former Chicagoan and lately director of art for L'Illustration, will direct the illustration classes of the summer school at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts which opens on Friday. Dorothy Dulin, his wife, will be remembered by TRIBUNE readers as a former staff artist.

Eight artists of Taos, N. M., have formed a society called "New Mexico Painters," its object being to develop American art as separate from European influences. The members are Ernest L. Blumenschein, secretary, New York and Taos, N. M.; Victor Higgins, Chicago and Taos, N. M.; Walter Ufer, Chicago and Taos, N. M.; Frank G. Applegate, Joseph G. Bakos, Gustave Bauman, William P. Henderson, and B. J. O. Nordfelt of Santa Fe, N. M.

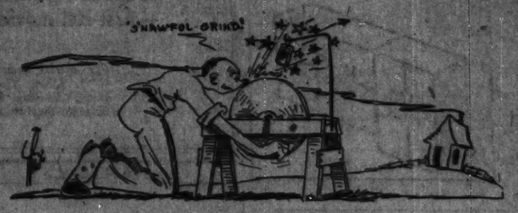
Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

MEBBE SO, I DUNNO.

They say that one should toil and strive
And keep ambition's flame alive,
That in the energetic glow
Of labor one may only know
The peace that passeth all compare,
The joy beyond all grief and care—
Well mebbe so,
I dunno.

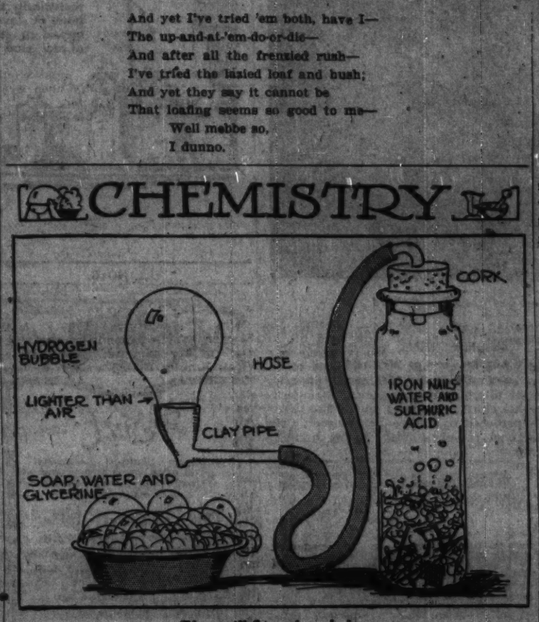
They say that he who with his hands
Fulfills desires and demands,
Whose fevered brow is galt and wet
With honest labor's fruitful sweat,
That he alone may know a joy
That cannot satiate nor cloy—
Wells mebbe so,
I dunno.



They say—of course I mean by "they"
The lads who have the most to say—
That he who shuns the wearied rôle,
Who loafs and dallies with his soul
And passes up the grind and grime
Will have a most unhappy time—
Well mebbe so,
I dunno.

And yet I've tried 'em both, have I—
The up-and-at-'em-do-or-die—
And after all the frenzied rush—
I've tried the lazied loaf and bush;
And yet they say it cannot be
That loafing seems so good to me—
Well mebbe so,
I dunno.

CHEMISTRY



They will fly and explode.

FLYING BUBBLES.

DID you ever make soap bubbles that would fly like balloons? Here is an easy way to do it:

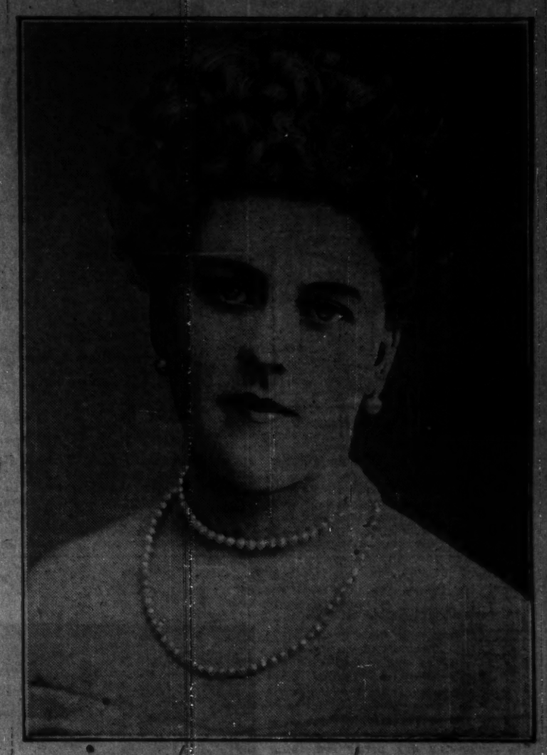
Mix up a thick solution of high grade soap in water, and add one-quarter or more of its volume of glycerin. Bubbles burst because the water in their thin walls evaporates. Glycerin is a greedy water drinker. Its presence in the soapsuds will prevent evaporation. Keep adding glycerin until the bubbles will not readily burst from exposure to air.

Now to make them fly. To do this you will need to fill them with hydrogen gas. Select a large size pickle bottle. Put in a handful of small iron nails, bolts, nuts and such scrap free from grease, cover them with water, and add strong sulphuric acid until the mass is boiling briskly.

Bore a hole in a cork and insert a rubber hose. In the other end of the hose place a clay pipe. Cork up the bottle, and hydrogen will come through the hose.

Now dip the pipe in the suds. The gas pressure in the bottle will inflate the bubble. When they are three inches in diameter they will be ripe to fly. See how eagerly they tug at the pipe, wanting to be off. Let them go out of doors. They rise and fly until they are out of sight. Touch a match to one and see it burn. And still aviators risk their lives in hydrogen balloons!

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?



Espireis.

By Selby Maxwell.

GREEK BEAUTY FRAIL.

THE citizens of Athens were as far above the average person today in mental appreciation, at the height of Athenian glory, as the modern person is above a coolie. Who were the Athenians? And why did they excel? And, far more important for us, why did they stop excelling?

The Athenians belonged to the second or Ionian wave of Greeks who invaded Greece. They were not native there. Their homeland was in the upper valley of the Danube river. They were a branch of the Celtic race, and their descendants are not found today in Greece, but in Baltic Europe.

Espireis is a Greek girl. Athens was great because of its women. It is a truth that there can be no great sons unless there are first great mothers.

Espireis reveals much of the glory that was Greece's. Her mind reasons. She is versatile, poetical, artistic, just, and, above all, appreciative. Greece has not departed from the world. It has merely left Greece. So long as the race of Espireis lives, so long will there be hope for Athens to return. Up to the days of Pericles, the Athenians guarded their Aryan heritage as something most sacred. An Athenian father and, mark, an Athenian mother, were necessary before a man could vote.

But the Athenians never were numerous, even in Athens. They were a blonde military autocracy, ruling brunettes by arms, and at the height of Athenian power they were far outnumbered by natives in the city.

The politicians of that day thought it would be a fine idea to make citizenship contingent upon place of birth instead of upon breed. There was a general enfranchisement, and the old families found themselves swamped. Their girls married brunettes. In the next generation there were few Athenians.

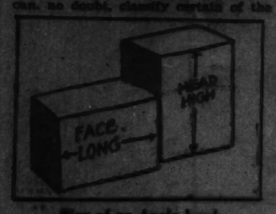
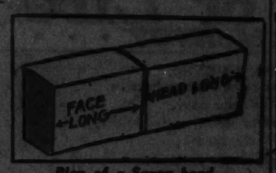
FIGURING HUMAN EVOLUTION.

PEOPLE who look alike often think alike, understand alike and act alike. Sometimes this similarity is uncanny. There are many recorded instances of two individuals totally unrelated by family being similar in mind and body. Discounting all these instances of a possible blood descent—when an unusually powerful behavior is found, it is still true that there are only 146 major heredity divisions in each race. There are 146 appearances of Nordics, 146 kinds of Celts, and 146 sorts of Cromagnons. If you have a large acquaintance, you can, no doubt, classify certain of the people you know into groups.



Plan of an Anglo head.

Gothic manhood is handsome.



Plan of a Saxon head.

A skull is a solid, with three dimensions, length, breadth, and height. A face is similarly a solid disc. Both skulls and faces are free to vary their proportions, and both do. But they vary according to law.

Before a race has evolved far it splits into three branches. Three kinds of Nordics live in the world, the tall Gothic or Scandinavian Nordic, the moderately tall Saxon Nordic, found in Germany and the south of England, and the Anglican Nordic, whose center of dispersal has been Schleswig on the continent and Northumberland in Britain. Of these three the Goth is fair and can never tan, the Saxon burns and finally develops tan, while the Anglican has his tan concentrated in freckles. The Goth is usually long headed, the Saxon has a long face, while the Angle has a high head. If you take two blocks, mark their similar sides as that they can be told apart, you will be struck with the three way arrangement that is apparent with them.

INSECTS

AN INSECT GAS BOMB.

YOU drop your keys in the darkness. They tinkle on the pavement, and bounce into the black shadows of the curb. You grope and follow their rustle, and you reach your hand after them, groping and feeling where you think they have gone. Your fingers touch something that moves, a dry horny something that squirms as you touch it, and goes "pip" with a sharp little explosion. A scurry of scratchy legs, a racing shock through your nervous system, and your head jerks reflexly back, while your frame is convulsed with a shudder. Then an odor of roses, a mingled odor of iodoform and carrion. It clings to your fingers in intensifying sweetness. It permeates the air, it makes you nostrils curl and your stomach writhe. You strike a match, and see a large black beetle, flat of back, and with long, gangling legs, scurrying among the grass stems, beside where your keys glitter. On his back are iridescent metallic spots, arranged in rows. His body reflects colors like oil on water. He is a bombardier beetle, the gas bomb of the insect world.

He will face his equals but gas his superiors.

Bombardiers are ground beetles. They are carnivorous, and catch their prey by running it down. The hunting cheetah, a leopard-like cat that runs like a dog, is the bombardier's nearest morphologue in the vertebrate world.

Colesoma, as this bombardier is called, is a fierce biting creature. Woe be to any little creature that his eye greets upon, or whose scent reaches his antennae. True, he prefers sick or partly disabled insects, but if pressed by hunger he will not scorn to attack a large grub or another of his kin.

The insect world, full of tragedy and carnage, is a place of terror. No life is it is safe, even for one moment, and few indeed are the citizens who die peacefully. All the little creatures in it have special modes of defense. Some rely on armor, others on speed of wing; some lie still and hide; some advertise their peculiarly offensive qualities with the most glaring colors that evolution can devise; a few are really dangerous fighters, while a greater number than you would think seek to intimidate their foes by various means. The click beetles and the lady birds have ferocious looking eyes painted on their backs, so that birds will think they are looking at some strange and awful shape, and be afraid to touch. Many larvae resemble singly and have harmless spines to look like "stingers" to frighten the timid. The spiders are hideously ugly, knowing well that if they are repulsive enough nothing will eat them. The bombardier has a unique way of being unpleasant. He spurts gas at you. Ton yourself can testify how effective it is.

An insect foe rushes at Colesoma. It bears down on him, its savage jaws wide agape. Scurrying through the grass they go, the eater and his intended victim. Colesoma surely cannot escape. But, pip!—a cloud of vapor envelops the face of the predator. It fills his smelling pores, it clings to his chitin, it musses up his balance of perception. Before he recovers, Colesoma is yards away, hiding under a stone.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Simple Life.

Wife—How are you getting along at home while your wife's away?

Jim—Fine. I've reached the height of efficiency. I can put on my socks right from either end. A. C.

On the Go.

Farmer's Boy—Father, kin I go to the circus tonight?

Farmer—No! 'Taint more 'n' a month since you went to the top o' the hill to see the eclipse o' the moon. Makes me you wanter be on the go all the half time. L. T.

Brave but No Gentleman.

In carrying a woman down the ladder from a burning building a gallant fireman slipped and fell to the ground. The woman landed heavily but safely upon the prostrate hero. A doctor summoned pronounced the fireman uninjured.

"You're a brave gentleman," said he. "Brave, but no gentleman," said the patient, rubbing his injuries, "or I'd have let the lady go first." S. M.

Really Rather Mat.

A young man, anxious to show his locale, just arrived from abroad, some of the sights in New York, took him to an exclusive restaurant for dinner.

When the young man said to the waiter, "Two cocktails, waiter," a look of bewilderment appeared on the other's face, and motioning to the waiter he audibly whispered, "If you don't mind, I'd rawther have the wing."

M. G.

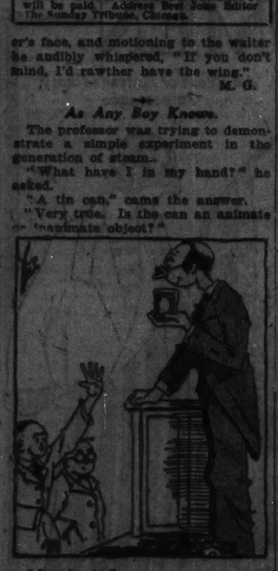
As Any Boy Knows.

The professor was trying to demonstrate a simple experiment in the generation of steam.

"What have I in my hand?" he asked.

"A tin can," came the answer.

"Very true. Is the can an animate or inanimate object?"



"Inanimate."

"Exactly. Now, can any little boy or girl tell me how, with this tin can, it is possible to generate a surprising amount of speed and power almost beyond control?"

One little boy raised his right hand.

"You may answer, Carter."

"Tie it to a dog's tail!" R. S.

Adventuring 'Round the World

Make the Dream Come True

CRUISING 'Round the World is a Great Adventure—a thousand vacations in one. Even the anticipation of such a Cruise is an absorbing Adventure. That is why you are urged to consider NOW—six months before sailing—the 'Round the World Cruise of the New Cunarder FRANCONIA, under the experienced tour management of the American Express Travel Department. This Cruise, in reality, will be one unbroken holiday—133 days—the most glorious days of a lifetime. So novel, so varied, so full of exotic charm that every day will remain with you always—not as a dream, but as a very real experience—a Great Adventure.

And it is so easy to make the dream come true.

The cost, usually the first consideration, is little more than expenses at home for the same period. And as for the necessary time—just a little planning now, a little saving on commonplace trifles perhaps—for this Great Adventure.

Consider the coming Cruise of the FRANCONIA as a possibility for you. In the size and character of ship, in the extent and varied interests of the lands visited, in the luxury of travel on land and sea provided, in the experienced care and attention to details for your personal comfort and pleasure, in the companionship of cultivated people—this Cruise of the FRANCONIA is the supreme opportunity to see and know the world.

The international offices and personal representatives of the American Express Company around the world are even now making great preparations for your reception and entertainment.

The FRANCONIA party will be limited. Reservations should be made now. Write for full details—deck plans and illustrated book of the Cruise. Experienced travel representatives of the American Express will give you every assistance in perfecting your plans. Call, phone or write.

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—WEST.

I HAVE SEARCHED A YEAR

for the ideal location; that is, a spot where I could build my home and rear my family; and I am glad to say I have protected against any undesirable elements.

I realized that to find this environment I must go to the suburbs. But I found that in most suburbs the transportation was poor during certain times of the day that I would have to wait sometimes as long as two hours; my ideal place must have transportation. I wanted a place where I had improvements, protected against undesirable or foreign element; where no shacks, flats or apartments could be built; where I myself was not restricted as to color of home; where a building line had been established; where all the neighborly worries of the type with whom I would be proud to have my family associate.

In short, the summing up of my search for location was: First, fine transportation; second, real improvement, and last but not least, the location must be such that at any time I should want to sell I would realize a substantial profit.

After more than a year covering every section of Chicago and suburbs, I have found my ideal location. Of course, it is in the suburbs. It is west of Chicago; it has transportation that is unsurpassed. The longest wait at any time during the day is not more than 13 minutes, oftimes only 6 or 7 minutes.

This ideal location was formerly owned by Judge Elbert H. Gary. This most beautiful estate has been divided into large, restricted suburban homesites ever offered the public. These are the finest residential lots ever offered the public. They have improvements, are not in the middle of a prairie, have beautiful homes all around them, and are to be offered to the public only to those who appreciate these ideal locations. You may never have the opportunity again to find a spot so desirable. If you will answer this ad I will be glad to send you further particulars without obligating you in your part. Hog values regained fully 10 to 15c of the recent sharp decline, on an active week-end session, although prices were still 15@20c below a week ago. Top advanced 15c at $7.25, with average 10c higher at $6.75, showing 20c and 15c decline, respectively, as compared with closing trade previous week. Brisk competition between local and outside buyers, together with the comparatively small number of good grades on sale caused the reaction. Shippers secured over one-fourth of the fresh receipts, only 4,000 remaining in the pens at the close.

Last week's hog receipts at 215,100 stand second largest since March, being 30,400 larger than previous week and 84,400 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight at 239 lbs was 2 lbs lighter than a week ago, 2 lbs lighter than a year ago, and 2 lbs above the ten year average. General average price of hogs last week at $6.85 dropped 30c below previous week, $2.40 below a year ago, and $3.40 under the ten year average.

Last week's receipts of cattle were comparatively small and quality poorer than usual. General trade, however, was unsatisfactory during the week, with top at $11.40 standing 10c below the previous week and general average of beef steers $1.50 lower at $9.85. Some grassy kinds showed at $60@75c decline. Closing trade, however, was comparatively strong, especially on the better grades.

Lamb Trade Firm.

Lamb trade gained a firm undertone on closing sessions last week, prices regaining 25c to 50c of the recent sharp slump. Top at the close at $15.75, stands 35c above last Friday, but showed 75c loss, as compared with the high time previous week, with the week's general average price at $15.10, comparing with $15.85 previous week. Favorable reports from the dressed meat trade, following the sudden break, was a strengthening influence on the local live market. Aged sheep were generally unchanged, sheep average at $8.15, standing within 10c of previous week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 54,000 hogs, and 11,000 sheep, against 24,111 cattle, 54,863 hogs, and 19,011 sheep a week ago and 9,534 cattle, 47,849 hogs, and 13,605 sheep a year ago. Receipts for Fourth of July week are estimated at 65,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 40,218 cattle, 138,728 hogs, and 49,846 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 48,000 to 66,000. W. H. Overman marked 48,000; F. Gehrmann and J. T. Brown, 53,000; H. H. Moore, 61,000; R. R. Gentry, 57,000; W. S. Reduce Communists' Bonds in Michigan to $5,000

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 30.—[Special.]—An order reducing the bail of six alleged communists awaiting trial here for violation of the Michigan anti-syndicalism law, following the raid last August on the radicals' convention at Bridgeman, was signed by Circuit Judge Charles R. White today. It reduced the bonds of each of the six including C. E. Ruthenberg, convicted and now at liberty pending a Supreme court decision on his appeal from $10,000 to $5,000. The others named are Thomas R. Sullivan, William F. Dunn, Max Lerner, Alex Ball, and William Reynolds.

Yield Counts More than Rate.

So many investors earnestly seeking the highest return on their money, look for securities with a high interest rate, ignoring entirely the more important factor of interest yield. Numerous letters which we receive indicate that a great many are under the impression that a security bearing 7 per cent interest bought at par is a better investment than an equally safe security with an interest rate of 5 per cent, but which can be bought at a price to yield better than 7 per bent on the money invested.

All other things being equal, i. e., in the matter of safety, stability, etc., the thing that counts is not how much money the investor receives on his investment, but what proportion he receives of the amount actually invested. At the present time there are many good seasoned securities on the market bearing 3, 4, or 5 per cent interest, which can be purchased at a price to yield as high as 7 per cent, or even higher. The amateur investor is apt to overlook these, not realizing that a $4 return on an investment of $50 is a better yield than $7 on an investment of $100.

In the case of bonds purchased below par, it must be remembered that these will be paid at par at maturity. This adds to the average annual income the amount of the difference between the purchase price and par, divided by the number of years the bond has to run—or, in the case of callable bonds, the number of years until redemption.

Another factor to be taken into consideration in purchasing a security is the callable feature. Many of the high per cent securities issued in the last few years are callable after a given date, or at any time, at the option of the issuer. Many of these are being called and refunded with securities bearing a lower interest rate. Take, for example, the case of the Standard Oil Company of California. It has outstanding $25,000,000 of tan year 7 per cent debentures issued January, 1921. These were callable at any time on thirty days' notice. The company has now decided to take advantage of its option and will redeem the entire issue on Aug. 1, 1923. To finance this redemption it is issuing $25,000,000 of 5 per cent notes. The purchaser of the debenture 7s, therefore, instead of enjoying that high rate of interest for ten years, must turn in his security and look for another investment which may not be on better than a 5 per cent basis now.

It is, of course, a fact that some of the low interest rate securities have a callable feature, but a company is not likely to call its securities unless it can refund them with an issue bearing a lower rate of interest. Therefore, until the prevailing rate of interest falls sufficiently low to enable them to market securities on a basis lower than those outstanding, these securities are not likely to be called. Except for those who may wish to have their principal released at an early date, the noncallable security has many advantages over the callable one, especially if it is purchased at a price to give a high interest yield.

The investor will do well to bear in mind that a low interest bearing security, bought at a price to give a high yield, is often a more profitable investment than a high interest bearing security, bought at a higher price—especially if it may be called before maturity.

It is the yield on an investment that counts—not the rate.

FRANCE, LIKE U. S., HAS ITS SUGAR PROFITEERING

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 30.—Beet sugar farmers of France made a profit of 1,000,000 francs [$139,000] on their crops in the last three years, and sugar refiners made a profit of 520,000,000 francs [$72,500,000] during the same period in refining this sugar, according to an investigation of the French ministry of agriculture.

In 1922 and 1923 the refiners made a profit of 210 per cent upon their capital and the previous year they made a profit of 315 per cent.

The report adds that the refiners also made a profit upon speculation in sugar, which cannot be traced.

ARTIFICIAL WAY TO MAKE MARBLE TOLD IN LONDON

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

The London Chemical society announces the discovery of a way to make artificial marble. Powdered calcium chloride and sodium carbonate are mixed together in equal proportions in water, until they make a stiff paste. The paste is then put into a mould, and pressed with a force of 800 pounds to the square inch, and at a temperature of almost a red heat until the mixture is dry and hard. A number of obscure chemical changes take place, which makes the mass hard as stone, and capable of taking a high polish.

Slabs of this stone are reported to have been turned out after eight hours of heating.

Marble is a product of marine sediments and volcanic fires. It is laid down on the sea bottom as shell heaps, which gradually turn into chalk. If the strata should be deeply buried in the rocks, the intense heat of the earth causes chemical elements to rearrange themselves so that they crystallize into marble. Various impurities in the chalk give the marble its various hues.

Practically all varieties of marble are said to be possible by this new method. The molding will probably do away with much of the sawing of slabs that is now done.

The ingredients of artificial marble are not in themselves expensive, and a lowering of the price of marble finish may result if the new stone comes into general use.

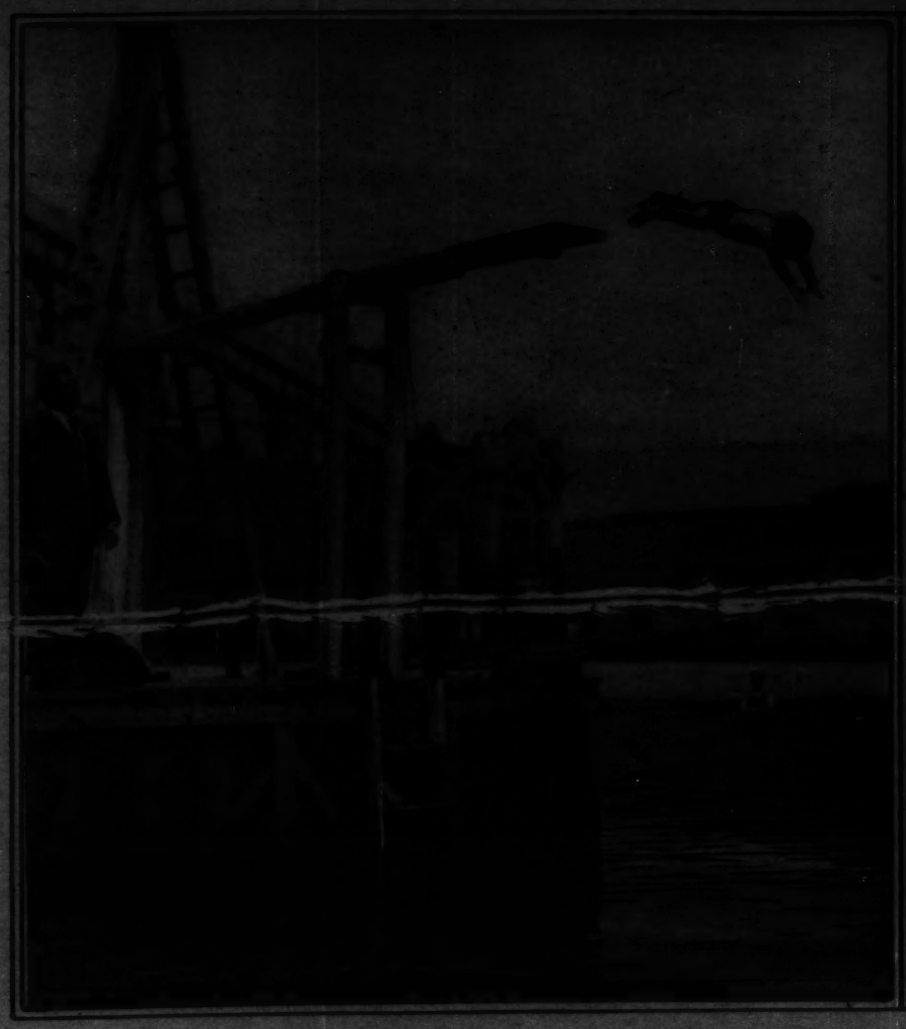
Man is certainly a gregarious animal



BABY DIVER, Jackie Ott, takes a big leap in Starlight park, New York. You may remember Jackie. Some time ago we showed you his picture after he had won his fifth blue ribbon at prize baby shows. He's only 4 years old, but he's a corking good aquaplane rider, a fine swimmer and diver, and an all-around athlete. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

STREET CAR RUNS WILD in New York, killing one person, injuring three others seriously, and wrecking a big apartment house. Coasting down hill at better than forty miles an hour, the car hit a switch at Amsterdam avenue and La Salle street and crashed up the sidewalk and against the building. Two hundred tenants fled in terror as the house supports crumbled. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

Don't let careless laundering shrink or fade them

Washed this way your sport clothes keep their texture and their color

You look doubtfully at your smart Kasha cloth skirt, the little sports jacket with its quaint embroidered design. They really ought to be washed, but will washing ruin them?

Even your sweaters this year are a problem—with their two tone colors and their low waist lines—you can't bear to have them shrink and fade, lose their modish look.

Just one careless laundering—and the proudest of your sport things isn't fit to wear again.

Wash all your sport things with Lux. It won't shrink or fade them.

Sensitive fabrics need special care

Silk and wool are such sensitive fabrics—strong soap actually dissolves them. Even a moderately strong soap or soap chip will destroy their finish, fade or streak their colors.

Just rubbing soap on a favorite wool sweater, for instance, thickens and shrinks it—makes it lose its nice lines.

Lux is safe for all these sensitive garments. There are no harsh ingredients in it to attack the fuzzy woolen fibers of your Kasha cloth skirt or to stiffen and yellow your silk sport blouses.

The feathery Lux suds cleanse all your pretty things gently without the rubbing that injures any fabric. If your sport things are safe in pure water they are just as safe in Lux.

MOVIE OF A RECORD HEAVE in the shot put. Norman Anderson of the University of Southern California breaking the National Collegiate A. A. record in the games at Stagg field. Anderson shoved the lead ball 46 feet 8 inches. The previous mark was 45 feet 4½ inches, made by A. Pope of Washington in 1921.

THE HAMMER THROW as a champion does it. F. Tootell of Bowdoin was snapped as he broke the National Collegiate A. A. record at Stagg field here with a toss of 175 feet 1 inch. Tootell's effort was far short of his own intercollegiate mark of 181 feet 6⅛ inches.

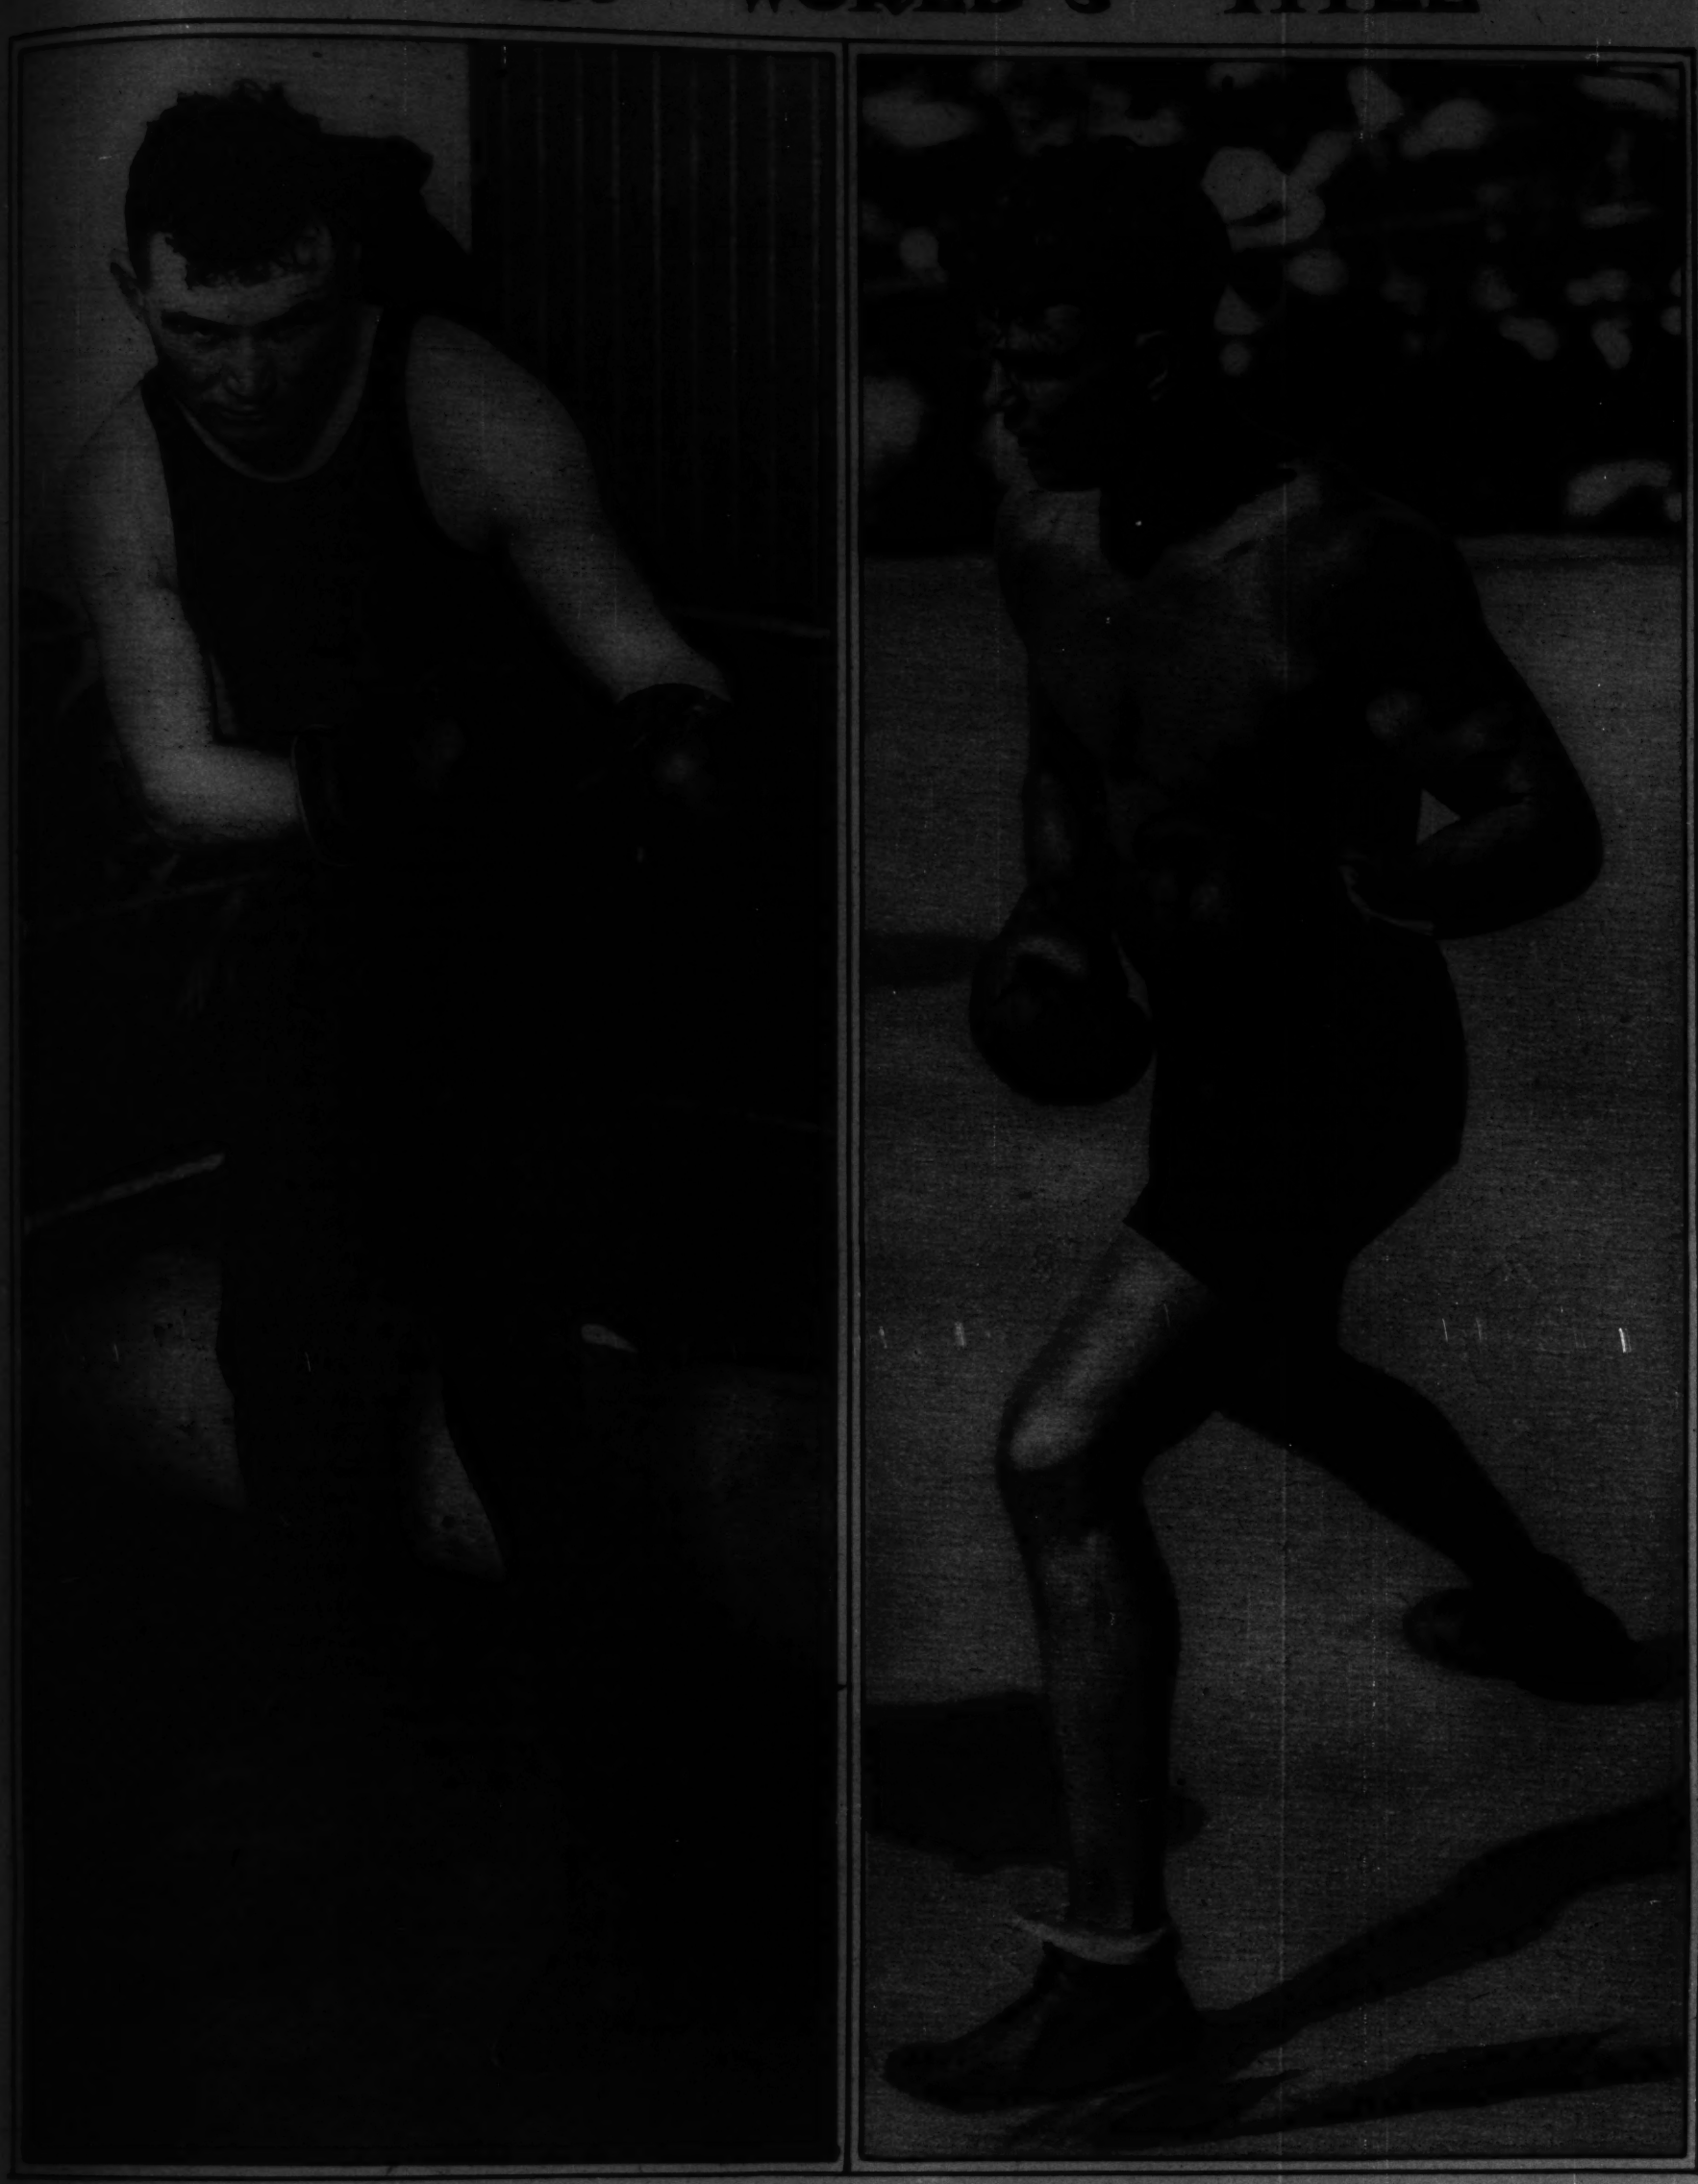
For the WORLD'S TITLE



CHAMPION AND CHALLENGER who will battle for the world's heavyweight boxing crown on Wednesday. The eyes of all the world are turned toward Shelby, Mont., a little oil town of less than 1,000 inhabitants. Shelby will stage this clash of giants. The fight has drawn for the state of Montana more publicity than even a gold rush would have attracted. Tom Gibbons, at the left, must gamble on the size of the "house" for his purse. Jack Dempsey gets a flat guarantee of $300,000 for staking his title in fifteen rounds against the challenger. (TRIBUNE photographs.)

THE GIANT LEVIATHAN'S TOP DECK and Capt. Herbert Hartley, who will command Uncle Sam's greatest liner when it starts in trans-Atlantic service on Wednesday. Note how the huge smokestack and the big life boats dwarf the men in the picture. Against the buildings in the background the mighty ship looks like a Woolworth building set down in the midst of small factories.

This dainty vanishing cream scientifically corrects perspiration odor

Comparatively few people suffer daily from excessive perspiration moisture. But nearly every one is troubled constantly with the disagreeable odor of underarm perspiration, regardless of degree of moisture.

It is to give effective protection against this blight on personal daintiness that Creme Odorono is intended. Only after exhaustive laboratory research has it been brought to scientific perfection by the makers of Odorono.

Creme Odorono, the delightful new vanishing cream deodorant, is entirely different from any other cream or paste deodorant. Its principle of action and composition are altogether new and scientifically correct.

Used every morning, it gives perfect protection for all day. And it vanishes at once from the skin and is non-greasy! Thus you may use it without danger of staining clothing. Just when you need it most—when dressing to go to a dance or other affair where personal daintiness must be irreproachable!

Soft and smooth, Creme Odorono will never harden or dry up. It is very economical, too; a tube lasts, with daily use, a month or six weeks. For every day dependence or for quick, special occasion use to supplement liquid Odorono, you will find Creme Odorono a dependable convenience, which, once tried, you can never do without. So valuable in traveling, too. Ask for it wherever Odorono is sold. Large tube, 25c.

WHERE REDS THREATEN BRITISH RULE

KHYBER PASS, the gateway extending thirty miles from northwest India into the Plain of Jelalabad, in Afghanistan. The way proceeds through lofty cliffs that are almost vertical, narrowing in spots to twenty feet. It is fortified by the British and considered well-nigh impregnable, but an attack from the air might clear the path for an invading enemy. The Moslem world is almost evenly divided under British and Bolshevik rule. Now England is watchful lest the Reds of Russia attempt to crowd through this narrow passage to join forces with the Moslems of India, who are openly rebelling against England. Below is seen a busy motor road through the pass. Far above the camel path winds through the cliffs. (Photograph copyright by Ewing Galloway.)

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

Every Day—Read the Tribune Seven times a week

Antoinette herself! Foe of double chins and wrinkles

MISS Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune's Beauty Editor:—

"About eight years ago I fell heir to my job as Beauty Editor of The Chicago Tribune. It was no small honor to be made successor to the internationally famed beauty, Miss Lillian Russell. . . . I have learned in these eight years, added to what I already had accumulated, that life cannot give you much more in contentment than to be engaged in work you like to do. And I love my job. I have painstakingly built up a 'laboratory of beauty,' and there is hardly a beauty ill to which the flesh is heir but may find a remedy here. . . . The reducing contest I put on with former Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson, when he took a class of women and I one of men, to see which would come off victorious in a month's time, was one of the most thoroughly enjoyable 'stunts' I have participated in in my work. Perhaps because of the loyalty of my squad of men, I came off victorious. . . . Another feature which gave me great pleasure was the taking of a homely little duckling and converting her through a regime of flesh-building, better posture, more graceful carriage, tricks of coiffure and of more becoming dress into a most charming young woman, proving by this specific case a theory in which I firmly believe: That there is no such thing as a homely woman; only those who do not know how to make themselves attractive.

"My aim is to help every woman to know and understand that the great principles of youth and beauty preservation lie not in illusionary magic potions, but in the daily observation of simple, sane and easy to follow rules of health. Too, I aim to have every woman realize that this department of mine is ever ready to serve to the best of my ability, be her beauty ill a discouraging complexion, a figure overburdened or underburdened, tired eyes or tired spirits, crow's feet or double chins, or whatever the worry or grievance between her and happiness!"

The Alluring Enemies

By ARTHUR TUCKERMAN

Desert Madness, Marcot Called It—Like Heady Wine; He Saw It Sweeping Over the Young Soldier and the Beautiful Young Wife of the Old Egyptologist.

FORTESCUE, in khaki field kit and pith helmet, cantered up to the camp at precisely noon, dismounted, tethered his jet Arabian mare, and approached Marcot's tent whistling a shrill London music hall melody.

Marcot, regarding him from his armchair, suffered a sudden, almost unbearable pang at the sight of the wiry, youthful figure. For he visualized, with a stab of remembrance as keen as a knife's thrust, the elder Fortescue, twenty years before; the Fortescue who, at the Beaux Arts, in the dim, remote period of his youth, had been his best, his dearest friend.

The resemblance between father and son, he concluded for perhaps the hundredth time, was marvelous. And in that instant of revelation Professor Henri Marcot, renowned Egyptologist, knew definitely that young Fortescue stood for him as a living reminder, a precious symbol. In the pure formality of his greeting there was, however, no trace of emotion.

"This is indeed a pleasure," he smiled, rising. "Come in, won't you, and get cool?"

"Mind if I light the old pipe?" Fortescue asked, stooping as he passed under the tent flap. He discarded his pith helmet, revealing fair, almost corn colored hair, that offered a sharp contrast to the deep tan of his rounded, wholly amiable, and youthful features.

Marcot laughed. Fortescue, producing his stubby shell briar, inquired the cause of the laugh. Marcot gave a Gallicly expressive shrug of his shoulders, and his kind brown eyes smiled.

"Only your pipe, my boy. Always that pipe. You English! Spread out to the ends of the earth and perfectly contented as long as you possess a pipe, a horse, and a gun."

Fortescue did not trouble to answer. He had, long ago, decided that when Marcot indulged in his philosophical musings, which might lead in any conceivable direction, he did not expect a reply. A bit mad, this black bearded skeleton of a Frenchman, thought young Fortescue, secure in his Harrow and Woolwich education, his twenty-two years of well regulated existence. A bit mad, indeed, like a great many foreigners, but nevertheless an extremely likeable fellow.

"Staying to luncheon, of course, mon ami?"

"Rather!"

Hassan, Marcot's servant, appeared then at the tent flap. He bowed, phrased something to Marcot in guttural Arabic, bowed again, and glided away.

Fortescue, teeth biting into the stem of his pipe, chuckled.

"Polite chap, that Hassan!"

Marcot stroked his beard thoughtfully and gazed after the retreating white robed figure.

"They are all polite if one learns to treat them properly. You will find no difficulty in handling them after you have—" he paused, choosing his words carefully, diplomatically—"after you have discarded a little of your youthful—well, shall we say intolerance?"

He tempered his verdict with a genial smile, but Fortescue frowned. To Marcot it was patent that he resented, mildly, the implied criticism.

"O, I know I lose my temper sometimes with the stupid ones," Fortescue admitted. "I dare say you've heard me cursing them a bit. Can't help it. I get sick of the whole beastly job." He added, petulantly: "Why in heaven's name we need a new military wire all the way to Berber I can't imagine." He paused, puffed at his pipe a while, then said: "The point I'm driving at is that my C. O. has abandoned his camp here. He's gone up river to establish a new base. I've received orders to stay here alone, in charge of a section of twenty workmen, for another six months. Think of it! That'll make a total of nineteen months for me in this blasted spot!"

"I should think," said Marcot, "that you would be able to see the others frequently. There is bound to be need for a certain amount of intercommunication."

Fortescue shook his head.

"All that will probably be done by heliograph message. They'll find it much the most convenient method. But that's beside the point. I have my full instructions and my workers. I'm to be completely independent—and confoundedly lonely into the bargain—for six months more."

MARCOT'S eyes were sympathetic. He took a cigaret from an ornate sandalwood box, lighted it, inhaled deeply.

"Youth's impatience," he mused softly. "For sixteen years I've devoted my time to unfolding the history of a certain Egyptian queen. For the last three years I've lived out here, to be on the scene, so to speak. I'm only about a third way through the task." He laughed, a trifle grimly. "At that rate I would require a dynasty of successors to complete the work. And there are, alas, no young Marcots." He added, after a pause: "Ever think of marrying, Fortescue?"

Fortescue reddened perceptibly. It occurred to Marcot at the moment that he was exceedingly young—a child. He found himself inwardly marveling at the British habit of entrusting world-wide mandates to mere striplings. Yet it worked. Time had proved the system successful. Fortescue interrupted his chain of thought.

"Heavens, no! Not yet." He proceeded to puff steadily at his pipe, in silence, for several minutes. Then, suddenly, his blue eyes grew brightly humorous. "O, by the way, I have a piece of news for you. Rather amusing, but I don't know how you'll take it. That week when I was up at Assuan on my final leave I ran across a London professor of Egyptology at the hotel. He's mad to meet you. Seems he's absolutely crushed on the subject of Nefert-Ari and her reign. His wife's with him. Confoundedly attractive, and much younger than he."

Beautiful, he admitted to himself.

Marcot's expression was a study in sheer boredom.

"You are contemplating some gallant affair to relieve your sense of monotony?"

"O, shut up!" said Fortescue amiably, and reddened again beneath his tan. "Listen to me. I had a chat with this fellow. His name is Appleby—George Appleby. He came up to Assuan from Cairo for the express purpose of meeting you, so that he could expound some new theory of his concerning that empty vault you've just unearthed. I tried to put him off. Told him that you hadn't been near civilization in three years; that your camp was miles and miles south of Shellal. Even that didn't deter him. To make a long story short, he's due out here some time tomorrow with double-fly tents, filters, excavating tools, and an army of niggers. And he's going to pitch camp next to you!"

"Charmed!" Marcot murmured. "Charmed!" From the expression on his lean, pallid features one could not have de-

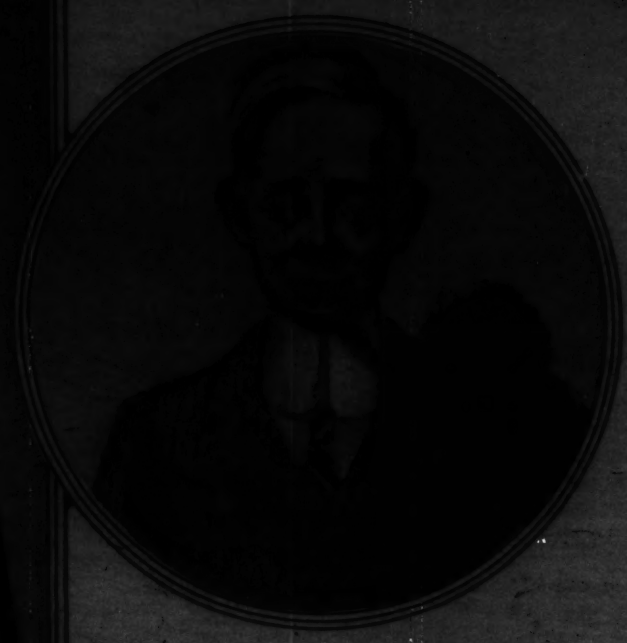
Canned Fame. This is Helene Heartsease, the screen star (see Figmery), who achieved instant fame and a limousine at Hollywood. Helene's dramatic ability is nobody's business, but she filmed well. The insert is one of Helene's admirers, who isn't getting on at all well with her algebra and doesn't give a hang either. Her mind is set on Hollywood, not algebra.

Canned Wealth. [illegible] day, if his luck [illegible] man who decided [illegible] years ago to get [illegible] quick may encou[illegible] market.

Canned Public Welfare. State Senator August P. Wink it was who inaugurated "Better Baby Week." During that week all the babies born were, if possible, to be a little better than what one would expect in the general run of things. And those babies already born were to be freshened up and improved wherever possible. By bunching all this it was then possible to get the baby welfare over with, leaving the following seven days and nights free for "Rubber Week," when every one was expected to purchase something in the rubber goods line.

Canned Music. Why bother to drum for the opera, when music on the radio can be had right in one's room. Mr. Tully is listening to "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" in Swedish, sung by a delegation of school children of Swedish parents in Detroit.



Canned Social Success. Weary is reading a book on etiquette. In a month's time he will be able to move in the very best society (if he can find it) and will know just what to do when the asparagus is passed.

Canned Culture. Beautiful lady on her way to a lecture on "Literary Tendencies from the Reign of Charlemagne up to the Present Era," showing how eager for uplift we all are, provided the uplift requires no mental effort in the getting.

Canned Beauty Culture. Mrs. Strive is trying out a new beauty formula. This one beats the others all hollow, because it guarantees instant beauty in five minutes instead of thirty-five. There is a great deal of hope in Mrs. Strive's makeup. There's always the chance, you know, that if she picks the right beauty clay she will come out a second Mary Pickford.

Canned Architecture. This is the love nest that comes in pieces straight from the factory, all ready to be put together.

The adoption of our refrigerators as standard equipment by the Pullman Co. and all leading American Railroads is evidence of their superiority.

This Shop, being a direct branch operated by the manufacturer, where the public can be served by factory trained people, affords an opportunity to discuss your refrigerating problems intelligently; thereby effecting the greatest efficiency at minimum cost.

While we carry a full stock of the very highest quality refrigerators, we also show a complete line at popular prices as low as $24.50. Our refrigerators may be electrically operated.

Quantity buyers will find our prices attractive. Rear or outside icing refrigerators may be had for immediate delivery.

dered the eighteen olive to his inner feelings.

They moved together toward the adjoining tent, where Hassan had prepared the luncheon table.

Throughout the meal Fortescue spoke little; was in an unusually thoughtful mood. Over coffee he said, suddenly: "You knew my father, didn't you?"

Marcot, his eyes infinitely wistful, replied: "As well as any man ever did, I think."

"Then," said Fortescue, toying nervously with the sugar bowl, "tell me something about—his death. All I know is that year or two after my mother's death he went to the south of France, leaving me in England with a nurse. Completely disappeared. Was never heard of again."

Marcot's face was a graven, colorless image.

"Well?"

Fortescue added, nervously: "I mean—I thought you might have known—more. There's something I haven't fathomed. Now and again I've fancied that people acted—well, queerly, when his name was mentioned."

Only a slight, nervous movement of the lower lip betrayed Marcot's tension, and this Fortescue did not observe. Marcot, leaning back in his chair and gazing to the heavens, said dispassionately:

"Your dear father, as they told you, disappeared. He was, to me, like a beloved brother." Then he added, almost sharply, "but I am not in a position to furnish you with any details."

It was with immense relief that he saw Fortescue had accepted the answer; was lighting a cigaret, preparatory to changing the conversation to another topic.

TEN o'clock the following morning. The thud of cantering hoofs reached Marcot's ears, remotely, as he stood on the roughly hewn steps of his excavation examining, through a magnifying glass, the intricate hieroglyphs on a broken slab of stone. He slipped the glass into his pocket, adjusted his dark green sun spectacles, and glanced eastward over the desert. On the brow of a fantastic hill of basalt, perhaps a hundred yards away, two horses were silhouetted against the bright sky, side by side, the one a pure white, the other a roan. On the white horse was a corpulent little man clad in straw colored pongee. He carried an absurdly large green-lined umbrella, and his balance was insecure. His stirrups, Marcot observed with rising contempt, were dangling ineffectually about his ankles. On the roan horse was a woman; a tall, slender woman, riding side-saddle, a wide brimmed Panama shielding her features from the merciless sun.

Both riders reined up, presently, at the edge of the excavation. Marcot saw the woman's face, and stood, for a brief instant, transfixed, motionless. Then abruptly re-

Marcot was instantly apologetic.

"While you are preparing your own camp you will, I hope, make use of mine." He paused, stroking his beard pensively. "There is another hollow, a shady spot, about three kilometers to the north of here. You would get the benefit of the hill's shadow for at least four hours of the day. It would be an ideal location."

"I don't care about shade," Appleby declared. "I'll pitch camp near you. It will be much more convenient for me."

Marcot permitted himself the faintest perceptible smile.

"Forgive me if I suggest that madame, if she is to live in your camp, will certainly require shade."

The woman rewarded him with a swift, sad grateful glance. Marvelously expressive eyes, Marcot reflected, admiring at the same time her slim, youthful figure. Her lines, poised upon the horse, were a poem, an entasy. About twenty-eight years of age, he concluded. Controlling his thoughts, he said to Appleby:

"You will now kindly follow these men to my camp. I will join you at noon for luncheon. I am, at present, extremely busy."

They rode off obediently in the direction he had indicated, the woman half raising her hand to Marcot in a friendly little gesture. A few minutes later a dozen natives, bearing folded tents and all the varied impedimenta of camp equipment, trudged obediently past the excavation. Marcot, having instructed them to follow the Applebys, turned his attention once more to the slab covered with hieroglyphs. He could not, however, translate with his accustomed ease; he discovered. In his mind remained, sharply, an image of the woman's vivid, discontented mouth.

GEORGE APPLEBY did not, during the weeks that followed, prove to be as great an annoyance as Marcot had at first anticipated. Reporting at the excavation daily at seven, when work began, he accompanied Marcot down the steps to the subterranean vaults, and passed his mornings poking in leisurely fashion about the dimly lighted chambers, examining mural markings and inscriptions with the aid of a tubular electric lamp and magnifying glass. He carried, too, a large volume on Egyptology, a fountain pen, and a notebook. As long as he thus remained, unobtrusive and uninterfering, there would be no need to deny him these small privileges, Marcot decided.

It was Appleby's wife who was the subject of Marcot's more frequent speculation. He rarely saw her. She preferred, it seemed, to remain in the Appleby camp throughout the long, torrid days. One morning she visited the excavation, made the round of the dark chambers, stepping gingerly with diminutive high heeled shoes over the rubble littered floors, her carefully tinted mouth a little more indicative of discontent than ever. Her expression, when Marcot endeavored to explain to her the mural history of Nefert-Ari, the sacred significance of austere deities with wolves' and parrots' heads, was one of polite boredom. Talking to her, he became aware of the utter incongruity of her presence in the vaults; and also—if the alliance was an official one—of the sheer mockery in the fact that she in her vivid actuality was the wife of George Appleby.

Turning his gaze to Appleby, who was wiping his perpetually moist brow and uttering hoarse little exclamations of delight at a well preserved cartouche, Marcot was suddenly struck by the absurd fallibility of the whole marriage system. A perilous adventure, he concluded, and felt himself glowing with inward thankfulness at his own intact bachelorhood. And yet, observing the vivid, almost poignant beauty of her as she moved noiselessly ahead of him, he knew that he was perturbed—as he had not been for many, many years. She brought him somehow a keen realization of the lifelong solitude to which he had deliberately surrendered himself, the years of devotion to a task which, when completed, only a dozen learned men throughout the whole world, perhaps, would appreciate. She evoked, too, haunting memories of that now remote, pleasure seeking civilization which he had utterly renounced. An aura of fragrant, swiftly passing perfume stirred

Left alone with her for several minutes, while George Appleby had gone in search of one of his numerous volumes, he put to her the question which had weighed for long hours upon his mind. "You are," he asked coolly, "the daughter of the celebrated Denise Forrester, are you not?"

"I've never even heard of her," she declared. "Who was she?"

He shrugged his shoulders, ignoring the question.

"You are, nevertheless, of the same dangerous tribe," he asserted.

"Dangerous?" she repeated wonderingly.

"Dangerous, because of your charms."

She, obviously puzzled, turned the conversation to other matters.

He was conscious of an amazing sense of relief when she had completed her tour of the vaults and left him, to ascend gracefully to the sunshine above.

Some time later that morning he asked Appleby, casually: "What does your wife do to amuse herself during these long days at camp?"

Appleby, momentarily lost in admiration of a colorful frieze depicting tribal bowmen marching to war, glanced at him with palpable annoyance at the interruption.

"O—O—Enid? Probably reads or sews, or something. I'm sure I don't know." He added, an instant later. "This afternoon young Fortescue, an engineer subaltern, who's laying a military wire somewhere hereabouts, is taking her out for a ride, I believe."

"Hum!" said Marcot. He took up a hammer; began to tap speculatively at a certain hollow spot in the vault's uneven flooring.

The following morning, at the same hour, he remarked to Appleby:

"By the way, if you happen to see young Fortescue during the day tell him I expect him to dinner tonight when you and your wife come."

"I'll see him all right," Appleby assured him. "He knocks at our camp practically every day now."

Tap-tap-tap, went Marcot's hammer. A rugged piece of the flooring suddenly caved in. The application of the lamp's beam revealed the corner of a deep cavern lined with neat brickwork. Marcot, in spite of his elation at the discovery, continued to speak in an even voice:

"But your camp's fully six miles from his," he said. "Surely a long ride for him to undertake every day at noon?"

Appleby exhibited traces of surprise.

"I thought you knew that he'd moved camp four or five days ago. He said it was getting too hot for him down by the Nile. He's pitched camp barely a mile from us now."

"Highly convenient," Marcot murmured and frowned.

"Eh?" said Appleby, bewildered. Then, irritably: "Mind not talking any more, Marcot? I've lost the whole thread of this inscription."

MARCOT rode to the village at the Nile's edge that afternoon in order to purchase a few provisions. The market place he found dusty and hot, swarming with natives from the Bisharеen villages to the north. He threaded his way slowly between the double line of awninged booths and carts; the aged merchants squatted beside counters laden with scarlet leather slippers, cheap calicos, Sudanese head cloths; the humus man with his pyramidal heaps of colored grain sweetmeats; the sherbet sellers clinking their shallow cups of silver. He attained eventually, hot and fatigued, the gratifying shade of lebbek trees at the Nile's edge, and sat down to rest on a stone bench amidst a pandemonium of braying donkeys, clucking poultry, and screaming Arabs.

An angular, worried looking Sudan official, with the tan of a score of tropic summers upon him, passed by, heading for the Nile ferry. Marcot hailed him:

"Off for Khartoum, Perry?"

The Englishman halted, facing him.

"O, it's you, Marcot. Didn't know you were still here. Yes, thank God. Back to Khartoum for good now."

He sat down on the bench; chatted amiably.

"Do you happen to know young Fortescue up this way? I ran across him yesterday. A fine lad. He seems to be doing well."

He paused, eyeing the sluggish, colorless flow of the river meditatively.

"One realizes," he said soberly, "coming from other parts, that this section south of Shellal is about the worst of the lot. It's a sort of gap between civilizations. I hadn't any idea that the military had handed Fortescue such a rotten job."

"I've been here three years myself," Marcot said grimly.

"Quite so. But then your case is different. You're here on your own free will, aren't you? Young Fortescue's here under military orders. There's many a civilian who'd turn down his job flat."

"He'll get his reward," Marcot said.

"Eventually, of course. Promotion. O, he'll succeed. He's not a drinker—and there are no other local distractions. Purely a question of sticking it out."

He rose, extending his hand.

"Well. Good-by for the present. And, by the way, if you get a chance it would be decent of you to try and cheer the boy up a bit, now and then."

"I'll try," Marcot promised.

Hassan, toiling through the hot hours of the afternoon, had prepared a perfect dinner. When Enid Appleby arrived at Marcot's with her husband and Fortescue and observed the table, with its heavy damask, gleaming silver, and rose bowl full of Nile lotus, she displayed for the first time in Marcot's presence a trace of pleasing enthusiasm. Turning to him, she complimented him gracefully upon the table's appearance, a compliment which he—long isolated from such social amenities—fully appreciated.

As she moved forward to the table Marcot's eyes followed her, followed the supple young figure sheathed in the filmiest of native gowns, a brilliant flower at her belt; admired the proudly held patrician head, with its closely worn jet black hair, the comb of tortoise shell set at an angle that was instinctively graceful. Beautiful, he admitted to himself with a little intake of his breath, but of an exotic, dangerous beauty.

He, suddenly mindful of his duties, seated his guests with the punctiliousness of a Parisian host; took his own place gravely at the head of the table. The sun had not long since set, but night had already enveloped the camp with African suddenness, the sky a rich, pellucid blue-green, thickly powdered with stars. Presently Enid Appleby shivered. Marcot saw Fortescue instantly leave the table, enter a tent, reappear a moment later with a silver weighted Assiut shawl. This he wrapped about her shoulders. It was all done remarkably swiftly—easily. There was, Marcot felt, in the very act a world of mutual understanding and sympathy. No word, though, had passed between them. Marcot turned his attention to George Appleby and saw that he had not even observed the incident. Appleby, profoundly occupied, was drawing on the margin of a folded newspaper a plan of the excavation. His manners, Marcot told himself angrily, were atrocious. He frowned and said suddenly to Fortescue:

"I hear you've moved your camp away from the river, Fortescue."

"Eh?" said Fortescue, and turned darkly red. He had been leaning, half across the table, in the direction of Enid Appleby. His eyes were excessively bright, liquid, shining. He's only a boy, thought Marcot. Only a boy. He felt once more the pangs of remembrance clutching at his heart. Fortescue managed to stammer:

"Yes, it was too beastly hot."

Marcot gazed pensively into the crystal clearness of his wine glass; then looked at Appleby huddled over his slip of newspaper.

"Now if there really is another floor below," Appleby was saying, tapping the paper with his pencil as he slowly enunciated each word. "Now if there really is another floor, as your discovery of this morning would seem to indicate, it will mean many more months of work. In which case I shall most certainly settle down here to be with you."

Marcot glanced at Enid Appleby, and, infinitely relieved, saw that she had not overheard. She had plucked a flower from the table center; was drinking in its beauty. In a like manner Fortescue, leaning over the table, was paying tribute to the woman.

Marcot, at the end of dinner, clapped his hands.

"Hassan. We will take coffee in the large tent. It is too chilly to remain here."

They adjourned to the tent. Hassan glided in with the tall, hammered gold percolator, the set of diminutive rosebud cups in filigree frames, the whole on an Ottoman tray of exquisitely wrought gold.

"You live well here," Appleby said, suddenly folding up his diagram and putting it away in his pocket. "Your dinner was excellent."

Marcot, although his sensitive nature winced at what he considered to be an appalling exhibition of taste on the part of a formal guest, permitted himself to reply.

"I make a certain effort to maintain decent standards of living. Without such a man goes down hill—rapidly enough. But it is sometimes difficult. This is a strange, wild country here. Its spell has been the undoing of many a character. You laugh, but it is true. There is a kind of desert madness that seizes one, a desire—if I can express it in words—to abandon the restraints of a complex civilization, a sense of freedom that pervades the being like—like heady wine. The wide, free spaces may be the cause of it." He waved a long arm toward the desert in a comprehensive gesture. "Or it might be a fragment of an Arab song, or blue moonlight seeping between the lotus columns of a crumbling temple. But the effect can be overcome by any man worth his salt. It is an im-genius, unnecessarily yet instinctively dangerous."

As if suddenly aware that his guests, reduced to a bewildered silence, did not entirely comprehend him, he changed the subject ponderously by rising to pass an elaborate sandalwood box containing Gubbah cigarets. "You will like these, I hope. Maspero of Cairo puts them up for me."

At George Appleby's request, he then attempted to entertain them with a short account of his discoveries, his hopes and ambitions. But they were not good listeners—except Appleby himself. A restive, tensioned spirit seemed to invade the tent, a spirit as restive as the night wind from the desert that caused the blue flame in the pendulous, studded Turkish lantern above them to waver, and to cast grotesquely mobile shadows upon the tent's canvas walls. Twice Marcot detected Enid Appleby yawning delicately under cover of her jet lace fan; twice he saw her gaze, almost yearningly, toward the translucent, blue-green triangle of night beyond the tent flap. Marcot, watching narrowly beneath shaggy eyebrows, observed that Fortescue, too, allowed his gaze to wander frequently in the same direction.

At half past nine his guests departed, Enid Appleby in a chair carried by bearers, the men walking, and accompanied by two of Marcot's servants with lanterns. At ten o'clock Marcot rose from his chair with a little sigh and prepared to retire. His fine forehead, as he reached upward to extinguish the lantern, was marred by a frown of intense displeasure.

SCRAPE—scrape—scrape, went Appleby's chisel. Tap—tap—tap, echoed Marcot's hammer.

An oblong sarcophagus of grayish stone, carved with decorous figures, was revealed in the conical glow of the electric lamp, its beams directed in the hollow beneath the vault's flooring. Appleby emitted little sounds of amazement and pleasure. Marcot, on the other hand, preserved an unruffled and implacable calm.

"This," said Appleby exultingly, "is a great day for you, Marcot. We're on the eve of tremendous discoveries."

Marcot appeared not to hear him. He rose from his knees; went leisurely in search of a tool. Quite suddenly he turned round and said to Appleby:

"How is your wife today? I trust that she did not catch cold last night."

"O, all right," Appleby replied. "She's leaving our camp at noon for a little excursion."

"Where to?" Sharply.

"Young Fortescue's taking her to the native festival at a village about ten miles upriver. They said not to expect them back before sundown."

"Indeed!" said Marcot. He knew to a certainty that the native festival occurred on the 28th of the month. This was only the 15th. Fortescue, having lived over a year on the Nile bank, must surely have been aware of this.

He took up a chisel; scrutinized it; threw it down.

"Excuse me a minute, Appleby," he said quietly. "I'm going over to my camp to get—a new chisel. This thing's blunted."

He bent his tall figure to pass under the vault's low entrance, climbed the rough steps, and stood a moment at the top, blinking in the intense glare of midday. He glanced at his watch. It lacked but twenty minutes of noon. He covered the grilling kilometer to his camp in a few minutes, entered his tent, and commenced a hurried, impatient search for his field glasses; at last found them.

The desert, through the glasses, was a shimmering, colorless haze of heat. He searched its rugged expanse; presently picked up the narrow trail leading to the Applebys' camp. He discovered, with unexpected ease, Fortescue cantering along the trail; beside him a saddled horse, unmounted. A few yards behind Fortescue a native, also mounted, led a pack horse heavily equipped, as if for a journey of several days.

For perhaps a minute, two minutes, Marcot stood there motionless, frozen. Then he turned and entered his tent, his expression that of a world weary, disappointed man; a man grown suddenly and eternally old. He sat down, wiped his heated forehead.

He, who had always considered profanity the mark of a weak man, swore aloud in his wrath. Then, all at once stirred to action, he strode across his tent, picked up a cheap oval mirror from its hook on the tent's woodwork, and dashed one look at his shine.

FORTESCUE came to Marcot's tent alone, at sunset. Marcot, offering cigarets and a mandarin aperitif in two glasses, conversed amiably about nothing in particular. Fortescue, he saw immediately, was exceedingly nervous. Marcot noted the tattoo play of his fingers on the arm of his chair, and said to himself, "He's only a boy—only a boy. As his father was."

Presently he remarked genially:

"Did you attend that festival? Appleby said something about your going there."

"No," said Fortescue shortly. "I didn't. Decided it was—too far."

After a considerable silence he drew a deep breath and said in a tentative manner:

"Marcot, remember my speaking to you t'other day about heliographing in the desert?"

"Yes?"

Fortescue coughed; studied his boots broodingly. Marcot could see the flush of his neck reddening at the collar line.

"Fact is," said Fortescue, averting his gaze from Marcot, "fact is, a dashed queer thing happened this morning. Thought I'd consult you about it. I was down at the hollow, near the Applebys' camp, to be precise." Marcot marveled at the superbly assumed casualness of the words. "It was about noon. I was looking southward when all at once somebody began heliographing. They did it damned well, too. Every dot and dash as clear as possible."

"Your military friends, of course," Marcot suggested.

"No. That's the curious part of it. I've since learned that they're stationed much too far away to heliograph me. And, besides, this message seemed to come from the south——" He hesitated. "From this direction."

"And what," inquired Marcot, "did this mysterious message say?"

Fortescue laughed, but the laugh was a valiant effort, Marcot knew.

"Queer lot of sentiment, as far as I could make out. Something about an officer's duty, and his country being his first and last love. It rather unnerved me. Sort of leaped out of the sky at me, so to speak."

He rose to leave, whistling noisily.

"Well. So long, Marcot. Absurd business, wasn't it?"

"Wholly absurd," Marcot agreed.

The clatter of hoofs faded presently into distance. Marcot entered his tent. He pulled out from beneath his cot a battered trunk, opened it, removed therefrom a long leather scrap book. He turned the pages slowly, until he came upon a Paris newspaper clipping of the year 1899, yellow and faded with age:

". . . At the inquest upon Hugh Fortescue, an English architect temporarily residing in Paris, who committed suicide while returning from a trip to Monte Carlo last Tuesday, evidence was given by Henri Marcot, a young student and a friend of the deceased. It appears that the unfortunate man had recently become infatuated with a well known artiste at the Scala. The lady had apparently spurned his attentions owing to his limited finances, and it is said that at her suggestion he went to Monte Carlo to play, in the hope of gaining a sudden fortune. He lost all he possessed. Marcot also stated that Fortescue was a widower, and had a child by a former marriage living in England."

Hassan entered the tent; proceeded to light the studded Turkish lantern.

"Dinner is served, my master."

"I thought," said Marcot, "that Mr. and Mrs. Appleby were to be here for dinner!"

Hassan grinned, his teeth a visible white line in the dusk of the tent.

"Mrs. Appleby has sent a servant to inform that she is leaving for Cairo. The lady says she has become tired of living in the desert. Mr. Appleby will return here in a few days, after having escorted his lady as far as the railway at Shellal."

"Indeed?" said Marcot. "Indeed?"

Hassan crossed the tent and began to straighten with some deliberation the cheap little oval mirror which was hanging slightly askew upon the tent's framework.

"Such people," Marcot mused aloud, "are best north of Shellal."

"I think the same, my wise master."

The Arab was, Marcot observed with a curious sensation, still smiling, yet the quality of the smile was inscrutable.

Impulsively he tore the clipping from the album, held it up to the lantern's blue flame until it had curled to a black crisp.

Mrs. PARAMOR by Louis Joseph Vance

Swung about to look into the face of the man who had been her husband.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Previous Pen: Jealous Jill.

THAT glacial impudence was rendered more impenetrable by his chosen mode of dress: Perley's morning coat clothed him like a steel cuirass, his polished hair and shoes had all the luster of burnished metal, his gray spiral trousers boasted knife-edge creases; his gardenia and shirt spate alone confessed a becoming flippancy. "How delightfully jolly to see you again, Bob—and looking lovelier than ever." The bow he executed over her hand, the polished tenth of lips he gave it were alike impeccable. "Hello, Hal! will you never grow up?" he contributed in passing to Mrs. Paramor. Even more impressive was the delicate salute her hand received. "Yes sir," he reminded her, "I'm faithful to my own interests: I win our wager."

"I suspected all along," she retorted, "you were a man who could be faithful—to his own interests."

"A man as much married as I am has got to be faithful to something." Perley bowed over the hand of the secretary in its turn. "I know this is the most cutting of remisions for you, Miss Dreerp; but you must try to brace up and not let the world see how profoundly it affects you." But she foiled his purpose with her hand by giving his a brusque shake and dropping it forthwith. "You see, Hal," Perley said, turning back to shake hands with his host as coolly as if the tension in the general temper had quite escaped his notice. "Mrs. Paramor and I had a bit of a bet on. Didn't she tell you? Something made her doubt the stability of my affections."

"Woman's infernal cunning," Annison surmised, grinning, while his wife pulled herself together in time to add: "Whatever could it have been?"

"She'd heard too much talk about the habitual inconstancy of shipboard infatuation. So I wagered her forty-eight hours wouldn't pass from the time we docked before I called."

"Hope you won something handsome," Hal alleged; "God knows you've earned it."

"Just my luck"—Perley gave a spendthrift shrug—"only a dinner."

"But a dinner," Mrs. Paramor stipulated, "at which I'm to have the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Rex."

"O!" Beth Annison said in a breath. "Then you didn't——?"

"Unfortunately, no. Mrs. Rex was ill all the way over."

"Jill's such a rotten sailor," her husband hastily elucidated. "In fact, I haven't had such a successful voyage since the Lord knows when. With Jill below all the while, my style recovered from what I was beginning to fear was permanent paralysis. I became positively spry once more."

"Positively disgraceful," Mrs. Paramor amended. "You made me the talk of the ship."

"My dear lady! the mad emotions you inspire would make any woman the talk of any ship."

"Only one thing worked for your salvation," Mrs. Paramor retorted. "I was amused."

"My dear!"—the eyes that Beth Annison rolled up to heaven were invisible to Perley—"you must have been."

"Many thanks;" Perley bowed. "Now one feels one has earned one's dinner as well as won it. By the bye: when does one get it?"

"Tonight, if you like," Mrs. Annison offered before Mrs. Paramor could speak. "That is, if you'll take one of my dinners in settlement of Nelly's obligation," she pursued, her eyes wickedly agleam. "And, of course, if you're sure Jill has nothing else on. . . . Just a small dinner party, quite informal—a few old friends to meet the famous Mrs. Paramor. Music afterwards, and, perhaps, a little bridge."

"Enchanting!" Perley voted. "And so kind of you."

"Not a bit," Beth Annison insisted, possibly in consequence of a tweak of conscience; "if you must know, shamelessly selfish. I want to be amused, too." Avoiding his eyes, which too patently betrayed mystification excited by her somewhat staccato hilarity, she recollected herself, pursued more sedately: "But you're certain, Perley, it isn't too late to call up Jill?"

"Don't have to," Perley assured her, and seemed charmed to be able to do so. "She'll be along presently."

"Jill!"

The name exploded itself, in effect, from a self-control too cruelly sapped by the strain of keeping up a decent countenance. And immediately Beth had an aghast look, then a guilty one.

"Hope you don't mind; I asked her to pick me up here on her way home. I say!" Perley complained. "I seem to be somehow out of this. What's up? Is it a joke of some sort I'm entertaining unawares?"

"I'm not sure," Beth's stifled voice temporized. She snatched desperately at the diversion provided by the reappearance of the manservant. "What is it, Andrews?"

"A gentleman to see Mr. Annison, ma'am." Andrews presented a salver; Annison, with a frown, took up the card. Savoir faire was proof alow against any shock; only his eyebrows climbed a little. "Wait a minute," he threw aside to the man. "Wonder if you'd mind, Beth, you and Nelly, taking Perley away and choking him with tea. I've got a chap here calling unexpectedly on an important matter of business."

"Promise not to let him keep you," his wife stipulated. "I've ordered scones—buttered—'specially for you."

THE PRINCIPALS IN THE STORY

MRS. PENDLETON WAYNE, young and beautiful, an author engrossed in her work, but still fondly in love with her husband,

PENDLETON WAYNE, successful lawyer of forty. He is bored with his wife, Nelly, and enamored of

JULIET WETHERELL ("Jill"), who is characterized as a girl seeking a wealthy marriage by

PERLEY REX, a society philanderer. Rex, resting in his club, unexpectedly comes upon an old friend,

PETER GRANVILLE, who has been adventuring in China and other lands. Granny is an old admirer of Mrs. Wayne.

THE HOLBROOK ANNISONS, Beth and Hal, a shamelessly old fashioned couple, still in love with each other and happy, although married.

On their wedding anniversary Wayne takes Nelly to the Tanglewood Country club for dinner. There Jill draws from Wayne a promise that he will divorce Nelly and marry her. Nelly witnesses their embrace. She pleads with Jill to leave Pen to her, but Jill answers: "A woman who can't hold her husband doesn't deserve to have him." Then Rex takes Jill by storm and she marries him, jilting Wayne. Two years later Rex and Jill start home from France with their year old boy. Through Arnold Pusey, a woman's dressmaker, Rex meets Mrs. Paramor, a famous and beautiful, but mysterious author. Rex is Mrs. Paramor's first visitor at the Annisons' home in New York.

For every muscular ache

You get quick relief with this simple treatment. It rouses the natural bodily forces to drive out the cause of pain.

A stiff neck, an attack of rheumatism, a bad case of lame muscles—such common ailments, and yet, when they happen to you, how hard to bear!

What wouldn't you give for an unfailing "first aid" to meet these emergencies—something you could have always on hand, ready in the medicine closet!

In about one out of every three homes in the United States you will find Sloan's Liniment. For nearly fifty years it has given just the help needed to so many millions that today it is easily the most popular household remedy in America—as widely known, as generally used as the telephone.

No matter where the pain is, no matter how deep down in joints and muscles, it can be reached if the natural curative powers inside the body are only roused.

When you use Sloan's, it stimulates the nerves on the skin. They arouse the brain, which in turn causes the blood vessels to expand throughout the painful area, under the place where the liniment has been applied. Rich new blood rushes in.

This new blood, coming freshly purified from heart and lungs, with all its marvelous germ-destroying, up-building powers, brings to sick, pain-ridden tissues just what they need to heal them.

This is the scientifically correct way to relieve pain. It doesn't just deaden the nerves. It gives your own natural bodily defenses the aid they need to drive out the cause of pain. It rouses and reinforces all the natural curative powers of your own body.

Don't wait until you are in actual need. Get a bottle of Sloan's this very day, and have it on hand—35c at all druggists.

Just apply it—no rubbing is necessary. Immediately you will feel a gentle warmth—then a pleasant tingling of the skin—then, almost magically, relief from pain. There is no burning, no blistering—only quick, lasting relief.

Sloan's Liniment

kills pain!

"Better count me out, all the same. Okey my age can't hope to cope with all the social poisons, you know. It's come to be a choice between starch and alcohol for me—and I've pledged to cocktails."

"Then come along, Perley." Beth moved toward the door that communicated directly with her drawing-room, but, on reconsideration, paused. "Be nice, Perley," she begged; "run on ahead with Miss Dracup while I have a word with Nelly behind your back."

"There is something up," Perley declared. "Not that I mind, if you'll promise to paint my character your blackest."

"Are you daring me to tell Nelly the truth about you?"

"Anything to get the woman interested in me!"

"O—get along with you!"

But Annison didn't share the acute relish of the fantastic which had infused so much impish vivacity into the temper of his wife. As Perley disappeared, following the equally resigned Miss Dracup into the dropping room, the little man squared off at Beth in a fit of nerves.

"Make it snappy, won't you?" he irritably pleaded. "I don't like to keep this chap waiting."

"Do shut up, Hal, another minute won't hurt him. My dear!" Beth appealed to Nelly, all a-thrill with glee—"is it possible Perley doesn't realise——?"

"I'm sure he doesn't," Nelly said, herself not unaffected. "How should he know I resumed my maiden name after divorcing Pen?"

"But didn't you meet him, that night at Tanglewood?" Nelly shook her head. "But he must have seen you there!"

"Only for a moment, and then by candlelight. I know he doesn't remember me by my looks—I wormed that out of him aboard the Illyria."

"It would have been even more wonderful." Annison felt called upon to advise Nelly, in spite of his anxiety to be rid of her presence, "if Perley had recognised you as you are today."

"That's very sweet, Hal," Nelly told him with a light laugh and shrug of gratified vanity. "It's nice to know you think I've . . . well! improved."

"But, Perley," Beth persisted—"is he, as he seems—do you think?—épris?" Nelly's nod and smile were quick with mischief; and her hostess chimed to them with a cry of malicious delight: "Heavens! how droll. But do come before Hal qualifies for the psychopathic ward."

"Maybe you're right," Annison gloomily conceded, "maybe the old intellect is beginning to totter on its pins. Is it any wonder, considering the strain it's been under all these years, living with a sense of humor as fiendish as yours? Let me tell you two women, you're all wrong, framing poor old Perley the way you are. Keep on and you'll be sorry."

"O, well! if you're going to start moralising——! Come, Nelly, before he gets going in good earnest."

ANNISON sighed stertorously as they turned to go, and with a look that told of easing nerve tension signed to the servant, who thereupon doubled out into the hallway, while his master trotted up to the other door to shut it. The next instant he stood rooted in consternation; for Nelly, on the point of preceding Beth from the room, changed her mind without fair warning. "O!" she cried—"my roses"—and drew back, making way for Beth, then crossed in haste to the desk. At this Annison's temper congealed in fatalism. He offered heaven a sign of broken and submissive spirit and settled himself to endure the inevitable.

Andrews re-entered, punctiliously announced "Mr. Wayne," and vanished again as soon as the caller had followed him across the threshold.

Nelly with her armful of roses swung about to look into the face of the man who had been her husband.

He had greatly changed, the years had worked in Wayne a revolution as in Nelly, hardly less radical, hardly less salutary and becoming. Or so it must have seemed in her eyes who stood there, stricken breathless and all but witless by a rencontre for which nothing had at all prepared her.

Pen had lost a deal of weight, and somehow with the thinning of his face that undertone of sleek complacence had disappeared which of old had been its one real blemish. If its lines today were deeper graven, its contours were more salient, its planes more firm; if he was visibly older in the flesh he had grown younger in the spirit, or his head lifted look behind him, the look of one who has gone down into and served his time decreed in that hell which theology has assigned to the new world. If his eyes for an instant were dazed, like hers, with shock, in another they were steady again and clear, they didn't flinch though their marvelling darkened them like the shadow of a cloud.

And no wonder. The draped gown of glistening brocade, copper on a silken ground the color of green gold, Lauvin with an eye as just as Perley's and as jealous had fashioned sweetly to her body's comeliness. Her shining purity of skin, the soft fur brought out that richly edged the square cut neck and flowing sleeves of crepe de chine. The roses were like live embers cradled to her bosom. Her hair that held a luster such as it had not since the first years of her married life, her dilate eyes, barely parted lips, color that swiftly ebbed and flowed again, her lightly startled poise, graceful as the pause in apprehensiveness of a young animal: all these combined with the quiet elegance of her costume to render here an arresting figure to the eyes of any man, much more to eyes that remembered it in a guise of shabby grooming, unassertive, and ever wistful.

One of Wayne's hands lifted in a gesture of uncertain appeal. And, as if she had only been waiting for that, Nelly's head slowly described a half bow that accorded his presence precisely the degree of recognition she would have given that of any stranger chance-met beneath that roof. Then, without haste but equally without hesitation, she went her way.

HAL ANNISON dogged her to the drawing room door and when she had passed through it shut it with a tempered slam that spelled exasperation.

"Sorry, Pen," he protested, dabbing a handkerchief over his forehead; "tried to spare you; did everything I could to get her out of the way before I told Andrews to show you in——"

As if he hadn't been listening Pen interrupted: "Was that?" he blankly demanded; "was that——?"

With an appreciative, not unfriendly grin Annison announced before Pen's stumbling tongue could coherently frame his query: "That was Nell, m'lad."

"But—good God!—what has she done?"

"Why, since you ask for it, it's my diagnosis that Nell's taken a tumble to herself."

"Tumble!" Pen stupidly parroted.

Annison, with a grunt sympathetic and paternal, took Pen's arm and guided him to a chair. "There, old boy; sit down and whip your wits together. Tumble's the word. Nell was all right, contented and thoughtless enough, till you taught her honor and faith and a good intent were damn poor armor for a knock-down-and-drag-out like this life of ours. So she used the brains God gave her to improve the body she owes to the same benevolent Power, and clothed herself with Beauty like a coat-of-mail." A hand fell lightly on the shoulder of the seated man. "And is now prepared to meet all comers, one down, t'other come on—and may the best man win!"

Annison gave Pen's shoulder a parting pat and strutted over to the desk, against which he rested half-sitting, hands in trouser pockets, covering his friend with his homely, good-hearted smile.

As if to himself Pen pronounced: "Incredible!"

"But true. Surprising—ain't it?—how every so often Nature shows us up. Wise old girl, Nature, the most seasoned cynic of us all—what?"

Pen trained on his lecturer eyes dull with introspection. "What's that?"

"Talking about Nature, old soul—expatiating on the wicked, ironical way she has of giving our pet delusions the laugh—when, for instance, she shows us some clinging vine proving its ability to stand alone after its sturdy oak has pulled up roots and moved on to another stand—vamped, you might say, by other frail and pretty tendrils whose caresses mean, in the upshot, just what the caresses of the first did."

"Well?" Pen prompted with a long-suffering air.

"A hankering to be comfortably supported," Annison rounded out the figure with obvious pleasure.

Pen dropped a heavy hand upon his knee, hung his head again, sighed: "What a fool I was! what a purblind fool!"

"Can't get me to wrangle with you over statements of pure fact." Annison straightened up and strolled to a sideboard. "How about a little drink to help put the grilling?"

"No, thanks." In hanging out his horns out: "O, I know well enough what you all think of me!"

"Be blowed if I believe you do."

"O, yes, I do." A thick grunt of mirth belittlement of Pen's scorn. "Do you suppose I can read my rating with me I thought my friends?"

"Pen . . ." Annison moved back, stood over him, glass in hand. "Has it ever occurred to you that what you're going through these last few years is no experience common to mankind? Yes, and womankind, too, for the matter of that. Or did pride lead you to believe God had singled you out for special punishment because you were strangely different to your fellows? It comes to every man to find himself at forty years, unless he's lucky enough to die young."

"O, yes?" Pen wore an expression of thankful attention that wasn't meant to deceive. "You're as full of information as an almanac, aren't you?"

"I'm about as frequently consulted," Annison defensively declared; "so it's only in nature if I take advantage of a gaudy chance like this to blow off all I know." He put aside an empty glass and went back to his favorite perch on the club-fender, squaring there with the general aspect of some stout heathen idol, too well fed and prosperous but for all that compact with gracious wisdom. "Poor old soul!" he uttered; "you've got to give up something confoundedly precious, Pen—the luxury of pitying yourself for an outcast from the hearts of your friends. Why, there ain't one of us but hasn't taught the truth of that old saw about the devil at noon."

"Now what are you getting at?"

"That old saying about the devil being always busiest in the heat of the day; meaning, where you and I stood, not so long ago, midway between the sunrise and the night." The satiric shade faded from that sagacious countenance. "There's a sort of madness takes hold of men when they find themselves at that stage, Pen, with the sun still hot overhead but their feet on the downward slope; nothing to look forward to but the Trap upon the Pit. Precious few prove strong enough to hold out in the temptation that comes to them then."

"What temptation?" Pen, in a stern demanded.

"To have one last fling at life, make one last effort to recapture that old forfeited rapture—before night shuts down. Don't I know!"

"You, Hal? You!"

"Yes"—Annison like a stunted Buddha nodded—"and all of us."

"But you and Beth, the sanest and happiest married folk I've ever known——!"

"Yes, and I ain't excepting Beth, either. O! she stood by me when I was going through it; so when her turn came I couldn't do less by her. And I tell you what, Pen, it wasn't pretty to watch the old girl day by day sickening of the thought that she'd got the rest of her life to live out with the likes of me, this funny, ugly little fat man she'd blundered into marrying because she couldn't foresee the future, when the first must weary and the spirit flag, or know, till life had taught it to her, the romance that makes people marry is something as evanescent as dew upon the rose. She got over it in time, of course: everybody does; but . . ."

The little man had a rest in sober retrospection, then remembered his guest and roused: "Pen! nobody that loves you really blames you—I'll go bail, not even Nelly."

"I'd give ten years of my life," Pen disconsolately said, "if I could believe you."

"Take my word for it, old boy—put it to the test."

"Ah!"—Pen jumped up and caught a fist in a palm with a sound like a slap—"if only I had the courage!"

"That's what you're here for, ain't it?" Shrewdness more than ever elfin touched its grin with which Annison peered up. "That's what you wanted to see me about, wasn't it—to ask me to intervene with Nelly."

"Not exactly." Pacing to and fro, Pen spoke without looking at his friend. "I saw her name in the papers as arriving by the Illyria the other day; guessed you'd know where she was stopping——"

"Right here with us."

"And wondered whether you'd advise me to try to see her."

Her handsome features overcast with puzzlement, Beth Annison made precipitate entrance from the hallway and fell upon her caller in a flutter of forced gayety—"Why, Jill Rex—of all things!—whatever has come over you?"—delicately pecked her cheeks and with even greater delicacy overlooked her failure to evoke a response equally cordial. "My dear! to steal in here like a conspirator in a play and send Andrews to whisper that 'a lady' wished to see me alone in the library!"

"I had to, Mrs. Annison." Jill's voice, usually so well modulated, had the false ring of flawed bell metal today, and the faith she was accustomed to repose in rouge was now seen to be misplaced. "I hope you don't think it quite too silly of me, I"—gloved fingers sought and tightened on the back of a chair—"I had to. I stupidly let Perley wheedle me into promising to meet him here this afternoon——"

"I know." Beth cut in with overstressed sprightliness—"Perley told us. He's in the drawing room now, having a cup of tea. Why on earth didn't you come right in?"

"Is that . . ." Jill found it necessary to moisten her lips before she proceeded. "Is Mrs. Paramor in there with him——?"

"Of course—and Hal and Miss Dracup, her secretary. They're stopping with us, you know."

"I didn't know; that is, I wasn't sure, but I suspected."

The word was caught up with a hilarity that libeled it of all expressions the most extravagantly absurd: "'Suspected'! But, my dear——!"

"When Perley insisted on my calling for him here," the young woman coldly cut in, "I knew very well he counted on finding her with you."

"Why not?" Beth was somewhat less successful in signifying inability to take Jill's attitude seriously. "I haven't any doubt she told him——"

"No more have I."

"Why shouldn't she? But"—Beth hazarded a move of invitation to the drawing room—"do come and meet her."

"If you don't mind, I'd much rather not."

That persistently unsmiling, almost hostile, demeanor began to have its designed effect; the most persevering levity couldn't carry on forever without encouragement; in Beth it now flagged quite unaffectedly. A subdued and seemingly apprehensive gaze sought in Jill's a clew that must have proved elusive, for a brief shake of Beth's head vividly portrayed bewilderment. "Well! of course. . . ."

"But naturally, I can't expect you to understand."

The specious impulsiveness of that concession was wasted, underlying petulance echoed too clearly in it. Beth's head had an indulgent wag. "No, Jill, dear, I'm afraid you can't—unless you're willing to speak more plainly."

"I may as well tell you, I suppose"—Jill's lip curled—"you'll hear all about it from other people soon enough if I don't. Perley made a hopeless show of himself—not to say a fool of me—over Mrs. Paramor, coming home from France. I really don't feel that I care to meet her now."

"Ah!" Misgivings allayed gave that exclamation an accent so peculiar that even a woman distracted by just indignation must have been struck by it, though with her next words Beth manufactured a saving diversion: "But surely you exaggerate."

"I do not." A ladylike snort scouted the notion. "Everybody on board was laughing at Perley; he couldn't have advertised his infatuation better if he'd hired a band. Even the stewardesses—I used to hear them gossiping with Junior's nurse. And, anyway," the aggrieved wife wound up on a flooring note, "I should have known there was somebody."

"Really, Jill? How?"

"Anybody would that knew anything about men." Only a throwback to the Jill of younger years could have accounted for the crudely cynical spirit that enlarged: "They don't get affectionate all at once unless their consciences are troubling them."

But Beth's sense of humor seemed to be out of tune with Jill's, the defiant laugh the latter gave drew not so much as a smile by way of response. On the other hand, as if glad of the excuse provided by a break of merriment in the drawing room, Beth turned her attention to that quarter, and it was with face averted that she said, more as a statement of fact than as a question, "Then you didn't meet Mrs. Paramor."

Presently the thing was in her hand

"I hadn't any chance, the weather was so dreadful all the way across I never once left my stateroom. But I can tell you the experience taught me one thing: the next man I promise to marry will have to produce a doctor's certificate that he's got chronic hydrophobia." And then as if sensitive to the perfunctory curving of Beth's lips, the girl pursued with color mounting: "I did get one good look at her on the deck, while we were waiting for our luggage to be examined. But I don't think she saw me."

Beth's manner once again was touched by more than a hint of wariness. "She's very pretty," she almost timidly ventured—"don't you think?"

"Pretty enough, I daresay . . ." The contest with her spite could hardly have ended otherwise in that nature which life had barely begun to discipline; yet Jill's cheeks were darkly stained as she blurted: "In that coarse way men seem to find attractive."

Hours of study couldn't have hit on anything better calculated to inflame a loyal heart, drug a qualmish conscience, and confirm Beth in her wrong-headed way. With the blandest of sweet false faces she casually inquired: "You hadn't ever seen her before?"

"Never," Jill heatedly protested; "and I don't care if I never lay eyes on her again, either. That's why I had to see you alone and explain."

"But—O, dear!" Beth interposed a plaintive lamentation—"this is most unfortunate. I really can't think what to do, it's so awkward."

"What is?" Jill prompted with a stare so truculent one would have said she foresaw and discounted the reply.

"Why! I've already asked Perley to bring you here tonight to a little dinner party we're giving in honor of Mrs. Paramor."

"And he accepted like a shot, of course!"

"I'm afraid he did."

"And without waiting to consult me!"

"He said just now he knew you had no other engagement."

"O!" In undisguised exasperation the girl stormed: "O, how dared he!"

AND then, such is the marvelous fund of resource which she must develop and command who means successfully to breast those tides of selfish purpose, confused but powerful and altogether pitiless, that constitute that sea of social life which man, in a humor unconsciously sardonic, terms civilized—instantly and without confession of effort, with no more warning than a flying touch of Beth's fingers on her hand and a look swiftly veiled but more eloquent than the admonition that hung unuttered on breathless lips, Jill gave an amazing demonstration of the art of self-control, turning to salute her enemy with steady eyes in a countenance unclouded.

"O! are you engaged, Beth? I didn't know . . ." Posed by the discovery that the room was deserted, Nelly Paramor held up a few paces in from the drawing room doorway. "Or may I come in? . . . Only for a moment: I want my own cigarets—Hal's are poisonous and Perley Rex's, if possible, are worse."

"Come in, of course, dear." Beth alone seemed in any measure embarrassed: her two guests were measuring each other with the bright insouciance of duellists matched for their lives. "I know you want to meet Mrs. Rex."

"O, yes, indeed!" Nelly offered a hand, Jill's unhesitatingly went out to meet it; they touched and fell apart with a contact as brief, as cool and suave as that of foils feeling out each the other's strength. "It is Mrs. Rex! I was sure, at the first glance I should have known you anywhere."

"O, yes!" Though Beth might be holding her breath, Jill couldn't know it, preoccupied as she was. Now her color was no more sullen, but high and clear, and those eyes whose violet hue was usually so soft had something of the deadly shimmer of blued steel. "Really, I can't think how."

If this were a challenge it was a direct one, in no way ambiguous—a thrust rather than a feint or parry. As yet no disconcerting memories had been evoked by the timber of Nelly's voice or Jill's point-blank investigation of her looks; of, if any had, dissimulation as this young woman practiced it was an art completely flawless, and her effrontery consummate. Beth breathed again.

"From your husband's description," Mrs. Paramor with pleasant self-possession elucidated. "You must know, Mrs. Rex, he's very proud of you."

"O!"—Jill's shoulders sketched her immunity to flattery from such a source—"that's only his system; Perley thinks it pays to rave about one woman to another."

"I don't believe you really think him so calculating."

"You don't know him—he's only normal when he's raving about some woman."

"I see," Nelly construed, purposefully whimsical—"it's his permanent rave."

"Precisely!" as Jill pronounced it it had a waspish snap. And Beth, gratefully taking her cue from a clock that chimed just then, intervened with a haste that may very well have been inspired by fear of an imminent rupture of diplomatic relations. "But my dear! if you're coming to dinner—gracious! who would have dreamed it was so late?—you've got barely time to snatch a cup of tea and run."

Her gratitude, too, should have gone out to Perley, who chose at this juncture to stroll in, scowling blackly.

"See here! do you call it manners to abandon Hal and me to the mercies of the austere Dracup? Thought it was the custom of the country to wait till people croaked before committing them to cold storage." He honored the presence of his wife with lifting eyebrows. "Ah! there you are, eh, Jill? Wondering if you were going to let me down. I say: Hal and Beth want us for dinner tonight, and I've told 'em nothing I know of stands in the way of our coming."

"I'm sure you have."

"You will come, won't you, Mrs. Rex?"

"O, Mrs. Paramor!"—Jill's lips wore their most witching smile, her tone dripped honey, her gaze played with Nelly's like a flickering blade—"I can't think of any inducement that would keep me away."

THE FIRST MOVIE, which won a $25,000 bet. Back in 1877 Senator Leland Stanford of California believed a trotting horse had all four feet off the ground at some time in his stride. James R. Keene, the noted turfman, thought otherwise. They bet the $25,000 on their opinions. John D. Isaacs, an engineer, and a San Francisco photographer, Edward Muybridge, rigged up a battery of twenty-four cameras to be exposed by electric contact when the sulky's weight hit twenty-four buttons on the track. This picture was the result, the famous trotting stallion Electioneer being chosen for the test. The cameras won the bet for Senator Stanford, but for years artists claimed the picture was a fake.

No More Gray Hair or Dandruff

No longer is it necessary to use dyes to restore the original color to the hair

THOUSANDS of men and women have restored the original color of their hair NATURALLY with a genuine tonic which feeds and nourishes the hair, restores its luster and life, promotes its growth, cleanses the scalp and banishes dandruff.

Because of universal dissatisfaction with hair dyes an American chemist sought to develop a genuine tonic which would restore the original color of the hair by reproducing Nature's process and WHICH SHOULD NOT BE A DYE. After thirty years of patient experimentation he successfully produced a tonic which restored the color to all hair, whether it be black, brown or blond, by feeding and nourishing it with the coloring elements the body had ceased to furnish. He aptly named this tonic NOURISHINE.

NOURISHINE is wonderfully beneficial—so much so that many who do not have gray hair use it regularly to keep the hair healthy and the scalp clean and free from dandruff. NOURISHINE CANNOT cause the hair to become brittle, deaden or split. On the contrary, it revitalizes the hair. It restores the original color evenly, naturally — no streaks. Does not stain scalp or hands. NOURISHINE is not applied like a dye, does not operate like a dye—BECAUSE it is NOT A DYE. It is pleasant to use and can be applied by anyone at home. One bottle is usually effective. The one liquid restores for all colors, whether black, brown or blond.

If NOURISHINE did nothing else but remove dandruff it would remain a remarkable testimonial to scientific accomplishment. We have many cases where one-half of a bottle, used, has banished dandruff. DYNAMITING A GIGANTIC ICEBERG which imperiled the great liners of the North Atlantic, driving many out of their course. The men are from the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Tampa. They are planting a tremendous TNT mine at the berg. A few moments later the terrific bomb blew the floating mountain into millions of pieces.

What the outdoor life of girls to is teaching all women

Why their skin

does not coarsen or lose its freshness in spite of the way they treat it

When girls started on their headlong career of swimming, golfing, riding and motoring, they were warned they would eternally ruin their complexions.

But they just did not. After several years of sports and parties the modern girl still has the kind of complexion men bow to, fascinatingly fresh and smooth.

Because, as she would say, she goes in for taking care of it.

This is one thing the modern girl has proved for women once and for all time. Give it the two indispensable things on which a skin keeps young and smooth, and your skin will be fresh and lovely for years.

The exquisite cleansing. The delicate, yet sure protection—Women who use daily the two entirely different creams which Pond's developed for these two needs of the skin, say that no other method leaves them so free from worry about the weather, or gives them the same wonderful feeling that their complexion is exactly right. No wonder that actually millions of jars of these two creams are used every year by women in the United States alone!—Pond's Cold Cream and Pond's Vanishing Cream.

Try this famous method

Every night. With the finger tips apply Pond's Cold Cream freely. The very fine oil in it is able to penetrate every pore. Let it stay on a minute—now wipe it off with a soft cloth. Do this twice.

The black on the cloth shows you how carefully this cream cleanses. Your skin looks fresh and is beautifully supple.

Read about the method many modern girls use to keep their skin smooth and young

Then in the morning, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream lightly over your whole face. Now if you wish, rouge—powder. How smooth and velvety your face feels to your hand. The appearance of your skin for the whole day will prove to you how wonderful for your skin these two creams are.

Use this method regularly to counteract every day's exposure to dirt and weather. And after any special exposure, a motor or railroad trip, give your skin a special daytime cleansing and freshening. Begin tonight. Get both creams in drug or department stores. The Pond's Extract Company.

To defy these troubles give your skin the two things it must have to be fresh and smooth:

Sunburn, Windburn, Chapping. For the insidious everyday exposure as well as for unusual exposure, keep your skin properly oiled by a nightly cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream. Then always in the morning, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream. It forms a delicate but sure protection.

Premature Wrinkles, Scaling, Peeling, are the troubles of a dry skin. Cleanse with plenty of Pond's Cold Cream nightly and leave some on over night. This will give your skin the oil it needs so badly. Every morning smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream liberally to prevent it from drying out through the day and prevent it from drying out.

Accumulation of dirt and oil in the pores, the condition you need specially careful cleansing for. Pond's Cold Cream is so light it penetrates the pores and draws out excess oil and dirt together. Cleanse thoroughly every night. Then every morning smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream. You can use plenty of it because it is so delicate. It will keep your face fresh right through the day.

Every skin needs these two creams—Pond's Cold Cream for cleansing. Then Pond's Vanishing Cream to protect and hold the powder.

Ruth Roland likes Pond's Cold Cream for the suppleness it gives. "Pond's Vanishing Cream," she says, "prevents any roughness or shine."
